Economic Slump Hasn't Affected Sugar Bowl Ticket Sales Much

By PATTY REUTLER

The recession is having slight effect on Big Red football fans as they make plans to cheer the Nebraska Cornhuskers vs. Florida in the Sugar Bowl.

University of Nebraska ticket manager Jim Pittenger and local travel agencies indicate that it's almost bowl business as usual.

"And that's a good sale," he added.

By Tuesday Pittenger had 13,400 sales on paper, many of which are contingency sales to travel agencies which can return unused tickets until Dec. 16.

"I imagine we'll sell as many as last year," Pittenger guessed, although he said there is not a great rush to purchase the $9 admission pass.

But he suggested a number of factors that must be taken into consideration if one compares Sugar Bowl takers with last year's Cotton Bowl travelers.

New Orleans is farther than Dallas, Pittenger pointed out, adding that the city of mardi gras fame is reputedly more expensive than the Texas town.

However, the ticket manager said he thinks the economy is having a bit of an effect.

"Everything we can get is sold by now under normal circumstances," he explained.

But for World-Wide Travel Service, a $394 per person four-day Sugar Bowl package has already been sold out. "We had it three-quarters full just three days after the Sugar Bowl was announced," said travel consultant Debbie Fountain.

Bookings are coming in in the same numbers as other years, considering the distance traveled, reports Bill Carley, manager of Lincoln Tour and Travel.

Carley said presently allotted air space out of Omaha is full, but his agency is attempting to get more. Four departures by motor-coach are full and bookings for a fifth are still in progress, he said.

"I think we're going to end up with as many people going to the Sugar Bowl as went to the Cotton Bowl," Carley guessed. He noted that his agency has booked more hotel rooms in New Orleans than it did in Dallas last year.

But Carley suggested that maybe fewer people overall are going to the bowl game, but that more are requiring public transportation because the driving distance is so great.

Congress Overrides Ford Veto

Economy Slowing... Withholding Slide Seen

The State Department of Revenue reported Tuesday it has found the first signs that Nebraska's economy is slowing down.

Gary Chunka, assistant state tax commissioner, said income tax withholdings for September, 1974, declined by $1 million from the September, 1973, total of $10 million.

Chunka said that represents a 7.4% drop in receipts or $9 million in revenue.

However, he said September, 1974, realized 9.5% real growth in income tax revenue when adjustments are made for the variation in tax rates between the two years.

The state income tax brought proportionately more in September, 1973, when the tax rate was 13% than it did in September, 1974, when the rate was 11%.

Officials Concerned

Chunka said the latest data have caused concern among Revenue Department officials who now fear the state may not realize the 18½% growth in income tax revenue it had projected for fiscal 1975.

For the first quarter of fiscal 1975 (July, August and September) Chunka said income tax revenue grew by 16.5% — well below the 18.5% maximum projected.

"And we were seeing this in what was one of the better quarters for fiscal 1975," Chunka said. "We're concerned now about being able to meet the 18.5%."

Usually Underestimated

Traditionally, the State Department of Revenue has underestimated receipts to be on the safe side. The Republican majority on the State Board of Equalization was mindful of this on Nov. 15 when they cut the state income tax from 11% to 10% for calendar 1975.

Chunka said the department recognized its projections for 18.5% growth in income tax revenue and 13.5% growth in sales tax revenue for fiscal 1975 might be overly optimistic when the board met. At that time, he cautioned the board.

Even then he said the department found the state economy weakening day by day.

May Become Worse

For the months of October and November, Chunka said income tax revenues may suffer even more, because that is when industries began laying off employes.

"Our men are working now to see where this will settle," he said.

He noted that September is normally a big month for income tax collections because quarterly filings are made then.

At that Nov. 15 meeting, State Tax Commissioner William E. Peters reported that sales tax revenue for the month of September grew by 7.5% — the lowest growth rate for the past 15 months.

Wheels Fall Off School Bus . . . After Kids Delivered

The rear wheels fell off a Lincoln Public School bus Tuesday morning as a mechanic was driving it back to the garage to be checked. According to Robert Goldhorn, a Lincoln Public Schools service man who was the only passenger in the bus, the "rear end just popped out" when driver Robert Varga applied the brakes as the bus was traveling north on 27th and approaching Van Dorn. Vernon Clark, foreman of transportation for the public schools, said that bus driver Mariata Greenwald summoned mechanics after dropping off a load of school children at Calvert School. "She knew something was wrong. It didn't handle right," Clark said. "It was very observant on her part." The 1968 bus has a Blue Bird body on a Chevrolet chassis. GI Benefits Will Increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress overrode by solid margins Tuesday President Ford's veto of a 22.7 per cent increase in most GI education benefits for seven-million Vietnam-era and four-million post-Korea veterans.

The House voted first 394 to 10. The Senate then voted 90 to 1, with only Assistant Republican Leader Robert P. Griffin of Michigan supporting the veto. Both margins were far over the required two-thirds majority to make the bill a law.

It was the fourth time Congress has overriden a veto by Ford since he became President.

However, in another vote Tuesday, the House failed to override Ford's veto of the disaster relief bill. It was the fourth time his veto has been upheld of 15 bills he has vetoed. Congress did not contest seven of the vetoes.

And a Twentieth Century Fund task force recommended that veterans benefits be eliminated for peacetime veterans. The fund proposed that an individual fund be created for each eligible veteran so he could draw on it as needed rather than be tied to the limits of a monthly check.

The higher veterans payments are retroactive to September and Veterans Administration officials said the back payments probably would be in the hands of the veterans now in school in about 15 days. The first regular check with the increase will go out Jan. 1, they said.

Ford vetoed the bill, saying it was inflationary and suggesting an 18.2 per cent raise. He also objected to a new $600-a-year loan program for veterans and an increase in entitlment for undergraduate study from 36 months to 45 months.

In House debate, Chairman William Jennings Bryan Dorn, D-S.C., of the House Veterans Affairs Committee, said "I find it hard to believe an $800 million education and training bill for veterans is inflationary while a $1.252 billion military assistance request for Vietnam is not.

Ford had said $500 million should be cut from the first-year cost of $814 million.

The bill increases monthly payments for fulltime institutional training from $220 to $270 for a single veteran, from $261 to $321 for a veteran with one dependent and from $298 to $336 with two dependents. The rate for each dependent over two is raised from $18 to $22.

The loan program will be established in the Treasury as a revolving fund to be administered by the VA. The loans will be available to veterans who can't get help from other federal programs.

The bill allows Reservists and National Guardsmen to get credit for education benefits for their six months initial active duty for training if they later serve on active duty for 12 months or more.

Ford had objected the increasing the entitlement to 45 months, saying 36 months is sufficient for a veteran to complete his undergraduate study in four years.

The President objected that the loan program was not as efficient as other federal loan programs available to veterans.

"A lot of people have said, 'Why didn't you tell us. We would have helped," Mrs. Rockenbach said.

Sitting at the table in her father-in-law's kitchen, nervously pushing an ash tray back and forth, the 33-year-old woman talked about the events leading to the Saturday night fire that claimed the lives of two of her sons.

"I guess I've got some pride," she said, "I've always hated to be classed as one of the ADC mothers (those receiving Aid to Dependent Children).

"But that's the only way I have for me and my children to live."

Gas Fumes Ignited

She spilled some of the white gas. When she lit the stove the fumes ignited. Joseph, 10, and James, 9, who were asleep at the time, died in the fire. A daughter, Debbie, escaped.

Mrs. Rockenbach was using a camp stove because she wanted to wait until December to buy about $14 worth of propane to use her stove. (The home was heated with fuel oil.)

She had waited about a month and a half, she said, so the bill could be used as a deduction when she went to get food stamps in December.

Since she had returned to work in November, she knew her food stamps would cost $104 in December, up from $47 the month before. Using the propane bill as a deduction in December, she felt, would help save a little money for Christmas presents.

Only the day before she had learned she was mistaken. A welfare case worker told her her November propane bill could have been used in the December food stamp computations.

Situation Worsened

The family's situation had become desperate early last summer, when Mrs. Rockenbach fell from the roof of her home while helping cut down a tree that "the city said had to come out."

Mrs. Rockenbach broke disks in her back and spent a month in the hospital. When she got out she was bed ridden for a time. Later in her recovery she babysat before returning to her job as a baker for Able Hall on the University of Nebraska-Lincoln campus.

The plumbing in the family's home had been in serious shape for about a year. Rusty water dribbled from the tap when the water was turned on.

"We had to take baths at relatives and friends, anywhere," she said. The bill to fix the plumbing was estimated at $1,700.

Welfare officials said they couldn't help, Mrs. Rockenbach said, because of the way she was buying the home, on a private contract.

"My brother, who is from Atlanta, and is the vice president of a textile company, said if he had known how I was living he would have sent me money any time.

'It's Embarrassing'

"But it's embarrassing to have to ask your relatives for money," she said.

"Every time I had enough to get the plumbing fixed they (welfare officials) would cut me back," she said. "A lot of people on welfare are in the same predicament."

Mrs. Rockenbach was quick to note that "When I really need it, when I was in the hospital, they (welfare officials) really came through. Forty-seven dollars for a month of groceries is really great.

And now she says, people have been "terrific". People have donated cash and food. The Seventh Day Adventist Good Neighbor House had provided Mrs. Rockenbach and her daughter with a furnished apartment.

Public officials indicate they can help families in situations like that of Rockenbach family before the fire.

"But we have to know about it first," said Housing Administrator Carl Kopines.

"If I had known it was my pride or my boys I would have forgot my pride," said Mrs. Rockenbach.

Mills Enters Bethesda Naval Hospital

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., was admitted to Bethesda Naval Hospital Tuesday afternoon, moments after he begged off handling a legislative matter by saying "I just can't do it."

Mills' hospitalization came as House Democrats limited the power once wielded by the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee and reports surfaced that efforts might be made to strip him of his chairmanship.

Bethesda authorities would not comment on the cause of Mills' apparent ailment.

Rep. Joe D. Waggonner, D-La., a member of the Ways and Means Committee, said he spoke to Mills as the chairman was preparing to handle on the House floor a motion to override a veto on a bill from the committee.

"He said 'I just can't do it,'" Waggonner said.

Mills' office aides had said they had not been in touch with Mills since Monday and did not know his whereabouts. However, he was in the Capitol for several hours Tuesday.

Dr. Guy F. Sciacca, a Boston physician, reported giving Mills a vitamin shot and some multiple vitamin tablets after examining the congressman Friday afternoon in Boston. Sciacca said Mills suffered from exhaustion. "I told him he ought to take it easy," the physician said.

Meanwhile, stripper Fanne Fox, saying she was "mentally upset" closed her show in New York. Mills, described as a close friend, had been in Boston last weekend to see her show there.

The hospitalization came amid moves by the Democratic caucus to limit the broad power Mills has exercised for years as chairman of Ways and Means.

Mills also has come under renewed criticism because of his friendship with stripper Annabel Battistella, with whom he appeared briefly on stage last weekend in Boston.

At a news conference before the hospital announcement, House Speaker Carl Albert said he thought Mills was in bad health and "it has had an impact on his whole system."

Albert told reporters: "I don't think Wilbur Mills has fully recovered . . . He's been sick a lot."

Mills underwent an operation last year for a back ailment, but previously said that he had fully recovered from that trouble.

In an interview Monday, the congressman denied reports that he had experienced a heart attack, but said he has suffered for years from a chronic heart irregularity.

Without specifying any particular illness, Albert said at the news conference: "I think it has had an impact on his whole system . . . I am not talking about anything else, just his physical condition."

Rep. Charles A. Vanik, D-Ohio, a member of the Ways and Means Committee, said he did not think Mills could continue as the Ways and Means chairman, and that if he lost it he would probably resign from Congress.

"I don't think the steering committee would clear him," Vanik said, "and I don't think Wilbur Mills would expose himself to divisive debate. I think he has too much regard for the institution."

"I don't see him deprived of his chairmanship and remaining in Congress," Vanik added.

If Mills were not named chairman in the new Congress, Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., would be next in line for the post. However, all committee chairmen are subject to confirmation by the Democratic caucus.

Ullman is now chairman of the new Budget Committee, but it was understood he would relinquish this post in favor of the Ways and Means chairmanship if he were offered it.

State's Delegation Votes To Override

Washington (AP) — Congress Tuesday dealt President Ford his third consecutive defeat, overriding his veto of a bill to increase most veterans' educational benefits, and Nebraska's all-Republican delegation to Capitol Hill was unanimous in opposing the President's action.

In the House, the vote was 394-10 to override. Reps. Charles Thone, John McCollister and Dave Martin voting with the majority.

In the Senate, the vote was 90-1. Sens. Roman Hruska and Carl Curtis again voting with the majority.

Ford claimed the bill to be contrary to the goals of his Whip Inflation Now program, but Martin summed up the Nebraska delegation feelings simply, saying, "Voting against veterans is like voting against motherhood and the flag."

Soviets Adjust Orbit

MOSCOW (AP) — Two Soviet cosmonauts completed their second working day in space Tuesday night by flying their Soyuz 16 craft into an orbit to be used for the Soviet-American linkup next year.

The Soyuz 16 was launched Monday to test a new docking device and rehearse procedures for the Soyuz-Apollo flight in seven months.

A progress report on the flight said the spaceship had completed 20 orbits, all was going according to plan and the cosmonauts felt fine. A television broadcast showed them reclining in their seats and explaining some features of the cabin.

State's Delegation Votes To Override

Washington (AP) — Congress Tuesday dealt President Ford his third consecutive defeat, overriding his veto of a bill to increase most veterans' educational benefits, and Nebraska's all-Republican delegation to Capitol Hill was unanimous in opposing the President's action.

In the House, the vote was 394-10 to override, Reps. Charles Thone, John McCollister and Dave Martin voting with the majority.

In the Senate, the vote was 90-1, Sens. Roman Hruska and Carl Curtis again voting with the majority.

Ford claimed the bill to be contrary to the goals of his Whip Inflation Now program, but Martin summed up the Nebraska delegation feelings simply, saying, "Voting against veterans is like voting against motherhood and the flag."

Soviets Adjust Orbit

MOSCOW (AP) — Two Soviet cosmonauts completed their second working day in space Tuesday night by flying their Soyuz 16 craft into an orbit to be used for the Soviet-American linkup next year.

The Soyuz 16 was launched Monday to test a new docking device and rehearse procedures for the Soyuz-Apollo flight in seven months.

A progress report on the flight said the spaceship had completed 20 orbits, all was going according to plan and the cosmonauts felt fine. A television broadcast showed them reclining in their seats and explaining some features of the cabin.

Haldeman: No Intention To Cut Off Investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) — H. R. Haldeman denied under bitter cross examination Tuesday that he ever intended to misuse the Central Intelligence Agency to cut short the initial FBI investigation into Watergate.

Spending his third day on the witness stand at the Watergate cover-up trial, Haldeman said he had no memory of any plan to prevent the FBI from uncovering links from the White House and the 1972 Nixon re-election committee to the original Watergate break-in.

Before Haldeman resumed the stand, U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica disclosed he is considering taking the testimony of Richard M. Nixon by submitting written questions to the former President.

The judge asked three court-appointed doctors who have examined Nixon to recommend whether he is healthy enough to provide written answers to questions submitted by both prosecution and defense lawyers.

John D. Ehrlichman's lawyer has asked Sirica to delay the trial so that Nixon might testify under oath in California beginning Jan. 6, the earliest date the doctors said the former President might be healthy enough to testify.

Haldeman's lawyer, John J. Wilson, said Tuesday he will join in the request to Sirica that Nixon's testimony be taken by deposition after the first of the year.

Among a series of contentious exchanges between Haldeman and assistant special prosecutor Richard Ben-Veniste, the prosecutor asked:

"Isn't it a fact that you called in America's foremost and highest level man responsible for the intelligence gathering function for the national security of the United States and . . . your instructions were to have the FBI curtailed on the ground that it was politically embarrassing for the investigation to be continued?"

Haldeman replied, "That was my understanding . . ."

Referring to a June 23, 1972, meeting with two top CIA officials Ben-Veniste asked, "Isn't it a fact, Mr. Haldeman, that you did something you had no right under the law to do and that is to misuse your position in the government . . . in a way to defraud the CIA and the FBI, to defraud the government of the United States for reasons which you knew were not to be in the national interest?"

The former White House chief of staff answered loudly and with no hesitation, "I had no intention of exceeding the responsibilities of my job. I had no intention of defrauding and misusing the CIA or the FBI.

"I had no intention of obstructing the investigation . . . no intention to do anything improper."

For more than two hours, Ben-Veniste led Haldeman through the transcript of the June 23, 1972, tape on which Nixon is heard agreeing with Haldeman that the CIA leaders should tell FBI officials that assets belonging to the intelligence agency in Mexico could be jeopardized by the early investigation into how the break-in was financed.

During his testimony, the 48-year-old Haldeman began answers to more than two dozen questions by saying, "I don't recall . . ."

At one point Haldeman questioned an interpretation of the June 23 tape, Ben-Veniste said sharply, "Well, it's (the tape) a lot better than your recollection."

With the June 23, 1972, transcript in hand, Ben-Veniste pressed Haldeman repeatedly on his previous grand jury and congressional testimony given before the tape was made public.

In almost all those apperances, Haldeman testified that he had no memory of his own order to deputy CIA director Gen. Vernon A. Walters to tell the FBI that it was treading on dangerous ground in its investigation.

On the tape, Nixon agrees with Haldeman that Walters and former CIA director Richard Helms should be called in and advised of their role in short-circuiting the FBI investigation.

Despite repeated references to the break-in at Democratic National Committee headquarters on the tape, Haldeman insisted that his and the President's concern was one of potential political embarrassment about Nixon campaign contributors and not the fear that campaign committee or White House aides were criminally involved.

Tapes Deal Nullified By House Measure

Washington (UPI) — The House passed by voice vote Tuesday a measure which would nullify an agreement former President Richard M. Nixon made with a government agency giving him possession of his tapes.

The measure will be sent to the Senate to adjust minor differences before it goes to the White House.

The U.S. District Court already had issued a temporary restraining order barring any movement of the tapes provided in the Sept. 7 agreement signed by Nixon and the General Services Administration.

Judge Charles R. Richey, who issued the order last month, has said he would welcome congressional action in the case. The bill, if if it is signed into law by President Ford, would give Richey a reference in law for his final ruling.

The bill, however, makes no mention of the ownership of the 42 million records and documents of Nixon's administration, including his clandestine tape recordings, which he could destroy after five years. Richey will still have to resolve that question.

Nixon had brought suit in court to enforce the terms of his GSA agreement but it became bogged down in countersuits and interventions by various groups. Part of the agreement states, "The tapes shall be destroyed at the time of (Nixon's) death or on Sept. 1, 1984, whichever event shall first occur."

That portion of the agreement spurred Congress, which became more concerned about the status of the tapes after Nixon entered the hospital for surgery.

The measure given final congressional approval Tuesday would provide that the GSA retain custody of all tapes, papers and other materials which might be historically significant to Nixon's presidency.

It would bar destruction of any of the material unless provided by law and would be available for use in judicial proceedings, with priority to the Special Prosecutor's Office. Ford agreed with Prosecutor Henry Ruth last month to give him acess to the tapes for use in the Watergate cover-up trial and the tapes Ruth wanted have been played in open court.

Other provisions of the measure would establish a commission to study the problem of preservation of the records of elected and appointed federal officials.

Professor Will Sue To Get At FBI Files

Washington (UPI) — A Smith College history professor said Tuesday he plans to sue the Government to obtain thousands of confidential FBI files about Alger Hiss, Whittaker Chambers and Julius and Ethel Rosenberg.

At issue is whether private citizens can gain access to records under the amended Freedom of Information Act passed by Congress over President Ford's veto last month.

Prof. Allen Weinstein, doing research for a series of books dealing with the impact of the Cold War on American society, says he is entitled to the material under the act's provisions. Weinstein charges that the FBI has unconstitutionally withheld the document despite his repeated requests over the past five years.

The professor also charges that other unidentified writers, considered sympathetic to the FBI has gained access to the records he needs.

The suit, to be filed Wednesday in federal court here, seeks an order requiring the government to release thousands of documents regarding the celebrated cases. Hiss was accused in 1950 of passing 200 secret state documents in 1938 to Chambers, an editor of Time, and later convicted of perjury.

The Rosenbergs were executed in 1953 following their conviction for giving atomic secrets to the Soviets

Defendants in the suit are atty. Gen. William B. Saxbe, FBI Director Clarence Kelley and three agents.

Weinstein's attorney, John Shattuck, said Tuesday his client has received only 112 pages of some 53,000 documents pertaining to the Hiss prosecution, and nothing from the 25,000-page file about the Rosenbergs.

The FBI says that releasing the documents Weinstein seeks will show how they investigated the cases and will invade the privacy of the persons involved. But Shattuck said the cases ended 25 years ago, and the individuals publicly testified at trial.

Maddox Eatery Integrated

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Lester Maddox, who spawned a political career when he chased blacks from his cafeteria 10 years ago, returned to the restaurant business Tuesday when he opened a new integrated eatery.

This time customers of all races were welcomed at The Pickrick in Underground Atlanta, a tourist attraction near the state Capitol, where Maddox served four years as governor and four as lieutenant governor.

But Maddox said as he sliced apple pie just before opening the cafeteria doors: "I'm still a segregationist.

"I might just set up a special room for segregationists and another room for those that want integration," he quipped.

Maddox, 59, fought the public accommodations section of the 1964 Civil Rights Act by using pickhandles to chase blacks and civil rights demonstrators from his old Pickrick. He closed the restaurant that year rather than admit blacks.

Two years later, he was elected governor of Georgia. He was elected lieutenant governor in 1970, but this year lost a bid for a second gubernatorial term.

"If I had it to do over again, I believe I'd push even harder," Maddox said of his stand against the federal law which forbids owners of public places to refuse admittance on racial grounds. "What we lost was the right of a man to his private property, and that's a great loss for black and white people alike."

Maddox manned the cash register and his wife, Virginia, helped serve the cafeteria-style lunch that included fried chicken, sausage with red-eye gravy, okra, apple pie and iced tea. No alcoholic beverages are served.

There were about 30 customers on hand for opening. One was black, a young woman who declined to give her name.

"As far as I'm concerned, this is just another restaurant," she said. "Race hasn't got a thing to do with it. I'm here because this is the closest place to my office for me to eat."

Pioneer On Way Towards Saturn

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (AP) — Pioneer 11 slowed Tuesday and cruised on a five-year voyage toward man's first rendezvous with Saturn, leaving scientists to celebrate and ponder its dash through Jupiter's searing radiation.

The space traveler, all its systems operating normally, telescoped to scientists the receding picture of Jupiter's dark and unknown north pole as it hurtled through space at 35,000 miles an hour on a two-billion-mile trek to Saturn.

Only hours earlier, Jupiter spewed deadly electrons and protons at the spacecraft and pelted it with tiny meteoroids as it flashed to within 26,600 miles of the Jupiter.

The 570-pound spacecraft then raced up its face at 107,000 miles an hour, climaxing a 620 million-mile, 21-month journey.

"If you do it fast enough, you can put your finger through a blowtorch," said Dr. John Wolfe, project scientist at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Ames Research Center.

"That's what Pioneer 11 did. It went through a blowtorch.

"If the power holds up, I have no doubt that we will be alive and working at Saturn in September 1979," said Wolfe.

Wolfe said Pioneer 11 received less total radiation than its predecessor, Pioneer 10, but Pioneer 11 received a heavier bombardment in a shorter period of time when it plunged three times deeper into Jupiter's radiation belt.

"We got over a hurdle," Wolfe declared. "The important thing is that Pioneer 11 showed that we have the present technology to build orbiters that can survive in that kind of radiation."

Dr. Donald H. Humes, a NASA scientist, disclosed the spacecraft was hit five times by tiny meteoroids. He said his instruments showed that the meteoroids were not in orbit as had been believed.

Munch reported that his infrared telescope showed a temperature at the poles to be slightly cooler than the middle regions of Jupiter. He said the temperature at the poles decreases with an increase in altitude.

The risky plunge failed to confirm a theory about the source of Jupiter's noise radio signals. Scientists believed the source to be an electrical current of hundreds of thousands of volts running between Jupiter and its nearest moon, Io. Pioneer 11 failed to detect the current.

James C. Fletcher, NASA's administrator, said he had rechristened the spacecraft "Pioneer-Saturn," emphasizing the spacecraft's next destination.

Scientists at NASA's Ames Research Center here put the spacecraft on a course that would use Jupiter's gravitational strength to sling it on the last leg of a three-billion-mile journey to Saturn from earth.

Haldeman: No Intention To Cut Off Investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) — H. R. Haldeman denied under bitter cross examination Tuesday that he ever intended to misuse the Central Intelligence Agency to cut short the initial FBI investigation into Watergate.

Spending his third day on the witness stand at the Watergate cover-up trial, Haldeman said he had no memory of any plan to prevent the FBI from uncovering links from the White House and the 1972 Nixon reelection committee to the original Watergate break-in.

The space traveler, all its systems operating normally, telescoped to scientists the receding picture of Jupiter's dark and unknown north pole as it hurtled through space at 35,000 miles an hour on a two-billion-mile trek to Saturn.

Only hours earlier, Jupiter spewed deadly electrons and protons at the spacecraft and pelted it with tiny meteoroids as it flashed to within 26,600 miles of the Jupiter.

The 570-pound spacecraft then raced up its face at 107,000 miles an hour, climaxing a 620 million-mile, 21-month journey.

"If you do it fast enough, you can put your finger through a blowtorch," said Dr. John Wolfe, project scientist at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Ames Research Center.

"That's what Pioneer 11 did. It went through a blowtorch.

"If the power holds up, I have no doubt that we will be alive and working at Saturn in September 1979," said Wolfe.

Wolfe said Pioneer 11 received less total radiation than its predecessor, Pioneer 10, but Pioneer 11 received a heavier bombardment in a shorter period of time when it plunged three times deeper into Jupiter's radiation belt.

"We got over a hurdle," Wolfe declared. "The important thing is that Pioneer 11 showed that we have the present technology to build orbiters that can survive in that kind of radiation."

Dr. Donald H. Humes, a NASA scientist, disclosed the spacecraft was hit five times by tiny meteoroids. He said his instruments showed that the meteoroids were not in orbit as had been believed.

Munch reported that his infrared telescope showed a temperature at the poles to be slightly cooler than the middle regions of Jupiter. He said the temperature at the poles decreases with an increase in altitude.

The risky plunge failed to confirm a theory about the source of Jupiter's noise radio signals. Scientists believed the source to be an electrical current of hundreds of thousands of volts running between Jupiter and its nearest moon, Io. Pioneer 11 failed to detect the current.

James C. Fletcher, NASA's administrator, said he had rechristened the spacecraft "Pioneer-Saturn," emphasizing the spacecraft's next destination.

Scientists at NASA's Ames Research Center here put the spacecraft on a course that would use Jupiter's gravitational strength to sling it on the last leg of a three-billion-mile journey to Saturn from earth.

Rockefellers Hold $1 Billion In Assets

Washington (UPI) — The worldwide empire of the Rockefeller family holds assets worth well over $1 billion, the family financial adviser disclosed Tuesday.

Revealing long-kept financial secrets of one of the world's richest families, J. Richardson Dilworth, who manages the empire, told the House Judiciary Committee the Rockefeller assets total $1,033,988,000.

All Not Included

He added that the figure largely represents stock holdings and does not include family estates, other personal real estate holdings, art collections and jewelry which some say could easily add another $200 million.

But Dilworth said the huge economic holdings present no conflict of interest for Nelson A. Rockefeller as vice president because "he's not involved in those things. He seldom consults with us."

The nominee already has revealed that he and his immediate family have assets totaling $265 million, most of it in trust.

Dilworth testified as the House committee continued hearings on the Rockefeller nomination, already approved by the Senate Rules Committee.

The largest part of the holdings of the 84 members of the Rockefeller family — $738 million — are in trusts set up by John D. Rocekefeller Jr. for his daughter and five sons, including Nelson, and other descendents.

Originally, the money was all in oil stock, Dilworth said, citing the historic basis for the empire built by John D. Rockefeller Sr. Now it is "more diverstified," with about $325 million invested in oil, the remainder in a large variety of blue chips such as IBM, Kodak, GE, 3M, Xerox and Alcoa.

Dilworth said there has also been a family pattern of giving away large portions of Rockefeller wealth to charity. John D. Sr. gave away $550 million, John D. Jr., $553 million, and the now-living members of the family have given away $235 million so far.

Dilworth said he gained the unanimous consent of family members to reveal their group financial holdings.

"Some felt it was a terrible invasion of privacy," he said. "Others figure it had gotten started and it couldn't be stopped."

No Breakdown

He said he would not provide a breakdown of the holdings of individual family members because "it would be an invasion of their privacy."

Dilworth, nephew and namesake of the former Philadelphia mayor, insisted the goal of the Rockefeller family was to make money on investments and not to hold economic control over large sections of the nation's economy.

"It should be stressed that both the family and members and their investment advisers are totally uninterested in controlling anything," he said. "The family members are simply investors. The aim and hope of the advisers is over time to achieve a reasonable total return for our clients."

GOP Performance Stressed By Bond

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Republican governors wound up their post-election conference Tuesday with their new chairman saying that performance rather than "some cosmetic approach" is the key to future GOP success.

Gov. Christopher S. Bond of Missouri also warned that "Watergate will not be put behind us as a party until we take the lead everywhere" on political issues ranging from election reform to protection of individual rights.

Bond spoke after some 14 GOP governors and governors-elect sat through a two-hour economic discussion at which presidential adviser L. William Seidman said that President Ford will make additional proposals if the current outlook changes.

The session passed a resolution urging quick congressional confirmation of Nelson A. Rockefeller's vice presidential nomination. Only conservative Gov. Meldrim Thomson of New Hampshire dissented.

Bond, who will chair the Republican Governors Association (RGA) for 1975, addressed himself to the conference's principal concern: how to rebuild the GOP after heavy election losses last month.

"We will not attract people to our party or win elections by reminding them of our glorious past or our great historic leaders," the Missouri governor said. "We will attract them, as many of you repeated yesterday, by our performance."

Although he joined the other GOP governors in a resolution praising Republican National Chairman Mary Louise Smith's efforts to rebuild the party, Bond criticized her reported plans for an extensive advertising campaign to sell the Republican party.

"I do not believe that the answer to our party's problems lies in some cosmetic approach whose focal point is an expensive advertising campaign to sell people on how great we are," he said.

Asked later about his criticism, Bond said Mrs. Smith assured him Monday night that the advertising firm hired by the Republican National Committee was mainly concerned with polling Republicans to "find out where there are problems."

Bond, who was unanimously elected to succeed Gov. Winfield Dunn of Tennessee as chairman, declared: "I ... continue to believe that the key to electoral success at every level lies very simply in succeeding to meet people's basic needs."

'Fasten Your Seat Belt'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Transportation established a new automobile safety belt reminder system Tuesday to replace the interlock system banned by Congress.

The new system consists of a visual "Fasten Seat Belt" signal that will operate during the four to eight-second period after the car's ignition is turned on and an audible signal that will operate during the same period if the driver's safety belt is not in use.

The department's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration said automakers can install the new system immediately on new cars or can continue to use the interlock system until Feb. 24, 1975. All new cars manufactured after that date must have the new system installed instead of the interlock system.

Congress banned the interlock system, which required the front seat passengers to buckle their seat belts before the car could be started, in October after numerous car owners complained about the requirement.

Lincoln's New Air Terminal

When transplanted Lincolnites fly home for the holidays they may think they are in another city as they deplane for the first time at Lincoln's new Municipal Airport terminal building, which opens for business today.

The modern, beautiful and spacious structure with weathering steel, glass and brick exterior is a striking contrast to the old terminal building and it is symbolic of Lincoln's entrance into a new air transportation age.

What at one time appeared to be a gamble on the part of the Lincoln Airport Authority in deciding to go ahead with a new terminal has been justified by figures which show air travel growth in Lincoln at present to be far greater than the national average of other airports. Hopefully that trend will continue and Lincoln will obtain the new service and even better connections it has been fighting for.

The total project cost, including terminal building and furnishings, exterior lighting, landscaping, expanded parking and part of the access road cost, amounts to almost $5 million. Helping to pay off the bond issue for this ambitious project will be a "pay-as-you-go" parking plan such as is found at airports in other cities. The revenue from parking — the initial phase of the parking expansion will accomodate some 1,000 cars — is one of the sources the authority counted on to make the new terminal a reality. Lincolnites might not relish the thought of paying for parking at the airport, but that is the price of progress and when air travelers see the new terminal and become aware of the service and protection offered their cars under the new parking arrangement, the cost will be less painful to bear.

The new double-deck terminal, with upper level passenger loading and lower level baggage retrieval, has been built for expansion. Additional passenger loading bridges can be installed at either end of the new building and working space for additional air carriers, should that happy circumstance occur, can be made available. If the long-term future brings with it an especially heavy volume of air passenger traffic, a mirror-image facility could be built opposite the present new structure and the two could be connected with an overhead walkway.

Formal dedication of the new Lincoln airport terminal will be delayed until the completion of the connecting roads from the Interstate and Cornhusker Highway. That should be sometime in late spring. It is hoped that the widening of West Cornhusker between I-180 and the present construction work will not lag too far behind. It would be a shame to have to continue to travel a cowpath to a first class airport.

The people of Lincoln have an airport they can really be proud of and when the access problems are solved not much more could be asked for.

The Star along with other Lincolnites salutes the Lincoln Airport Authority, its director and employes and all others in the city who have worked so hard to help meet the community's air transportation needs.

Signal Woes At 9th And P

We're still not exactly certain why the traffic signal systems at the 9th and P and 10th and P intersections are being worked on. The traffic lights that were up seemed to be adequate. The response to our inquiry told us that new mast arms were installed to conform to others in the downtown area and that new pedestrian signals were installed to conform to federal standards.

Okay, maybe.

Monday there was nothing but a temporary stop sign facing one-way eastbound P St. traffic which would either cross 9th and continue east on P or would turn right onto 9th. The one-way, southbound 9th St. traffic rushed on, unimpeded. No light. No stop sign. No policeman. Nothing.

During the late afternoon rush hour Monday, with heavy equipment parked in the curb lane on the west side of 9th, eastbound P St. drivers were edging out onto 9th, peering around the equipment, trying to get across or turn right. The braver P St. drivers were playing "chicken" with the southbound 9th St. traffic while others were playing varying forms of "dodg'em." Horns honked. Tempers flared.

The city traffic engineering department said that the temporary traffic signal which was in place last week was damaged by an errant driver early Sunday morning. A replacement for a damaged part was due to come in by bus, hopefully by Wednesday, a spokesman said. It is an incredible situation when a city of 165,000 has only one temporary traffic signal to use in emergency situations. Something should be done about it.

When The Star called Tuesday, the Police Department said it was unaware there was a problem at the intersection, but a traffic officer said the department would look into the situation and take appropriate action. We hope a patrolman can direct traffic at the scene, at least during the rush hour, until the signal is back in operation.

As of this writing, nobody to our knowledge has been hurt or killed at the intersection. That is one of the wonders of the age.

Sharp Pruning Shears

Section 1505 of the Federal Criminal Code makes it a felony "corruptly" to "obstruct or impede" any "due and proper" inquiry by a committee of Congress. This parallels Section 1503, the statute used in the cover-up prosecutions, which makes it a crime to obstruct judicial proceedings.

When the transcripts were issued on April 30, the accompanying White House brief described them as Nixon's response to a House Judiciary Committee subpoena for tapes of 42 presidential conversations. The committee's impeachment inquiry was surely a "due and proper" one, and Section 1505 would appear to cover any deliberate tampering with evidence for such an inquiry.

That there was deliberate tampering in this case can hardly be doubted any longer. One notable example is the tape of a conversation Nixon had on April 14, 1973, with H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman. As played at the trial, it included this statement by Nixon about the original Watergate burglars:

"You get them full pardons. That's what they have to have, John."

The special prosecutor's office has made no public comment about all this. But it clearly is interested in the question of who tampered with the transcripts — a question close to its basic interest in the integrity of the legal process.

Tracking down who was responsible for the tricks played on the Judiciary Committee and the country will require hard investigation. For instance, did White House secretaries type complete transcripts that were then pruned? Or did the secretaries work from duplicate tapes that had already had the offending passages removed?

The man who reportedly did most of the listening to tapes for Nixon during the impeachment months was J. Fred Buzhardt, the White House counsel. He also maneuvered with the special prosecutor. For example, when the prosecutor subpoenaed the tape of a January, 1973, conversation between Nixon and Charles Colson about clemency for the burglars, Buzhardt said there was no such conversation. In fact there was, and the devastating tape has now been played at the trial.

Others known to have heard the tapes in the White House are Rosemary Woods and Gen. Alexander M. Haig, Jr. Any search for those who knew that relevant passages were omitted from the published transcripts would evidently require putting questions to these two as well as Buzhardt.

The bar has responsibilities in this matter, too. In addition to Buzhardt, what has come out at the cover-up trial raises serious questions of legal ethics in the case of James St. Clair, Nixon's impeachment counsel.

St. Clair repeatedly assured the impeachment inquiry and the country that they had the "full and complete story," that the transcripts did "tell it all." Yet soon after April 30, the Judiciary Committee discovered critical omissions. One was of a long passage in which Nixon said: "I want you all to stonewall it . . . cover-up or anything else . . ."

When those discrepancies appeared, in May and June, St. Clair went right on resisting subpoenas for original tapes. So far as we know, he did not then hear the tapes himself or even demand an explanation of the omissions from his master.

Oil Plans In Debate

NEW YORK — United States strategy for dealing with the international oil crisis continues to unfold, layer by layer. Last week's major development was the disclosure by Secretary of State Kissinger of American plans to negotiate a new $25 billion special oil fund for relending petrodollars to Western nations in deep balance-of-payments deficit.

Now comes the unveiling of the American plan for narrowing the gap between Western energy needs and dependency on imported oil from producers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

It is basically a high-price, high domestic production strategy.

The new plan was disclosed this week, in a forum at Yale University, by Thomas O. Enders, assistant secretary of state for economic and business affairs. Enders is regarded by insiders as the chief architect of Kissinger's energy policy including the international energy agency, the oil-sharing program for industrial nations, and the $25 billion petrodollar recycling fund.

The rationale for the new United States strategy for closing the energy gap stems from the massive project independence report, released two weeks ago by the Federal Energy Administration.

That report set forth two basic patterns that would result from either (a) acceptance of an $11 price per barrel of crude oil in the world market or (b) early reduction of the world oil price to $7 a barrel.

As the F.E.A. data indicate, the rate of growth of domestic production would be much faster at $11 than $7, and there would be a far greater drag on the growth of oil consumption. By 1985, at the $11 price, according to the F.E.A.'s study, the expanded supply of oil — plus expanded output of coal and nuclear energy — could eliminate the need for imported oil.

But at the $7 price per barrel of oil, the gap could widen to about 13 million barrels a day, or more than half of all the United States' petroleum needs. The American dependency — and probably foreign dependency as well — on OPEC oil would increase rather than narrow, according to the F.E.A. projections.

The startling news broken by Enders at Yale — startling against the background of repeated declarations of high American officials that OPEC nations must reduce their exorbitantly high prices — is that the United States is now founding its strategy on the $11 price.

This is what, in informal discussion, he called the Catch-22 of the United States position: It is designed to reduce Western dependency on foreign oil and ultimately to break the OPEC oil price, but when the oil price comes down, the United States and its partners will hold up their own oil prices to protect high-cost domestic production.

Thus as the price for foreign oil came down before 1985 — and Enders made clear that he expected it to come down substantially — the United States and its partners would move toward a two-tier cost structure for energy: "One that assures the consuming countries their desired degree of independence; the other balances a constant demand and growing supply for imported oil at prices that diminished, or even reversed, the accumulation of assets by producers," he said.

Does this plan make sense? Is it in accord with the facts and reasonable expectations about the way nations — not only the European nations and Japan but even the United States itself, with Congress and the voters generally exerting their influence on government — can be expected to react to what is clearly an extremely costly, long-term program for stimulating and protecting domestic oil and other energy producers?

J. K. Jamieson, chairman and chief executive officer of the Exxon Corporation, who was on the program with Enders at Yale, found the United States plan "over-optimistic." Jamieson said the F.E.A. had overestimated future oil production in this country as well as reliance on nuclear power and other energy sources.

Prof. James Tobins of Yale, a former member of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, raised questions about the cost of the program and whether it was the most economic way either to protect United States oil supplies or to deal with the problem of the transfer of wealth to the OPEC countries.

Tobin argued that there might be cheaper ways "to buy insurance" — as through increased storage or stand-by production capacity.

The political feasibility of the Kissinger-Enders plan is also questionable. Other nations, such as France, might refuse to go along — and, if the United States and its partners did succeed in driving down the world oil price, the outsiders would have a clear cost advantage in production and competition in world trade — in effect, a free ride resulting from the sacrifices of "anti-OPEC."

Questions can also be raised about the very heavy emphasis on expanding production at high cost and the relatively light stress on conservation. President Ford has thus far backed an essentially "voluntary" program of restraining consumption, refusing proposals even for moderate increases in gasoline taxes.

But the new program could send gasoline taxes far higher — unless, as is possible, the United States still had, in addition to two tiers for world and domestic prices, two or more additional tiers for "old" and "new" oil produced in the United States, as now.

Jamieson estimated thus, at an average price of $11 a barrel for crude oil, the price of a gallon of gasoline in the United States would be 88 cents — far higher than the price at the pump that would result from even a 20-cent rise in the gasoline tax.

In response to criticism that the administration had understressed conservation and in fact had no real conservation plan, Enders disclosed that a new daily and weekly monitoring program would begin by which the F.E.A. would measure the shortfall, if any, between oil consumption and a target for restrained fuel consumption.

If the United States did fall behind the President's goal of a reduction of 1 million barrels a day in consumption, he might propose a stiffer plan for cutting consumption.

Behind the United States position on energy, as developed by Enders, is the belief that the only way the United States can get a handle on the crisis is via its international dangers — and that is also the only way Americans can be brought to see the urgency of the crisis.

The steady and vastly mounting flow of arms to the Middle East, from France, the United States and others, to pay for oil imports, is one dimension of the problem to which Enders did not address himself. But that may be the most critical dimension of all.

And the most paradoxical aspect is that the United States in fighting to bring down the OPEC price, means to keep its own price high.

What power and pressure can be placed upon a politician in this country by an organized group who are united and of one mind.

I believe the one obstacle to state schools and finally a state religion in this country is the U.S. Supreme Court. These nine justices are appointed for life and, unlike many politicians, have no need to be expedient. They may make decisions without fear of being replaced by the president or Congress. Power and pressure have no affect upon the high court of this land.

Also, we can be thankful for a free press which allows a free flow of thought to penetrate the closed minds of those who may be hearing only what their leaders want them to hear, whether it be politics or religion.

Resents Label 'Savage'

Lincoln, Neb.

We're writing to express our disapproval and utter disgust of The Star's characterization of our people as "savage" (Nov. 29). We find the information to be not only misleading but inaccurate and self-contradictory.

It is inaccurate and misleading to write about "the ignominous execution of an old, old man" (referring to the ex-emperor) but even at this writing, he's reportedly alive and well.

Also in the same article, The Star talks about "a few hundred families (becoming) phenomenally wealthy in a land of abject poverty" mainly at the expense of the starving poor, but then it reverses itself to ask what these poor people can gain by the removal of those same landlords and feudal chiefs who not only oppressed them but are the reasons for their poverty.

This is self-contradictory. Even if The Star disagrees with the actions of the "red-eyed reformist military," it should not label 27 million people as "savage."

If such was the logic, we can think of many names to call the people of the United States after the Watergate scandals, the My Lai massacre and other Vietnam atrocities, and the recently disclosed Chilean involvement by the CIA and the hundreds who died because of it. These acts seem to us a much deeper and wider "sea of blood" than the case in Ethiopia.

Why The Remarks?

Pawnee City, Neb.

So Mr. Butz thought the boorish remark he made about the Pope was "off the record." Why is it now that so many of our so-called Important people are so rude? Is this their way of getting attention?

Remember "King" Devaney's ill-mannered remark about farmers a few years ago? Also, the foul language used by "Tricky-Dicky" on the tapes?

Why do these men, whom we presume are intelligent, have to make uncouth remarks ON or OFF the record? To force someone such as these men to apologize is ridiculous. They would undoubtedly make the same type of remark again without hesitating a bit.

the tumultuous meeting of the Democratic Charter Commission in August. The meeting ended abruptly after a walkout by blacks, women and liberal members left the commission without a quorum.

Surely, one might think, the Democrats would not knowingly schedule a reprise of that performance. But they may well have done so. The purpose of the charter commission's meeting was to lay the groundwork for the party's mid-term convention, to be held in Kansas City Dec. 6-8. Most political observers expect the fur to fly as 2,500 delegates and alternates attempt to put together a permanent party charter and decide whether to mandate future mid-term political gatherings.

Although this will be the Democrats' first off-year convention, the concept is not new. As far back as 1943, a Republican Postwar Advisory Council met at Mackinac Island, Mich., and drew up a charter — in effect, a platform — on domestic and foreign policy. The Mackinac Charter was chiefly noted for its approval of "responsible participation by the United States in postwar cooperative organization among sovereign nations." This declaration represented a sharp break with past GOP isolationism.

Both parties expressed interest in off-year conventions in the early 1950s. In the 1950 congressional election campaign, the Democrats and Republicans each issued restatements of party principles and goals to guide their respective candidates. And the first All-Republican Conference, held in 1962 at former President Eisenhower's farm in Gettysburg, Pa., set itself up as a permanent body to advise GOP officeholders. Little more was heard of the conference, however.

The most nettlesome problem facing the Democrats in Kansas City probably will be that of delegate selection. As the late British historian D. W. Brogan wrote in 1969, the basic defect of the American convention system "is the imperfectly representative character of the assembly." He explained:

"The delegates represent at least as much the wishes of political leaders, pressure groups, city, county and state 'machines' as they represent the wishes of rank-and-file voters who may be expected to vote the party ticket in November. Still less do they represent the views or sentiments of the millions of uncommitted voters who, in recent elections at least, are believed to have been the decisive factor."

The Democrats revamped their selection process in 1972 with a view to increasing the number of young, female, and minority-group delegates to that year's national convention. Although the new rules produced the desired effect, old-line party workers were resentful. Labor leaders and heads of big-city Democratic machines complained of being treated shabbily.

Organized labor and party regulars attempted to reinstitute "unit voting," whereby all of a state's votes are cast for a single candidate, at the charter commission meeting in August. It was this that prompted the walkout by blacks, women and liberals. In effect, the issue was left for the mid-term convention to decide. Given the inherently fractious nature of the Democratic Party, a calm and reasoned resolution of the conflict is not to be expected.

Lincoln's New Air Terminal

When transplanted Lincolnites fly home for the holidays they may think they are in another city as they deplane for the first time at Lincoln's new Municipal Airport terminal building, which opens for business today.

The modern, beautiful and spacious structure with weathering steel, glass and brick exterior is a striking contrast to the old terminal building and it is symbolic of Lincoln's entrance into a new air transportation age.

What at one time appeared to be a gamble on the part of the Lincoln Airport Authority in deciding to go ahead with a new terminal has been justified by figures which show air travel growth in Lincoln at present to be far greater than the national average of other airports. Hopefully that trend will continue and Lincoln will obtain the new service and even better connections it has been fighting for.

The total project cost, including terminal building and furnishings, exterior lighting, landscaping, expanded parking and part of the access road cost, amounts to almost $5 million. Helping to pay off the bond issue for this ambitious project will be a "pay-as-you-go" parking plan such as is found at airports in other cities. The revenue from parking — the initial phase of the parking expansion will accomodate some 1,000 cars — is one of the sources the authority counted on to make the new terminal a reality. Lincolnites might not relish the thought of paying for parking at the airport, but that is the price of progress and when air travelers see the new terminal and become aware of the service and protection offered their cars under the new parking arrangement, the cost will be less painful to bear.

The new double-deck terminal, with upper level passenger loading and lower level baggage retrieval, has been built for expansion. Additional passenger loading bridges can be installed at either end of the new building and working space for additional air carriers, should that happy circumstance occur, can be made available. If the long-term future brings with it an especially heavy volume of air passenger traffic, a mirror-image facility could be built opposite the present new structure and the two could be connected with an overhead walkway.

Formal dedication of the new Lincoln airport terminal will be delayed until the completion of the connecting roads from the Interstate and Cornhusker Highway. That should be sometime in late spring. It is hoped that the widening of West Cornhusker between I-180 and the present construction work will not lag too far behind. It would be a shame to have to continue to travel a cowpath to a first class airport.

The people of Lincoln have an airport they can really be proud of and when the access problems are solved not much more could be asked for.

The Star along with other Lincolnites salutes the Lincoln Airport Authority, its director and employes and all others in the city who have worked so hard to help meet the community's air transportation needs.

Signal Woes At 9th And P

We're still not exactly certain why the traffic signal systems at the 9th and P and 10th and P intersections are being worked on. The traffic lights that were up seemed to be adequate. The response to our inquiry told us that new mast arms were installed to conform to others in the downtown area and that new pedestrian signals were installed to conform to federal standards.

Okay, maybe.

Monday there was nothing but a temporary stop sign facing one-way eastbound P St. traffic which would either cross 9th and continue east on P or would turn right onto 9th. The one-way, southbound 9th St. traffic rushed on, unimpeded. No light. No stop sign. No policeman. Nothing.

During the late afternoon rush hour Monday, with heavy equipment parked in the curb lane on the west side of 9th, eastbound P St. drivers were edging out onto 9th, peering around the equipment, trying to get across or turn right. The braver P St. drivers were playing "chicken" with the southbound 9th St. traffic while others were playing varying forms of "dodg'em." Horns honked. Tempers flared.

The city traffic engineering department said that the temporary traffic signal which was in place last week was damaged by an errant driver early Sunday morning. A replacement for a damaged part was due to come in by bus, hopefully by Wednesday, a spokesman said. It is an incredible situation when a city of 165,000 has only one temporary traffic signal to use in emergency situations. Something should be done about it.

When The Star called Tuesday, the Police Department said it was unaware there was a problem at the intersection, but a traffic officer said the department would look into the situation and take appropriate action. We hope a patrolman can direct traffic at the scene, at least during the rush hour, until the signal is back in operation.

As of this writing, nobody to our knowledge has been hurt or killed at the intersection. That is one of the wonders of the age.

Sharp Pruning Shears

Section 1505 of the Federal Criminal Code makes it a felony "corruptly" to "obstruct or impede" any "due and proper" inquiry by a committee of Congress. This parallels Section 1503, the statute used in the cover-up prosecutions, which makes it a crime to obstruct judicial proceedings.

When the transcripts were issued on April 30, the accompanying White House brief described them as Nixon's response to a House Judiciary Committee subpoena for tapes of 42 presidential conversations. The committee's impeachment inquiry was surely a "due and proper" one, and Section 1505 would appear to cover any deliberate tampering with evidence for such an inquiry.

That there was deliberate tampering in this case can hardly be doubted any longer. One notable example is the tape of a conversation Nixon had on April 14, 1973, with H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman. As played at the trial, it included this statement by Nixon about the original Watergate burglars:

The special prosecutor's office has made no public comment about all this. But it clearly is interested in the question of who tampered with the transcripts — a question close to its basic interest in the integrity of the legal process.

Tracking down who was responsible for the tricks played on the Judiciary Committee and the country will require hard investigation. For instance, did White House secretaries type complete transcripts that were then pruned? Or did the secretaries work from duplicate tapes that had already had the offending passages removed?

The man who reportedly did most of the listening to tapes for Nixon during the impeachment months was J. Fred Buzhardt, the White House counsel. He also maneuvered with the special prosecutor. For example, when the prosecutor subpoenaed the tape of a January, 1973, conversation between Nixon and Charles Colson about clemency for the burglars, Buzhardt said there was no such conversation. In fact there was, and the devastating tape has now been played at the trial.

Others known to have heard the tapes in the White House are Rosemary Woods and Gen. Alexander M. Haig, Jr. Any search for those who knew that relevant passages were omitted from the published transcripts would evidently require putting questions to these two as well as Buzhardt.

The bar has responsibilities in this matter, too. In addition to Buzhardt, what has come out at the cover-up trial raises serious questions of legal ethics in the case of James St. Clair, Nixon's impeachment counsel.

St. Clair repeatedly assured the impeachment inquiry and the country that they had the "full and complete story," that the transcripts did "tell it all." Yet soon after April 30, the Judiciary Committee discovered critical omissions. One was of a long passage in which Nixon said: "I want you all to stonewall it . . . cover-up or anything else . . ."

When those discrepancies appeared, in May and June, St. Clair went right on resisting subpoenas for original tapes. So far as we know, he did not then hear the tapes himself or even demand an explanation of the omissions from his master.

Oil Plans In Debate

NEW YORK — United States strategy for dealing with the international oil crisis continues to unfold, layer by layer. Last week's major development was the disclosure by Secretary of State Kissinger of American plans to negotiate a new $25 billion special oil fund for relending petrodollars to Western nations in deep balance-of-payments deficit.

Now comes the unveiling of the American plan for narrowing the gap between Western energy needs and dependency on imported oil from producers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

It is basically a high-price, high domestic production strategy.

The new plan was disclosed this week, in a forum at Yale University, by Thomas O. Enders, assistant secretary of state for economic and business affairs. Enders is regarded by insiders as the chief architect of Kissinger's energy policy including the international energy agency, the oil-sharing program for industrial nations, and the $25 billion petrodollar recycling fund.

The rationale for the new United States strategy for closing the energy gap stems from the massive project independence report, released two weeks ago by the Federal Energy Administration.

That report set forth two basic patterns that would result from either (a) acceptance of an $11 price per barrel of crude oil in the world market or (b) early reduction of the world oil price to $7 a barrel.

As the F.E.A. data indicate, the rate of growth of domestic production would be much faster at $11 than $7, and there would be a far greater drag on the growth of oil consumption. By 1985, at the $11 price, according to the F.E.A.'s study, the expanded supply of oil — plus expanded output of coal and nuclear energy — could eliminate the need for imported oil.

But at the $7 price per barrel of oil, the gap could widen to about 13 million barrels a day, or more than half of all the United States' petroleum needs. The American dependency — and probably foreign dependency as well — on OPEC oil would increase rather than narrow, according to the F.E.A. projections.

The startling news broken by Enders at Yale — startling against the background of repeated declarations of high American officials that OPEC nations must reduce their exorbitantly high prices — is that the United States is now founding its strategy on the $11 price.

This is what, in informal discussion, he called the Catch-22 of the United States position: It is designed to reduce Western dependency on foreign oil and ultimately to break the OPEC oil price, but when the oil price comes down, the United States and its partners will hold up their own oil prices to protect high-cost domestic production.

Thus as the price for foreign oil came down before 1985 — and Enders made clear that he expected it to come down substantially — the United States and its partners would move toward a two-tier cost structure for energy: "One that assures the consuming countries their desired degree of independence; the other balances a constant demand and growing supply for imported oil at prices that diminished, or even reversed, the accumulation of assets by producers," he said.

Does this plan make sense? Is it in accord with the facts and reasonable expectations about the way nations — not only the European nations and Japan but even the United States itself, with Congress and the voters generally exerting their influence on government — can be expected to react to what is clearly an extremely costly, long-term program for stimulating and protecting domestic oil and other energy producers?

J. K. Jamieson, chairman and chief executive officer of the Exxon Corporation, who was on the program with Enders at Yale, found the United States plan "over-optimistic." Jamieson said the F.E.A. had overestimated future oil production in this country as well as reliance on nuclear power and other energy sources.

Prof. James Tobins of Yale, a former member of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, raised questions about the cost of the program and whether it was the most economic way either to protect United States oil supplies or to deal with the problem of the transfer of wealth to the OPEC countries.

Tobin argued that there might be cheaper ways "to buy insurance" — as through increased storage or stand-by production capacity.

The political feasibility of the Kissinger-Enders plan is also questionable. Other nations, such as France, might refuse to go along — and, if the United States and its partners did succeed in driving down the world oil price, the outsiders would have a clear cost advantage in production and competition in world trade — in effect, a free ride resulting from the sacrifices of "anti-OPEC."

Questions can also be raised about the very heavy emphasis on expanding production at high cost and the relatively light stress on conservation. President Ford has thus far backed an essentially "voluntary" program of restraining consumption, refusing proposals even for moderate increases in gasoline taxes.

But the new program could send gasoline taxes far higher — unless, as is possible, the United States still had, in addition to two tiers for world and domestic prices, two or more additional tiers for "old" and "new" oil produced in the United States, as now.

Jamieson estimated thus, at an average price of $11 a barrel for crude oil, the price of a gallon of gasoline in the United States would be 88 cents — far higher than the price at the pump that would result from even a 20-cent rise in the gasoline tax.

In response to criticism that the administration had understressed conservation and in fact had no real conservation plan, Enders disclosed that a new daily and weekly monitoring program would begin by which the F.E.A. would measure the shortfall, if any, between oil consumption and a target for restrained fuel consumption.

If the United States did fall behind the President's goal of a reduction of 1 million barrels a day in consumption, he might propose a stiffer plan for cutting consumption.

Behind the United States position on energy, as developed by Enders, is the belief that the only way the United States can get a handle on the crisis is via its international dangers — and that is also the only way Americans can be brought to see the urgency of the crisis.

The steady and vastly mounting flow of arms to the Middle East, from France, the United States and others, to pay for oil imports, is one dimension of the problem to which Enders did not address himself. But that may be the most critical dimension of all.

And the most paradoxical aspect is that the United States in fighting to bring down the OPEC price, means to keep its own price high.

POSTCARD

by Stan Delaplane

Kaanapali — Morning at Kaanapali: At the beach boy house, the bronze Hawaiian boy is seriously studying the little book they sell to tourists: "How To Speak Hawaiian."

(Only a handful of people on remote Niihau speak Hawaiian. Hawaii's language is English with a good deal of pidgin thrown in. "Too much Aloha" — good-by forever.)

They hold up a shark net — which I suppose should be reassuring.

(Actually, I find it something like when the air stewardess demonstrates the life jacket. And the loud-speaker tries to make a water landing sound like summer cruise.)

Morning on the island of Maui: The sea is as blue as a Chinaman's pants.

Behind the beach rises the great chunck of black lava rock and the balconies of Sheraton-Maui, first big hotel chain to build on Maui. (Then they added more and more hotels. Luxury hotel row goes on now, bumper to bumper, for a couple and a half miles.)

Music pours like coconut syrup from the speakers: "I want to go back to my fish and poi . . ."

A few miles down the road is the old town of Lahaina, once the whaler's delight. The whalers did not come here to hunt whales. They came here to provision and make merry.

The New England missionaries had sacked up all the local talent in Mother Hubbards — later to become known as muumuus and provide today's rich fashion business to Waikiki.

As a substitute, they constructed a Seamen's Chapel and Reading Room.

The mission reported: "The reading rooms, especially the rooms for masters and officers, far exceed our most sanguine expectations. We are confident that no step taken by the mission at Lahaina in relation to seamen has met with such cordial approbation on their part and promises such favorable results."

The mission also convinced King Kamehameha III that seamen should not mix with the sacked up island girls. (They should go to the reading room and read.)

The law was obligingly passed. Seamen were ordered to return to ship at sundown. And island girls were forbidden to swim out to them.

This caused a great deal of gloom on the whaler John Palmer. (Apparently the Captain didn't care for the mission library.)

They unlimbered the cannon and fired a few rounds — most of them aimed at the mission house where the Bingham and Richards families knelt in the cellar and prayed for delivery from wickedness.

Nowadays, the mission houses and other landmarks are fairly well preserved.

There are no whalers. But there is a brisk traffic from the Royal Lahaina Golf Club and the Sheraton-Maui.

There's a library and reading room. But I don't think they go there.

They run up in the Whale's Tale and the sagging Pioneer Hotel.

You don't have to go back to your island at sundown. And you can run around with any little old island wahine that will have you. Aloha! Hello dere!

A couple of humback whales are playing along the channel. First person to sight a whale each day is given a "Whale Watcher's" card and a free rum drink, yo-ho-ho!

The humpbacks come here during the winter. They run about 50 feet and feed on shrimp — a nice thing to know if you are swimming. I bear no resemblance to a shrimp and therefore do not look tasty to a humpback whale.

POSTCARD

by Stan Delaplane

Kaanapali — Morning at Kaanapali: At the beach boy house, the bronze Hawaiian boy is seriously studying the little book they sell to tourists: "How To Speak Hawaiian."

(Only a handful of people on remote Niihau speak Hawaiian. Hawaii's language is English with a good deal of pidgin thrown in. "Too much Aloha" — good-by forever.)

They hold up a shark net — which I suppose should be reassuring.

(Actually, I find it something like when the air stewardess demonstrates the life jacket. And the loud-speaker tries to make a water landing sound like summer cruise.)

Morning on the island of Maui: The sea is as blue as a Chinaman's pants.

Behind the beach rises the great chunck of black lava rock and the balconies of Sheraton-Maui, first big hotel chain to build on Maui. (Then they added more and more hotels. Luxury hotel row goes on now, bumper to bumper, for a couple and a half miles.)

Music pours like coconut syrup from the speakers: "I want to go back to my fish and poi . . ."

A few miles down the road is the old town of Lahaina, once the whaler's delight. The whalers did not come here to hunt whales. They came here to provision and make merry.

The New England missionaries had sacked up all the local talent in Mother Hubbards — later to become known as muumuus and provide today's rich fashion business to Waikiki.

As a substitute, they constructed a Seamen's Chapel and Reading Room.

The mission reported: "The reading rooms, especially the rooms for masters and officers, far exceed our most sanguine expectations. We are confident that no step taken by the mission at Lahaina in relation to seamen has met with such cordial approbation on their part and promises such favorable results."

The mission also convinced King Kamehameha III that seamen should not mix with the sacked up island girls. (They should go to the reading room and read.)

The law was obligingly passed. Seamen were ordered to return to ship at sundown. And island girls were forbidden to swim out to them.

This caused a great deal of gloom on the whaler John Palmer. (Apparently the Captain didn't care for the mission library.)

They unlimbered the cannon and fired a few rounds — most of them aimed at the mission house where the Bingham and Richards families knelt in the cellar and prayed for delivery from wickedness.

Nowadays, the mission houses and other landmarks are fairly well preserved.

There are no whalers. But there is a brisk traffic from the Royal Lahaina Golf Club and the Sheraton-Maui.

There's a library and reading room. But I don't think they go there.

They rum up in the Whale's Tale and the sagging Pioneer Hotel.

You don't have to go back to your island at sundown. And you can run around with any little old island wahine that will have you. Aloha! Hello dere!

A couple of humback whales are playing along the channel. First person to sight a whale each day is given a "Whale Watcher's" card and a free rum drink, yo-ho-ho!

The humpbacks come here during the winter. They run about 50 feet and feed on shrimp — a nice thing to know if you are swimming. I bear no resemblance to a shrimp and therefore do not look tasty to a humpback whale.

'Florida Fox' Pleads Guilty

Orlando, Fla. (UPI) — John William Clouser, the "Florida Fox" who spent more time on the FBI's list of 10 most wanted fugitives than any other man, pleaded guilty to conspiracy to commit robbery and was sentenced to five years in prison.

Treasury Will Sell 2 Million Ounces Of Gold

Washington (UPI) — The Treasury will sell 2 million ounces of gold bars from the national stockpile in early January to meet an expected demand from American citizens entitled to own gold for the first time in 40 years, Treasury Secretary William E. Simon said Tuesday.

However, few individuals will be able to afford the minimum purchase of one 400-ounce bar. At current prices of about $187 an ounce on the London and Geneva gold exchanges, a 400-ounce bar would cost about $74,800.

The entire quantity to be auctioned by the General Services Administration on Jan. 6 from bullion depositories in San Francisco, New York and Denver would have a current free market value of $374 million.

The ban on private ownership of gold, imposed in 1934, will be lifted Dec. 31 and a number of banks and fine metals dealers already have announced plans for gold sales in much smaller amounts, giving less affluent U.S. citizens a chance to pick up some of the glamor metal.

Simon said there were two reasons for the sale:

— Increasing the supply available for purchase domestically when the ban is lifted may dissuade Americans from seeking to buy gold on foreign markets which would tend to worsen the U.S. balance of payments.

— Since gold in national stockpiles is, by international agreement, priced at $42.22 an ounce, sales at the much higher free market price will earn a tidy profit for the Treasury. This will reduce the government's need to raise money in the private market to finance its day-to-day operations, "thus leaving more funds available for private investment in industry, housing and other activities."

Treasury officials strongly denied that a related aim was to drive down the free-market price from its current record levels.

The U.S. position in international monetary negotiations has been that gold should play a lesser role in monetary affairs. The record runup in gold prices in the past year has reflected investor disenchantment in the value of hard currency, securities and other traditional forms of investment and, in the eyes of some officials, frustrated U.S. attempts to "demonetize" the precious metal.

Simon indicated that additional small sales from the U.S. gold stockpile might be held in the future and he downplayed the effects of these public offerings.

"The amount being offered in the initial sale, the 2 million ounces, is not large in relation to our 276 million stockpile," Simon said. He noted that military and industrial users annually buy between 6 and 7 million ounces, an amount more than equalled by new gold production without any need to dip into the national stockpile.

The U.S. decision sent gold prices plunging Tuesday and shattered speculators dreams of quick profits when Americans are allowed to own gold bullion.

Gold mining stocks on the New York Stock Exchange also fell sharply after the announcement of the public sale.

Stock prices of the four major gold mining companies — Asa Ltd., Dome Ltd., Homestake Mining and Crompton & Knowles — dropped $3.13 to $5.63 a share.

In the first reaction on European bullion markets, the overall price of gold dropped sharply, even though the announcement came too late to influence most trading.

In London, the price dropped $9 an ounce to a four-week low of $176.50. In Zurich, where the market closed earlier, the price dropped $2.50 to $183.25. Some gold dealers said the price could drop $20 or more an ounce in the next few days.

The price of gold rose from about $150 an ounce in August, when the ban was lifted after Dec. 31, to a record high of $190.50 two weeks ago.

Iowa Budget Requests Up Sharply

Des Moines (UPI) — Iowa's 130 state agencies have submitted budget requests totaling $1.2 billion for the next fiscal year, Gov. Robert D. Ray's office disclosed.

The $1.2 billion figure is 43% more than the previous year's governor's recommended budget, and 25.6% higher than was approved by the last Iowa Legislature, according to Richard Gilbert, the governor's press secretary. However, Ray noted that it it only a preliminary figure and represents the most the agencies would spend if all their programs were approved.

Danish citizens were told Tuesday they may get no raises for all of 1975 and the French government made a massive loan to try to save the troubled Citroen auto firm in a day of bleak economic news.

Britain laid plans to cut back the military might that has held forth in Asia for a century, partly to save money, and said foreign currency reserves are disappearing almost as fast as the treasury can borrow. Japan said its national output of goods and services is declining.

Only in Brazil and the Soviet Union was there reason for financial cheer.

The Rio de Janeiro stock exchange began the week with a record 15 per cent one-day advance on news of official predictions that Brazil will be self-sufficient in oil by 1979. The boom was led by issues of the Petrobas government oil monopoly, which rose by 50 per cent.

Finance Minister Henrique Simonsen announced Friday that oil fields discovered offshore in Brazil's continental shelf will be producing a million barrels a day in five years. The country now uses 800,000 barrels a day and has been producing only 200,000.

Soviet Trade Surplus

The Soviet Union, according to an analysis published by the Vienna Institute for Comparative Economics, will enjoy a trade surplus with the Western industrialized countries this year of between $1.5 billion and $2 billion. Previously it has had a deficit.

The institute attributed this mostly to the fact that the Soviet Union is self-sufficient in oil and exports many other raw materials.

It said, however, that Russia's allies in East Europe have such large deficits with the West that they may have to restrict imports.

In Denmark, Prime Minister Poul Hartling's minority Liberal party government staked its life on a sweeping crisis plan intended to combat mounting unemployment and inflation.

The proposal presented to the Danish parliament calls for extension of all expiring wage agreements without increase, partial abolition of automatic cost of living wage adjustments, a freeze on dividends and profits throughout 1975 and a two- or three-month freeze on producers' prices for beef, pork, poultry and dairy products.

Political observers predicted that if the plan didn't get quick support from lawmakers, Hartling would immediately call for elections. His party has only 22 of 179 seats in parliament.

The French government announced a loan of more than $200 million to the nearly bankrupt Citroen, the country's third largest auto manufacturer, to allow it to pay its debts and then merge with second-ranked Peugeot. However, the merged company will continue to make cars under both brand names.

Sales Decline

Citroen, long plagued by ineffective sales policies, has been suffering the added burden of France's slumping auto market. Sales dropped 23 per cent for private cars in October and even more in November. The company laid off 6,000 workers last year and tried to dismiss 2,700 this year before running into union opposition.

The French government also said it will loan more than $90 million to the nationalized Renault company to allow it to buy out the Berliet truck company.

The Ford Motor Co. of Britain announced plans Tuesday to cut its white collar staff by 1,750 — more than 10 per cent — after one of the worst years in its history. The company's work force of 71,000 includes 16,000 white collar employes.

Ford said output would fall to 384,000 cars and 133,000 commercial vehicles this year, compared with 453,000 and 137,000 last year.

The move came less than a week after Chrysler UK, another U.S.-owned company announced 700 early retirements for its white collar staff.

Britain's defense cutback proposal, made to the House of Commons, calls for reducing military expenditures by $11.2 billion over the next 10 years. Defense Secretary Roy Mason said Britain will continue its commitments to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization but will pull out many forces in Hong Kong, Malaysia, Singapore and the Indian Ocean.

From 5½% To 4½%

Mason said the Labor government wants to cut defense spending as a proportion of the gross national product from the present 5½ per cent to 4½ per cent over the 10-year period.

The British treasury said the country's reserves of foreign currency backing the pound sterling had risen only $277 million last month despite overseas borrowings of $1.15 billion, the largest monthly borrowing by Britain on record.

That indicated the country had lost $873 million through the continuing foreign trade deficit and the transfer outside of Britain of short-term investment funds, mainly deposited by oil exporting countries in the Mideast. Much of that money is thought to be moving across the Atlantic to New York.

In Tokyo, the Economic Planning Agency said Japan's output of goods and services this year is running 3.8 per cent below last year's. The agency said the gross national product for the third quarter was running a an annual rate of $452.2 billion, up 20 per cent from last year, but that inflation reduced its real value to $232.3 billion.

West German leaders also worried about how to stimulate their economy. Chancellor Helmut Schmidt announced his cabinet will meet on Dec. 12 to take "the necessary decisions on economic policy."

In London and Zurich, the price of gold slumped more than $6 an ounce following a U.S. government announcement that it will sell two million ounces of the metal at public auction next month. The price dropped in London from $184.25 an ounce at Monday's close to $178. The Zurich price was marked down to a range of $177 to $180 an ounce, making a midpoint of $178.50 compared to Monday's $185.75.

Tiny Tim's 'Miss Vicki' Go-Go Girl

Camden, N.J. (UPI) — "Miss Vicki," estranged wife of entertainer Tiny Tim, worked as a $5-an-hour go-go dancer to earn enough money to support their 3-year-old daughter, Tulip, it was disclosed Tuesday.

Miss Vicki's brief go-go career was revealed by the manager of Minnie's Lounge and confirmed by her mother, Emma Budinger.

The lounge manager, Vic Fanizio, said Miss Vicki worked periodically as a dancer until October.

"She apparently had money problems, but the small amount of money she made here really wasn't anything substantial," he said. "She worked here and there, maybe twice a week."

Spying Defended

Washington (UPI) — CIA Director William E. Colby said the United States for its own security has the right to carry out covert spying and intelligence operations anywhere in the world — on friend or foe.

Mason said the Labor government wants to cut defense spending as a proportion of the gross national product from the present 5½ per cent to 4½ per cent over the 10-year period.

The British treasury said the country's reserves of foreign currency backing the pound sterling had risen only $277 million last month despite overseas borrowings of $1.15 billion, the largest monthly borrowing by Britain on record.

That indicated the country had lost $873 million through the continuing foreign trade deficit and the transfer outside of Britain of short-term investment funds, mainly deposited by oil exporting countries in the Mideast. Much of that money is thought to be moving across the Atlantic to New York.

In Tokyo, the Economic Planning Agency said Japan's output of goods and services this year is running 3.8 per cent below last year's. The agency said the gross national product for the third quarter was running a an annual rate of $452.2 billion, up 20 per cent from last year, but that inflation reduced its real value to $232.3 billion.

West German leaders also worried about how to stimulate their economy. Chancellor Helmut Schmidt announced his cabinet will meet on Dec. 12 to take "the necessary decisions on economic policy."

In London and Zurich, the price of gold slumped more than $6 an ounce following a U.S. government announcement that it will sell two million ounces of the metal at public auction next month. The price dropped in London from $184.25 an ounce at Monday's close to $178. The Zurich price was marked down to a range of $177 to $180 an ounce, making a midpoint of $178.50 compared to Monday's $185.75.

Tiny Tim's 'Miss Vicki' Go-Go Girl

Camden, N.J. (UPI) — "Miss Vicki," estranged wife of entertainer Tiny Tim, worked as a $5-an-hour go-go dancer to earn enough money to support their 3-year-old daughter, Tulip, it was disclosed Tuesday.

Miss Vicki's brief go-go career was revealed by the manager of Minnie's Lounge and confirmed by her mother, Emma Budinger.

The lounge manager, Vic Fanizio, said Miss Vicki worked periodically as a dancer until October.

"She apparently had money problems, but the small amount of money she made here really wasn't anything substantial," he said. "She worked here and there, maybe twice a week."

Spying Defended

Washington (UPI) — CIA Director William E. Colby said the United States for its own security has the right to carry out covert spying and intelligence operations anywhere in the world — on friend or foe.

Timing Device Calms Lawyer's Worries About Bills' Accuracy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — For years, Atty. Eugene Albertini worried about the accuracy of bills he was sending clients.

He says the thought nagged at him: could he and other attorneys — charging from $40 to $150 an hour for their services — be totally sure of the hours and minutes they had spent on each case? How many attorneys timed their phone calls and conferences down to the minute? How many clients were dead sure their lawyers' bills were a true reflection of the work done on their cases?

To calm his worries, Albertini invented a device for his office: a machine designed to time his work, spitting out the results in a print-out to be forwarded to each client.

Because it worked, Albertini has begun marketing his invention nationwide.

"I did this for myself, to upgrade what I was doing," says the 44-year-old Albertini. "I feel the legal profession needs something like this now."

Although not inspired by Watergate, Albertini said that his invention is timely in its effort to prove that all lawyers are not crooked.

"Watergate was upsetting to me because it seemed to denote that all of us aren't so good," he said.

In his initial sales tour of the country this year, Albertini says he found many attorneys concerned about their image. Some 100 have signed up to lease his invention so far, and more orders are coming in, Albertini says.

The device is called "The Electronic Time Recorder." It is a desktop machine, about half the size of an electric typewriter with buttons to punch and a print-out tape that slides out of the top. The recorder is hooked into a telephone.

To keep an accurate record of case work, an attorney punches a button, codes in the case number he is working on, and lets the machine run until he's finished or switches to another client's legal work.

Should the phone ring while the attorney is working, the machine automatically pauses, waits for the conversation to end, beeps to remind the attorney to code in the case he was discussing by phone, then returns to timing the original work.

The same interrupt system can be activated when someone enters the lawyer's office.

At the end of the day, the computer-based time recorder system issues a printed record of time spent on each matter and each client including a listing of phone calls, conferences and dictation time.

"Manually recorded time is always wrong," says Albertini. "I would challenge you to go from 8 a.m. to noon and figure out your time with any accuracy ... Attorneys tend to be subjective.

"If they're enjoying a case they're working on it may seem like it took less time that it did."

The Electronic Time Recorder, which was developed by Albertini in conjunction with the Electrolux Company, is being marketed by Facit Chronometrics.

The units are leased rather than sold, and promotion is being done privately — mostly at bar association and other attorney gatherings.

He says that a dishonest lawyer could cheat on the machine.

Since the attorney must punch the buttons that activate the machine, a lawyer could cheat by turning it on and doing nothing.

What's to prevent that?

"Only integrity," says Albertini. "He can leave it on during lunch. He can leave it on all night. But he shouldn't want to."

Manuscripts Found

Tokyo (AP) — A trove of ancient manuscripts, paintings, weapons and tools, some dating back 2,000 years, has been unearthed in central China, according to Peking's official Hsinhua news agency. The manuscripts ranged from technical medical treatises and political discourses to a 4,000-word essay on how to judge a horse.

ACTION LINE

Or Write P.O. Box 81689, Lincoln, NE 68501

The property owners on the south side of Stockwell St., between 20th St. and Worthington Ave., were ordered to put a sidewalk in two years ago. However, the city has never constructed the sidewalk across the alley, making a dangerously muddy spot there when it's wet. Can you get the city in gear so we get a sidewalk there soon?

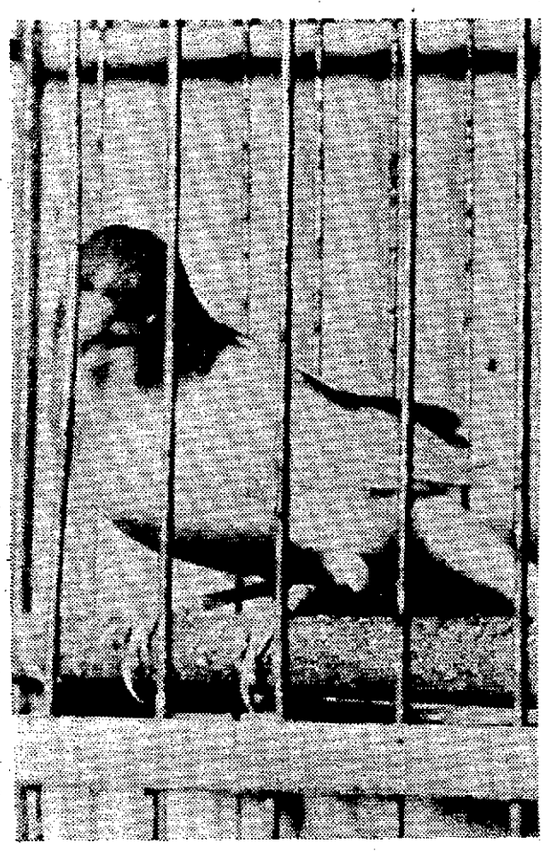
—Mrs. Philip Goin, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Duane Kuhlanek, chief sidewalk inspector for the City of Lincoln Public Works Dept., called the delay in needed sidewalk construction at the Stockwell St. address an "oversight of ours."

Kuhlanek promised he'd notify the street department immediately about the problem. The sidewalk would "get in as soon as possible," he said, declining to offer a specific date.

I would like to buy two canaries, but they seem to be extremely scarce around Lincoln? Is there a canary shortage? Is there anyplace at all in Lincoln where I can buy the bird?

—John Peterson, Lincoln



ACTION LINE: Yes, there is a shortage, says Ed Bosak of the U.S. Interiors Dept. Fish and Wildlife Service. It can be blamed on the U.S. Agriculture Dept. which placed an embargo on all exotic birds entering the nation — one of which is the canary.

Bosak said all wild birds coming into this country must be placed in one of three quarantine centers for 30 days at the expense of the person bringing the bird in.

The purpose of the embargo, which has been in effect since 1972, is to prevent fowl cholera and other infectious diseases from contaminating domestic bird flocks.

Consequently, Action Line had no luck finding any foreign-type canaries for sale. However, Mary Yeany, manager of Mary's Pet Shop, 3243 So. 10th St., said the store had a selection of domestic canaries for sale.

May 8, 1974, I sent a $10 check to the Open Court Publishing Co., LaSalle, Ill. for a one-year subscription to "Cricket", a literary magazine for elementary school age children. The child I wanted it sent to has never received the magazine even though I've tried to correct the matter with the company several times. Help!

—Mrs. Jennings Klein, Adams

ACTION LINE: After checking your file, Valerie Brown, subscription supervisor for the Cricket magazine said the records showed the May, September, October, November and December issues had been sent. No magazine is published in June, July or August.

However, she said, the missing magazines would be shipped to the address listed in the files (which matches the address given Action Line) again. To insure delivery this time, she said she would contact the post office to put a "watch" on the shipment. This watch makes sure the magazines get to the party indicated.

I need help in finding a liquid nozzle for a Wards paint spray gun. I've written the manufacturer listed on the gun, Decora Manufacturing Co., Emeryville, Calif., for help. Evidently, they're ignoring my letters. Hope you can help us out.

—Mrs. Ed Urbanec, Raymond

ACTION LINE: Ben Lovell, paint department manager at Montgomery Ward and Co., Gateway Center, Lincoln, said in the 10 years he's worked there, he's never heard of the Decora Manufacturing Co.

He said, however, that he might be able to fix you up with a comparable part from another company if you'd bring the spray gun in for him to see. If that's too inconvenient, he suggested directing a letter to him (Ben Lovell, Montgomery Ward and Co., Gateway Center, Lincoln, Ne. 68505) with a complete explanation of the sprayer and the missing part.

Requires no baking. Uses just three tasty ingredients: Rice Krispies, marshmallows and margarine. So, clip the coupon and easy recipe. Put a dime in your pocket and tasty Marshmallow Treats on your Holiday table.

MARSHMALLOW TREATS

- ¼ cup regular margarine or butter
- 1 pkg. (6 to 10 oz.) regular marshmallows, about 40, OR 4 cups miniature marshmallows
- 5 cups KELLOGG'S RICE KRISPIES cereal

1. Melt margarine in large saucepan over low heat. Add marshmallows and cook, stirring constantly, until marshmallows are melted and mixture is very syrupy. Remove from heat.
2. Add Rice Krispies cereal. Stir until well coated.
3. Using buttered spatula or waxed paper, press mixture evenly and firmly in buttered 13 x 9 x 2-inch pan. Cut into squares when cool.

Yield: 24 squares, 2 x 2 inches

NOTE: For thicker squares, press warm mixture into buttered 9 x 9 x 2-inch pan. Best results are obtained when using fresh marshmallows. About 2 cups marshmallow creme may be substituted for marshmallows. Add to melted margarine and cook over low heat about 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Proceed as directed in step 2 above.

British Naval Base Available Soon

LONDON (AP) — Anyone want a good old imperial naval base nicely located on Africa's southernmost tip where the Atlantic and Indian oceans meet?

It will be available soon, complete with the biggest dry dock between Europe and Singapore and a fine communications system.

And cheap too in dollars-and-cents terms for Simonstown's a good, going concern.

Politically, though the cost to a new tenant would be high because South Africa, which owns the place, is in bad repute with much of the rest of the world because of its strict race policies.

Britain's labor government intends soon phasing out its lease that began in 1795.

In today's race-conscious world, with Britain trying to live down its imperial past, military cooperation with the South Africans has simply become a throbbing headache. Each time royal naval and South African warships exercise together a political storm breaks at home, protests pour in from abroad.

The British have made their intentions plain even though Labor Prime Miniser Harold Wilson's move to disengage has been hotly assailed by political foes. South Africans have joined the controversy by suggesting both the United States and France would be ready to move into Simonstown.

But authorized American officials have spread word President Ford's administration is not interested in taking over Simonstown. So, too, has France, and no other allied power seems qualified to take on the commitment even if it wanted to.

Britain's readiness to let its 20-year defense pact with South Africa "wither on the vine," as Foreign Secretary James Callaghan put it recently, does not mean Simonstown's facilities are not valued by allied strategists.

Military planners within the North Atlantic Alliance (NATO) have recognized the importance of keeping the sea lanes around the Cape of Good Hope safe. Tens of thousands of merchantmen, allied warships, tankers carrying Persian Gulf oil to Eurpe pass around the cape.

NATO men have prepared emergency arrangements to keep open the sea lanes during crises even though cape waters lie well south of NATO's limits. The United States has associated itself with NATO's contingency plans.

The reason for allied — and South African — concern is the ever-swelling Soviet naval presence in the Indian Ocean. Latest U.S. intelligence shows the Russians with 12 combat and 18 auxilliary vessels in the region. This includes a diesel-powered submarine and a helicopter carrier. They are deployed mainly near the Persian Gulf.

With the reopening of the Suez Canal expected next spring, even more Soviet fleet ships are likely to show up.

The Americans, in contrast, have one flagship and two destroyers in the area. From time to time task forces sail west from the Pacific and other groups probably will do so from the Mediterranean.

The hard, cold truth seems that NATO powers concluded it's simply not good politics to be seen associating with South Africa whose apartheid policies are scored throughout the non-white world. Indeed only an American-British-French veto in the United Nations Security Council last month saved South Africa from expulsion.

Callaghan recalled recently when Britain and South Africa signed their naval defense pact in 1955 there were only five independent African states. Today there are 42. This, then, has transformed things.

American officials have insisted they neither encouraged nor discouraged the British to continue naval cooperation with South Africa. The Americans themselves stopped all that themselves a decade ago. Like the British they observe a U.N. embargo on the sale of arms to South Africa.

The Americans did so after collecting a lot of political flak from their African and Asian friends.

Speaking of possible emergencies, Americans said they are not worried about "losing" Simonstown.

In a big war the base, and indeed all South African ports, would hardly be denied to South Africa's friends. In a big war, too, the action more than likely would be elsewhere, U.S. experts argued.

U.S. authorities also think they can count on other facilities in the Indian Ocean. Their warships can, for instance, resupply in Mombasa, Kenya. They hope to do so too in Lourenco Marques and Beira after Mozambique becomes independent sometime next year.

And finally they anticipate starting early 1975 with Britain in developing anchorage, storage, air staging and other facilities on the coral isle of Diego Garcia, part of the Chagos Peninsula.

Congressional confirmation of a $32.1 million allocation for a two-year expansion program now is awaited.

Cut Food Waste: Buy On Credit

BY DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Norfolk — Dr. Duane Acker, vice chancellor of the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources at the University of Nebraska, told members of the Nebraska Livestock Feeders Association here Tuesday that a system of credit cards for use in buying groceries might cut down on food waste in stores and reduce resentment by consumers about food price increases

"We all use credit cards and we buy things like cars on credit so we don't notice the price The reason that food prices hit us between the eyes is that we have to dig down into our pocketbooks and lay out the cold cash," he said

Acker suggested that the use of credit cards would mean buying more food during the week rather than the present practice of buying on weekends after the family paycheck has been received.

"This could reduce the amount of produce and meats that have to be thrown out because they have deteriorated in the store," he added.

Faculty Landed

Acker made a strong pitch for agricultural research that seemed to be aimed at a half-dozen state senators in his audience He also had lavish praise for the faculty at the Institute of Agriculture.

"We have more county agents in Nebraska who have won special recognition awards than all the other states in the Big 8 put together. Our faculty at the agricultural college has published more data per scientist in 1973 than any other college in the Big 8. This is the best way to measure the effectiveness of the research program," he stated.

Acker told the farmers that "93% of the graduates of the vocational technical school at Curtis and 85% of the graduates of the College of Agriculture in Lincoln remained in Nebraska, attributing directly to the economy of the state."

Milton Brown, president of the National Livestock Feeders, told the Nebraska group that the increased numbers of cattle in the nation was a major factor in pricing problems faced by livestock producers

"Beef slaughter is at a record high, hog production is at a very high level, and even with the supply of cattle in feedlots down, our consumers will probably consume record amounts of red beef this year. This is occurring at the same time that inflation has reduced the buying power of the consumer and the threat of losing a job is reducing the consumers desire to purchase anything," he said.

Brown noted the economic impact of livestock numbers is hard on producers "Cows are being sold at giveaway prices, feeder cattle are way down in price with yearlings bringing more money per pound than calves for the first time in my memory," he said

'Ray Of Hope'

Brown noted that "there is a ray of hope on the horizon since President Ford moved to halt the exports of Canadian meat to the United States.

"This alone won't be the salvation of the livestock industry, but in the long run it will surely help," he said.

James C. McNamara, a trade specialist with the State Department, told the feeders the U.S. government is seeking new agreements on guidelines for trading with other nations. This program is expected to result in a guaranteed market for producers of exports and a guaranteed supply for importers, he explained

"The discussions about agricultural trade are particularly difficult, but we are making some progress. There are more than 800 identifiable non-tariff trade barriers around the world," he said.

McNamara cited several examples of non-trade barriers including special requirements for odd-sized cans for canned food shipments, restrictions on labeling of exported products, export subsidies, production subsidies and other requirements that do not have a direct relationship to the price of the product but prevent free movement of products in world trade

Feeders Crown Queen

Norfolk — Jeri Meyer, 19, daughter of Mr and Mrs Melvin Meyer of St Libory, was crowned queen of the Nebraska Livestock Feeders Association at the annual banquet here Tuesday night

A 4-H member for nine years, Miss Meyer had projects in market beef, showmanship, livestock judging, rifle safety and marksmanship.

Active in church work, she is a Sunday school teacher, member of the choir and church organist at Zion Lutheran Church at St. Libory.

Miss Meyer is a student nurse at Bryan Memorial Hospital in Lincoln

Devaney Hosts Cerebral Palsy Benefit Dance

Bob Devaney, University of Nebraska athletic director, will host his Annual Benefit Dance for Cerebral Palsy on Sunday at the ballroom of the Lincoln Hilton Hotel.

Three groups, Timberline, Windsong and Johnny Ray Gomez will play for the 8:30 to 12 p.m. benefit. Local businesses are donating door prizes. Tickets will be sold at the door.

Proceeds will go to the services of United Cerebral Palsy of Southeast Nebraska.

Three Slain In Sioux City

SIOUX CITY, Iowa (AP)— Three Sioux City residents were found shot to death in their home Tuesday, and authorities believe they were killed as they tried to flee from their assailants.

The dead were identified by police as Jesse Hanni, 26, Ernest Isom, 27, and Isom's wife, Freta Bostic Isom, 24.

Woodbury County Medical Examiner Thomas Coriden said the three victims, who apparently had been dead as long as five days, were found on the first floor of the house they had rented early last month.

The victims all had been shot in the back, apparently as they fled their assailant, said Detective Bureau Capt. Frank O'Keefe.

Authorities found one pistol in a lunch bucket in a car outside the house. Another handgun was found in a closet. But there was no indication if either weapon was used in the slayings, nor was a motive for the crime immediately apparent.

Hanni and Isom had not reported for work at the Port Neal construction site of Iowa Public Service Company since Sunday, authorities said.

The bodies were discovered by Isom's mother and a friend, Mrs. Dorothy Stewart, who went to the house after the two men's employers said the workers did not show up at the construction site

Authorities said the woman was found on the living room floor, with bare feet and clad in bathrobe.

Hanni was fully clothed and wearing an overcoat. His body, too, was on the floor.

Authorities said Mrs. Isom was pregnant, and was due to deliver in April.

Isom and Hanni had recently worked a construction job in Arkansas City, Kan., investigators said

ACTION LINE

Or Write P.O. Box 81689, Lincoln, NE 68501

The property owners on the south side of Stockwell St., between 20th St. and Worthington Ave., were ordered to put a sidewalk in two years ago. However, the city has never constructed the sidewalk across the alley, making a dangerously muddy spot there when it's wet. Can you get the city in gear so we get a sidewalk there soon?

—Mrs. Philip Goin, Lincoln

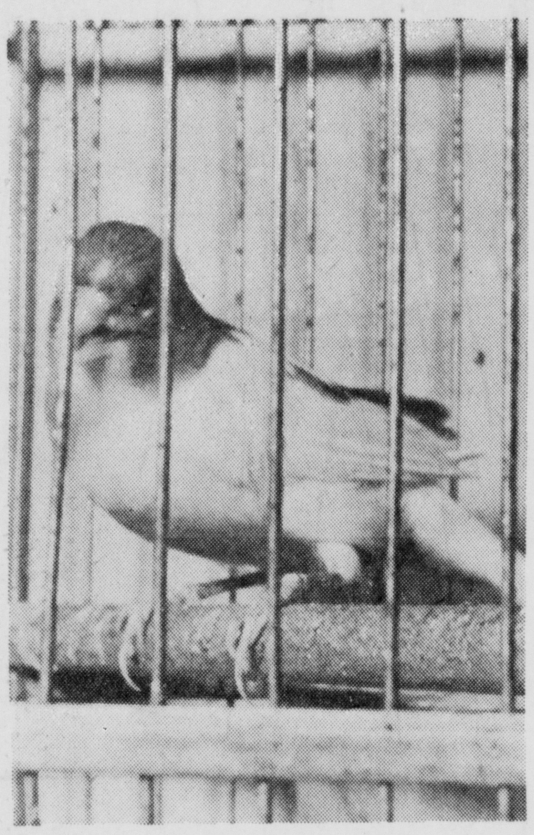
Kuhlanek promised he'd notify the street department immediately about the problem. The sidewalk would "get in as soon as possible," he said, declining to offer a specific date.

I would like to buy two canaries, but they seem to be extremely scarce around Lincoln? Is there a canary shortage? Is there anyplace at all in Lincoln where I can buy the bird?

—John Peterson, Lincoln



ACTION LINE: Yes, there is a shortage, says Ed Bosak of the U.S. Interiors Dept. Fish and Wildlife Service. It can be blamed on the U.S. Agriculture Dept. which placed an embargo on all exotic birds entering the nation — one of which is the canary.

Bosak said all wild birds coming into this country must be placed in one of three quarantine centers for 30 days at the expense of the person bringing the bird in.

The purpose of the embargo, which has been in effect since 1972, is to prevent fowl cholera and other infectious diseases from contaminating domestic bird flocks.

Consequently, Action Line had no luck finding any foreign-type canaries for sale. However, Mary Yeany, manager of Mary's Pet Shop, 3243 So. 10th St., said the store had a selection of domestic canaries for sale.

May 8, 1974, I sent a $10 check to the Open Court Publishing Co., LaSalle, Ill. for a one-year subscription to "Cricket", a literary magazine for elementary school age children. The child I wanted it sent to has never received the magazine even though I've tried to correct the matter with the company several times. Help!

—Mrs. Jennings Klein, Adams

ACTION LINE: After checking your file, Valerie Brown, subscription supervisor for the Cricket magazine said the records showed the May, September, October, November and December issues had been sent. No magazine is published in June, July or August.

However, she said, the missing magazines would be shipped to the address listed in the files (which matches the address given Action Line) again. To insure delivery this time, she said she would contact the post office to put a "watch" on the shipment. This watch makes sure the magazines get to the party indicated.

I need help in finding a liquid nozzle for a Wards paint spray gun. I've written the manufacturer listed on the gun, Decora Manufacturing Co., Emeryville, Calif., for help. Evidently, they're ignoring my letters. Hope you can help us out.

—Mrs. Ed Urbanec, Raymond

ACTION LINE: Ben Lovell, paint department manager at Montgomery Ward and Co., Gateway Center, Lincoln, said in the 10 years he's worked there, he's never heard of the Decora Manufacturing Co.

He said, however, that he might be able to fix you up with a comparable part from another company if you'd bring the spray gun in for him to see. If that's too inconvenient, he suggested directing a letter to him (Ben Lovell, Montgomery Ward and Co., Gateway Center, Lincoln, Ne. 68505) with a complete explanation of the sprayer and the missing part.

ACTION TIP: Would you know a dragon of pollution if you saw one? A revised picture story-book from the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) teaches children to recognize the dragon of pollution. Children will have fun coloring the black and white illustrations in the book and on the cover Single free copies of "Once There Lived a Wicked Dragon" are available from Consumer Information, Pueblo, Colo. 81009

LOS ANGELES (AP) — For years, Atty. Eugene Albertini worried about the accuracy of bills he was sending clients.

He says the thought nagged at him: could he and other attorneys — charging from $40 to $150 an hour for their services — be totally sure of the hours and minutes they had spent on each case? How many attorneys timed their phone calls and conferences down to the minute? How many clients were dead sure their lawyers' bills were a true reflection of the work done on their cases?

To calm his worries, Albertini invented a device for his office: a machine designed to time his work, spitting out the results in a print-out to be forwarded to each client.

Because it worked, Albertini has begun marketing his invention nationwide.

"I did this for myself, to upgrade what I was doing," says the 44-year-old Albertini. "I feel the legal profession needs something like this now."

Although not inspired by Watergate, Albertini said that his invention is timely in its effort to prove that all lawyers are not crooked.

"Watergate was upsetting to me because it seemed to denote that all of us aren't so good," he said.

In his initial sales tour of the country this year, Albertini says he found many attorneys concerned about their image. Some 100 have signed up to lease his invention so far, and more orders are coming in, Albertini says.

The device is called "The Electronic Time Recorder." It is a desktop machine, about half the size of an electric typewriter with buttons to punch and a print-out tape that slides out of the top. The recorder is hooked into a telephone.

To keep an accurate record of case work, an attorney punches a button, codes in the case number he is working on, and lets the machine run until he's finished or switches to another client's legal work.

Should the phone ring while the attorney is working, the machine automatically pauses, waits for the conversation to end, beeps to remind the attorney to code in the case he was discussing by phone, then returns to timing the original work.

The same interrupt system can be activated when someone enters the lawyer's office.

At the end of the day, the computer-based time recorder system issues a printed record of time spent on each matter and each client including a listing of phone calls, conferences and dictation time.

"Manually recorded time is always wrong," says Albertini. "I would challenge you to go from 8 a.m. to noon and figure out your time with any accuracy . . . Attorneys tend to be subjective.

"If they're enjoying a case they're working on it may seem like it took less time that it did."

The Electronic Time Recorder, which was developed by Albertini in conjunction with the Electrolux Company, is being marketed by Facit Chronometrics.

The units are leased rather than sold, and promotion is being done privately — mostly at bar association and other attorney gatherings.

He says that a dishonest lawyer could cheat on the machine.

Since the attorney must punch the buttons that activate the machine, a lawyer could cheat by turning it on and doing nothing.

What's to prevent that?

"Only integrity," says Albertini. "He can leave it on during lunch. He can leave it on all night. But he shouldn't want to."

Manuscripts Found

Tokyo (AP) — A trove of ancient manuscripts, paintings, weapons and tools, some dating back 2,000 years, has been unearthed in central China, according to Peking's official Hsinhua news agency. The manuscripts ranged from technical medical treatises and political discourses to a 4,000-word essay on how to judge a horse.

Put a dime in your pocket and tasty Marshmallow Treats on your Holiday table.

MARSHMALLOW TREATS

¼ cup regular margarine or butter
1 pkg. (6 to 10 oz.) regular marshmallows, about 40, OR 4 cups miniature marshmallows
5 cups KELLOGG'S RICE KRISPIES cereal

1. Melt margarine in large saucepan over low heat. Add marshmallows and cook, stirring constantly, until marshmallows are melted and mixture is very syrupy. Remove from heat.
2. Add Rice Krispies cereal. Stir until well coated.
3. Using buttered spatula or waxed paper, press mixture evenly and firmly in buttered 13 x 9 x 2-inch pan. Cut into squares when cool.

Yield: 24 squares, 2 x 2 inches

NOTE: For thicker squares, press warm mixture into buttered 9 x 9 x 2-inch pan. Best results are obtained when using fresh marshmallows. About 2 cups marshmallow creme may be substituted for marshmallows. Add to melted margarine and cook over low heat about 5 minutes, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Proceed as directed in step 2 above.

JADO May Lose State Lease To Better Offer

By The Associated Press

The JADO Investment Co. apparently would not get an opportunity to renegotiate a controversial lease with the state if another firm offers the Labor Department comparable, cheaper space.

The State Department of Labor began advertising Tuesday for "suitable alternate office space" for its division operations in Omaha, now located in a building leased from JADO.

The JADO lease came under attack during the recent gubernatorial campaign when critics of Gov. J. James Exon questioned whether it involved political cronyism. One of the owners of JADO, Michael Jackson of Omaha, was a former Exon campaign worker.

A spokesman for Exon said if a new proposal offers the state acceptable, cheaper space, he did not believe JADO would get a chance to renegotiate.

"I would anticipate that if these proposals we are accepting now lead to an offer of other space that meets the federal requirements, and is cheaper, then we would recommend that the JADO lease be canceled and the new facilities accepted," said William Hoppner, administrative assistant to the governor.

Hoppner acknowledged concern expressed by some, including State Sen. Shirley Marsh, that cancelling a state lease might hurt the state's credit in the future, when bonds are needed to underwrite other new facilities.

"Again, I would anticipate we would recommend accepting a proposal for cheaper space, if it met the required specifications," Hoppner said. "And, I would not anticipate that JADO will be among those submitting new proposals."

Republicans alleged the lease was negotiated in comparatively closed circumstances, and questioned whether the state could have made a better deal for itself.

Exon denied any favoritism was involved, said the charges were politically inspired, and said the state could cancel the lease if it wished.

In addition, Exon ordered a committee formed to search for cheaper space in Omaha for the Labor Department offices.

Ironically, the legislature's Appropriations Committee Tuesday approved the report of a subcommittee which investigated the lease. The report made no allegation of illegal activity. The Appropriations Committee also considered legislation designed to beef up requirements for competitive bids on future state contracts.

The Labor Department's classified advertisements for space proposals were carried in Lincoln and Omaha newspapers. The advertisements said the department needs a building with 30,000 square feet, including 10,000 square feet on the ground floor. The building also would have to have adequate parking and be accessible to the public.

The state seeks a 13-year lease, with a provision for a lease agreement cancellation clause in the event that the legislature declines to appropriate rent. It's that clause which Exon says would permit the state to cancel the JADO lease. The attorney general has agreed with that assessment.

The lease is paid for by federal funds. The state currently pays JADO $133,488 per year, with the state providing its own maintenance and paying for other incidental costs.

State Lease Bidding Bill Prepared

The Legislature's Appropriations Committee Tuesday decided to submit proposed legislation requiring competitive bidding for state leases and contracts to the Department of Administrative Services for its review.

"Let's see whether they have any input . . . whether they think the bill is workable," Chairman Richard Marvel of Hastings suggested.

The bill was prepared by a subcommittee headed by Sen. Robert Clark of Sidney as a result of the recent controversy over the Department of Labor's lease of office space from JADO Investment Co. in Omaha.

That lease was negotiated with a firm whose partners include Mike Jackson, a former campaign worker for Gov. J. James Exon.

Marvel charged that the deal smacked of political cronyism in his unsuccessful campaign to upset Exon at the polls last month.

Current state law does not require competitive bidding for state leases and contracts. It does require bidding for purchases of $5,000 or more.

The proposed bill includes the $5,000 minimum, and requires competitive bidding if more than one supplier is available.

Bids may be negotiated on purchases, leases or contracts between $2,500 and $5,000 if one supplier is available or the item is of a unique nature.

Open market purchases whould be authorized for items of less than $2,500 if required for special or emergency uses.

The state building administrator would need to approve contracts for office space, under terms of the bill. Gubernatorial approval would also continue to be required.

Although such a bill could not take effect until next year, Sen. John Savage of Omaha suggested that the Labor Department lease agreement be withdrawn and its proposal for office space in Omaha be "thrown open again" for competitive bidding.

Polar Bear Is Safe

Moscow (AP) — Soviet scientists say the polar bear will not now become extinct. Tass reports that Soviet scientists estimate the current population of the country's polar bears at 12,000 to 20,000. The Russians banned hunting or capture of the animals in 1956.

Sen. DeCamp Hopes To Attend Meeting

Omaha (UPI) — State Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh, hospitalized here following surgery, said Tuesday he hoped to be able to attend a meeting of the Legislative Council in Lincoln Wednesday.

DeCamp, who was injured in a National Guard training exercise near O'Neill and in a two-vehicle accident in Sheldon, Iowa, earlier this year, underwent surgery Friday for repairs to his left elbow.

He said it was his "sixth operation in the last five or six months" as the result of the two accidents.

DeCamp said he felt it was important that he attend the Legislative Council meeting if his physician will permit him to leave the hospital for a day.

He said he believes 1975 will be the year the Legislature begins a new era.

"I think the 1975 Legislature is going to mark the beginning of a new era in the way the Unicameral operates, in the leadership of the Legislature and the way business is handled," he said. "And most important is the position the Legislature takes in its function of state government in providing a check and balance system with the executive the judicial branches."

DeCamp said the Unicameral has not fulfilled its true function in the balance on power.

"By virtue of the fact the Legislature has always been so fragmented, unorganized and somewhat dominated by individuals, it frequently lacked legislative ability," DeCamp said. "I think 1975 will see the re-establishment of the Legislature's balance of power in the overall operation of government. If it is not re-established, it will be pretty sad for state government."

Parker Wins Kiwanis Club Award

Public service to Donald I. Parker is merely his way of "paying his dues to society"—so says Parker who will be recognized for his effort Friday when he receives the Kiwanis Medal for Distinguished Service.

Parker has now retired from most of his leadership responsibilities at Security Mutual Insurance Co., still holding the title of vice chairman of the board.

But he continues in an active role in Lincoln community and civic affairs, as he has since moving to the Capital City in 1938.

Last year he was appointed to the Lincoln Housing Authority by Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf with the observation from the mayor:

"He (Parker) has much compassion for the low income."

Donald I. Parker

Chamber Past President

A past president of the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce, Parker continues to serve on two Chamber committees, and two years ago headed the organization's arm into the social concerns of the community, the Forward Lincoln Committee.

Parker served as a director, and for two years president of the YMCA board. He chaired the board of the YMCA's west central five-state area for three years where he earned the "Outstanding Leadership Award," in 1958.

He served seven years on the YMCA's national board. Parker said one of the highlights of that service was his participation in the reorganization of the national staff.

He served three years as chairman of the Lincoln County Chapter of the American Red Cross and continues as a member of the executive committee.

He has also had leadership positions in the United Fund and Lincoln Community Services.

He has served as both a member and chairman of both the Board of Trustees and the Board of Deacons of First Plymouth Congregational Church.

He currently is a member of the Mayor's Committee on Urban Design and Natural Beauty. He also is a member of two Chamber of Commerce committees.

He headed Nebraska Wesleyan University's "Great Teachers Program" in 1961 and has served on the NWU board of governors.

He has been a member of Kiwanis for 46 years, 33 years with perfect attendance.

As Kiwanis Club president in 1949, he promoted a program to move Camp Kiwanis out of the flood area of the Blue River to higher ground.

District Improved

While he was governor of the Nebraska-Iowa District, he moved the district from a bottom position in the nation to one of prominence in a number of categories, especially boys' and girls' work.

In 1957 he was elected a trustee of the Kiwanis international board where he served until 1961.

Starting as an actuary with Security Mutual, Parker rose from assistant secretary, secretary and vice president to the board of directors. In 1957, he was named executive vice president and became president of the company in 1963. He served in that capacity until 1972.

During Parker's presidency the company's business in force grew from a little more than $300 million to almost $900 million.

A native of Olmstead Falls, Parker is a graduate of the University of Michigan.

In 1929 he was married to the former Phyllis Nore. The Parkers are the parents of three children. Shirley Ann Harden, Castle Rock, Colo.; Carol Louise Powell, Lincoln; and Dale Irving Parker, Glenview, Ill.

They also have five grandchildren.

Ed Janike, president of the Kiwanis Club of Lincoln in announcing the Medal recipient said, "Parker is the kind of man who has responded to a number of tasks and carried them out without flair. Few people know the contributions he's made to the community. He's been a great community leader for Lincoln and Nebraska for many years."

Cut Food Waste: Buy On Credit

Farm Editor

Norfolk — Dr. Duane Acker, vice chancellor of the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources at the University of Nebraska, told members of the Nebraska Livestock Feeders Association here Tuesday that a system of credit cards for use in buying groceries might cut down on food waste in stores and reduce resentment by consumers about food price increases.

"We all use credit cards and we buy things like cars on credit so we don't notice the price. The reason that food prices hit us between the eyes is that we have to dig down into our pocketbooks and lay out the cold cash," he said.

Acker suggested that the use of credit cards would mean buying more food during the week rather than the present practice of buying on weekends after the family paycheck has been received.

"This could reduce the amount of produce and meats that have to be thrown out because they have deteriorated in the store," he added.

Faculty Landed

Acker made a strong pitch for agricultural research that seemed to be aimed at a half-dozen state senators in his audience. He also had lavish praise for the faculty at the Institute of Agriculture.

"We have more county agents in Nebraska who have won special recognition awards than all the other states in the Big 8 put together. Our faculty at the agricultural college has published more data per scientist in 1973 than any other college in the Big 8. This is the best way to measure the effectiveness of the research program," he stated.

Acker told the farmers that "93% of the graduates of the vocational technical school at Curtis and 85% of the graduates of the College of Agriculture in Lincoln remained in Nebraska, attributing directly to the economy of the state."

Milton Brown, president of the National Livestock Feeders, told the Nebraska group that the increased numbers of cattle in the nation was a major factor in pricing problems faced by livestock producers.

"Beef slaughter is at a record high, hog production is at a very high level, and even with the supply of cattle in feedlots down, our consumers will probably consume record amounts of red beef this year. This is occurring at the same time that inflation has reduced the buying power of the consumer and the threat of losing a job is reducing the consumers desire to purchase anything," he said.

Brown noted the economic impact of livestock numbers is hard on producers. "Cows are being sold at giveaway prices, feeder cattle are way down in price with yearlings bringing more money per pound than calves for the first time in my memory," he said.

'Ray Of Hope'

Brown noted that "there is a ray of hope on the horizon since President Ford moved to halt the exports of Canadian meat to the United States.

"This alone won't be the salvation of the livestock industry, but in the long run it will surely help," he said.

James C. McNamara, a trade specialist with the State Department, told the feeders the U.S. government is seeking new agreements on guidelines for trading with other nations. This program is expected to result in a guaranteed market for producers of exports and a guaranteed supply for importers, he explained.

"The discussions about agricultural trade are particularly difficult, but we are making some progress. There are more than 800 identifiable non-tariff trade barriers around the world," he said.

McNamara cited several examples of non-trade barriers including special requirements for odd-sized cans for canned food shipments, restrictions on labeling of exported products, export subsidies, production subsidies and other requirements that do not have a direct relationship to the price of the product but prevent free movement of products in world trade.

Feeders Crown Queen

Norfolk — Jeri Meyer, 19, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Meyer of St. Libory, was crowned queen of the Nebraska Livestock Feeders Association at the annual banquet here Tuesday night.

A 4-H member for nine years, Miss Meyer had projects in market beef, showmanship, livestock judging, rifle safety and marksmanship.

Active in church work, she is a Sunday school teacher, member of the choir and church organist at Zion Lutheran Church at St. Libory.

Devaney Hosts Cerebral Palsy Benefit Dance

Bob Devaney, University of Nebraska athletic director, will host his Annual Benefit Dance for Cerebral Palsy on Sunday at the ballroom of the Lincoln Hilton Hotel.

Three groups, Timberline, Windsong and Johnny Ray Gomez will play for the 8:30 to 12 p.m. benefit. Local businesses are donating door prizes. Tickets will be sold at the door.

Proceeds will go to the services of United Cerebral Palsy of Southeast Nebraska.

Pretoria, South Africa (AP) — The Department of Statistics says that 27% of all white marriages in South Africa end in divorce.

Three Slain In Sioux City

SIOUX CITY, Iowa (AP)— Three Sioux City residents were found shot to death in their home Tuesday, and authorities believe they were killed as they tried to flee from their assailants.

The dead were identified by police as Jesse Hanni, 26, Ernest Isom, 27, and Isom's wife, Freta Bostic Isom, 24.

Woodbury County Medical Examiner Thomas Coriden said the three victims, who apparently had been dead as long as five days, were found on the first floor of the house they had rented early last month.

The victims all had been shot in the back, apparently as they fled their assailant, said Detective Bureau Capt. Frank O'Keefe.

Authorities found one pistol in a lunch bucket in a car outside the house. Another handgun was found in a closet. But there was no indication if either weapon was used in the slayings, nor was a motive for the crime immediately apparent.

Hanni and Isom had not reported for work at the Port Neal construction site of Iowa Public Service Company since Sunday, authorities said.

The bodies were discovered by Isom's mother and a friend, Mrs. Dorothy Stewart, who went to the house after the two men's employers said the workers did not show up at the construction site.

Authorities said the woman was found on the living room floor, with bare feet and clad in bathrobe.

Hanni was fully clothed and wearing an overcoat. His body, too, was on the floor.

Authorities said Mrs. Isom was pregnant, and was due to deliver in April.

Isom and Hanni had recently worked a construction job in Arkansas City, Kan., investigators said.

Review Requested

Des Moines (UPI) — Gov. Robert D. Ray said he has asked the American Correctional Association to send a team of experts to review the situation at the State Penitentiary at Fort Madison.

May Be Illegal, But Liquor Licenses Do Sell

Omaha (AP) — It may be illegal to buy a bottle club or liquor license, but some Douglas County commissioners and others in the liquor business report that they are sold.

A major reason for license sales is the lid which both the Omaha City Council and the Douglas County Board have placed on issuance of new licenses.

The records show that councilmen and commissioners sometimes recommend the transfer of a license from one business to another, but rarely do they recommend issuance of a new license

County Commissioner John J. Cavanaugh, chairman of the board's liquor committee, said: "What you do is buy 'goodwill' and a bunch of crummy furniture usually."

The license goes along with the goodwill and furniture.

One businessman, who asked not to be identified by name, said the most expensive type, a Class C license, is selling for $17,500 to $20,000.

That license permits sale of liquor and beer for consumption both on and off the premises. The license is limited for use only in the city.

The businessman said an on-sale beer license usually costs $6,000 to $8,000, and a package liquor license costs about $5,000.

Stillman Hazeltine, president of Omaha-Douglas County Liquor Retailers Inc., said he does not think there is a going price for licenses.

Hazeltine said the price is strictly a matter of negotiation between two parties. Some license holder may want to get out of business quickly and sell for a low price, he said. Another may want to get into business badly and pay a high price.

Hazeltine noted that an agreement with a bar owner to acquire his license is no guarantee that the buyer will receive the license. The decision on transfer is up to the State Liquor Control Commission, on recommendation from a county board and a city council.

Alliance Man Cuts Bars, Escapes

Alliance (AP) — An Alliance man awaiting trial on burglary charges escaped from the Alliance City Jail Monday night, according to Box Butte County Sheriff Don Underwood.

Underwood said James W Howard, 25, was being held in connection with a burglary at a local tavern last week, when he apparently sawed through the bars and steel mesh in the jail window, then lowered himself two floors to freedom.

Underwood said Howard used hack saw blades brought into the jail by an outside source

Scale Modelers From Kearney Win 7 Awards

Engineering Students Plan Holiday Party For Charity

Engineering students at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln are throwing a Christmas party for charity Thursday at Valentino's North.

The party is open to the public with a contribution at the door. Gifts will be distributed to the Children's Center for Youth Development, the Cedars Home for Children and the Lancaster County Public Welfare Department, according to chairman Gary Reichow, a senior from Lincoln.

"In addition to cash donations, we would like to have food, new or used clothing, records, models, toys, paper and pencils or other gifts for children," Reichow said.

Dancing and games will begin at 8 p.m. KFOR disc jockey Greg Jackson will be playing music, and soft drinks are free.

Sponsoring groups are Tau Beta Pi, engineering honorary, Nebraska Blueprint Magazine, Eta Kappa Nu, electrical engineering honorary, Pi Tau Sigma, mechanical engineering honorary, Engineering Toastmasters and the student branches of IEEE, ASME and ASCE.

Gas Rate Hike Asked In G.I.

Grand Island (AP) — Last week it was Kearney, and now it's time for Grand Island residents to get the bad news.

The Northwest Public Service Co., NWPS Monday asked the Grand Island City Council to approve a natural gas rate hike for retail users.

Loyal Harder, local NWPS manager, appeared before the council to ask for a 4.5% rate boost. Harder said higher labor, material and interest costs prompted the request.

Actually, if approved, Grand Island residents will be seeing a double boost.

NWPS has already notified natural gas users of a rate increase to offset a jump in the rates from its wholesaler, Kansas-Nebraska Natural Gas.

The hike to compensate for the new wholesale rate, which went into effect Dec. 1, will mean residents using natural gas for heating purposes will see their bills jump about 53 cents per month.

The 4.5% boost is in addition to the wholesale rate, and combined, the same residents will see their bills go up by about $1.27 per month.

Only one councilman, John Ditter, opposed a motion to bring the rate increase request to the council for final action. Ditter said the request runs contrary to President Ford's Whip Inflation Now Campaign.

If approved, the 4.5% rate increase will go into effect Jan. 1. The council is expected to approve the request.

Death Claims J. Hall Dillon Of Long Pine

Ainsworth (UPI) — A veteran Nebraska cattle rancher died Tuesday at Brown County Hospital in Ainsworth.

J. Hall Dillon, 78, of Long Pine was a longtime member of the Nebrawka Stock Growers Assn., the Sandhill Cattle Assn. and served as Brown County commissioner some 32 years.

Dillon is survived by his wife, Florence, and a son, Kenneth, both of Long Pine, and a daughter, Mrs. Richard Lackaff of Bassett.

New Student Policy OKd In District 145

Waverly — The District 145 Board of Education has approved a more comprehensive policy on student use of drugs, alcohol and tobacco, defining procedures designed to protect student rights.

Supt. Dale Siefkes said the new policy will be mailed to parents.

The policy provides for inspection of school property, turning in any contraband found, recommendations to obtain search warrants if time permits and permission of the student to search, and student rights and due process for any infractions leading to suspension or expulsion.

Pressing criminal charges against a student may never be the reason to search a student or school property the student uses, Siefkes said.

The board also reveiwed but took no action on protecting the confidentiality of student records, now governed by a new federal law being hotly debated and subject to possible change.

Although "to my knowledge, we have not had a request" to see the school's student files, "we are trying to safeguard" them according to the intent of the law, Siefkes said. "We would hope that we can get the policy firmed up very quickly."

Board members also discussed for later consideration revising policies on procedures and circumstances school officials must account for in due process for student rights.

Jim Norsworthy, social studies department head, discussed at length with the board the philosophy, approach, methods and ideas the board could use in revising the social studies curriculum.

Seventh-graders in District 145 take an innovative anthropology course, and 8th-graders, geography. In the phase-in program revision, the district will use projects and a "hands-on, inquiry approach, as opposed to a presentation of facts and figures about social studies," Siefkes said.

One possible alternative, he said, is to combine history courses into a block at the 9th- and 10th-grade levels, followed by courses on topical subjects in a quarter system.

The district is also beginning a study of instructional models to use in the junior high grades. The board approved summer staff work to update the individualized math program offered to some students in grades seven and eight.

May Be Illegal, But Liquor Licenses Do Sell

Omaha (AP) — It may be illegal to buy a bottle club or liquor license, but some Douglas County commissioners and others in the liquor business report that they are sold.

A major reason for license sales is the lid which both the Omaha City Council and the Douglas County Board have placed on issuance of new licenses.

The records show that councilmen and commissioners sometimes recommend the transfer of a license from one business to another, but rarely do they recommend issuance of a new license.

County Commissioner John J. Cavanaugh, chairman of the board's liquor committee, said: "What you do is buy 'goodwill' and a bunch of crummy furniture usually."

The license goes along with the goodwill and furniture.

One businessman, who asked not to be identified by name, said the most expensive type, a Class C license, is selling for $17,500 to $20,000.

That license permits sale of liquor and beer for consumption both on and off the premises. The license is limited for use only in the city.

The businessman said an on-sale beer license usually costs $6,000 to $8,000, and a package liquor license costs about $5,000.

Stillman Hazeltine, president of Omaha-Douglas County Liquor Retailers Inc., said he does not think there is a going price for licenses.

Hazeltine said the price is strictly a matter of negotiation between two parties. Some license holder may want to get out of business quickly and sell for a low price, he said. Another may want to get into business badly and pay a high price.

Hazeltine noted that an agreement with a bar owner to acquire his license is no guarantee that the buyer will receive the license. The decision on transfer is up to the State Liquor Control Commission, on recommendation from a county board and a city council.

Alliance Man Cuts Bars, Escapes

Underwood said James W. Howard, 25, was being held in connection with a burglary at a local tavern last week, when he apparently sawed through the bars and steel mesh in the jail window, then lowered himself two floors to freedom.

Engineering Students Plan Holiday Party For Charity

Engineering students at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln are throwing a Christmas party for charity Thursday at Valentino's North.

The party is open to the public with a contribution at the door. Gifts will be distributed to the Children's Center for Youth Development, the Cedars Home for Children and the Lancaster County Public Welfare Department, according to chairman Gary Reichow, a senior from Lincoln.

"In addition to cash donations, we would like to have food, new or used clothing, records, models, toys, paper and pencils or other gifts for children," Reichow said.

Dancing and games will begin at 8 p.m. KFOR disc jockey Greg Jackson will be playing music, and soft drinks are free.

Sponsoring groups are Tau Beta Pi, engineering honorary, Nebraska Blueprint Magazine, Eta Kappa Nu, electrical engineering honorary, Pi Tau Sigma, mechanical engineering honorary, Engineering Toastmasters and the student branches of IEEE, ASME and ASCE.

Nitrate Content Said 'Alarming'

Four counties included in a study conducted by the Central Platte Natural Resources District, in cooperation with Kearney State College and the Conservation and Survey Division of the University of Nebraska, are eastern Buffalo, Hall, Merrick and a portion of Platte counties.

Of wells sampled in eastern Buffalo County, it was learned that 24 per cent had nitrate levels over ten parts per million, the optium safe level set by the U. S. Public Health Service.

Hall County wells tested showed 30 per cent of them in excess of the ten parts per million of nitrate. Merrick County samplings indicated that 50 per cent of the wells had high levels of nitrate concentration.

A portion of Platte County, which lies in the Central Platte Natural Resources District, indicated 82 per cent of the wells had high levels of nitrate in the water.

Dr. Roy Spaulding of the University of Nebraska's Conservation and Survey Division, who is a water chemist, said the first large zone of high nitrate concentration stretches from east of Kearney to just south of Shelton. It is bounded on the south by the north channel of the Platte River and on the north by the Wood River.

A second large zone is totally within Hall County and extends two miles south of Wood River to about six miles northeast of that community and appears to be about six miles wide.

Spaulding said the water in Merrick County zone contains so much nitrogen that the extent of high nitrate zones is more difficult to determine.

Several smaller zones of concentration also exist in several areas near the Platte River in the four counties. more

The study has shown that the trend toward increasing nitrate concentrations has jumped sharply over the last 13 years.

Possible sources of pollution are runoff water of barnyards and feedlots, as well as from septic tanks and commercial agricultural fertilizers.

The published report of the study points no finger at any one cause of the problem, but further studies are needed to track the source of the nitrate concentrations, Spaulding said.

He said an isotope ratio mass spectaomer, a highly sophiscated analytical device, is needed for a possible three-year study to get to the bottom of the problem.

Cost of the machine is $60,000.

The Environmental Protection Agency has turned down his request for grant money to purchase such a machine. There is no such machine available in the state at the present, he said.

The Water Quality Committee of the Central Platte NRD is backing further research into the water problem, but it is not sure how much money it can put into the work.

The Central Platte is starting a program to educate and make the public aware of the need for more research into the nitrate problem.

Spaulding pointed out that present technology does not exist which would allow widespread removal of nitrate from drinking water. And, even if such equipment was available, he said, extraction of nitrate from the drinking water is not the answer.

The solution, he said, is to locate the source of the contamination, prevent it and reduce the level of concentration to an acceptable level.

Potential health hazards have been linked to high levels of nitrate in drinking water.

One condition that could come about is an affliction known as cyanosis, which occurs in infants. The nitrate reacts with the blood to reduce its oxygen carrying capacity.

This condition also can occur in baby pigs, which ingest nitrate through the mother's blood.

Another possible hazard is stomach cancer, which women of child-bearing age and men and women over 50 years of age can have.

James Stuart Jr.

James Stuart Named Head Of Foundation

James Stuart Jr. will be taking the place of Harry "Pete" Peterson as president of the Nebraska Human Resources Research Foundation. Peterson, who asked to step down for personal reasons, will remain as a member of the board of trustees.

Stuart, a Lincoln native, has been executive vice president of the National Bank of Commerce since December 1973. While attending the University of Nebraska, Stuart was a student counselor for the foundation, which is now in its 26th year of developing leadership in University students and Lincoln youth.

Stuart is also a trustee and member of the finance committee of the University of Nebraska Foundation, board member of the Lincoln Foundation, a member of Rotary International, the Lincoln Racquet Club and chairman of the Stuart Foundation. He is married and the father of three children.

Water Cascades Through Omaha Brandeis Store

Omaha (AP) — A broken water pipe sent thousands of gallons of water cascading from the 10th floor on down through every floor to the basement of the downtown Brandeis store in Omaha Tuesday.

Store officials ordered shoppers and store personnel from the building while three companies of firefighters and other workmen attempted to stop the water.

Marge Freeman, a clerk in the store's men's department, said, "I've been here 17 years and never saw anything like this. It's just horrible."

A fire department spokesman said there was rust in the water and the break may have been caused by a worn out pipe.

Steel Companies To Be Paid Off

New York (AP) — U.S. Steel Corp. will receive about $83 million and Bethlehem Steel Corp. about $17 million for iron-ore properties slated to be nationalized in Venezuela, officials of the South American country said.

"But a decision hasn't been reached on the form of payment," said Argenis Gamboa, one of the two Venezuelan government representatives taking part in the negotiations with the two companies.

Omaha Road Builders Fear More Layoffs

Omaha (AP) — Some Omaha road builders say they fear substantial layoffs in 1975 unless there are changes in the state highway program.

Philip Cain, vice president of Dugdale Construction Co., said his firm was forced to lay off half its 200 employes at the beginning of the construction season last April because of lack of work.

"Next April we'll probably be down to one-third, possibly half, of what we have now. This contracting situation is very, very critical," Cain said.

Cain and other contractors said they may not rehire in the spring because of the shortages of highway construction money.

Nebraska is seeking court action requiring release of about $35 million in impounded federal money due the state. One-third of the 1974-75 highway program depends on getting that money, according to an attorney for the State Department of Justice.

V. K. Parks, president of Parks Construction Co., said his firm recently laid off from 60 to 80 of its 150 employes.

"We've finished our highway construction season, and it's layoff time anyway," he said.

But whether the employes will be rehired in the spring will depend on the amount of business. "It doesn't look too good right now, but we don't know from one day to the next what it is going to be," Parks said.

He said his firm's highway work force has dwindled from about 50 in 1973 to 10 this year. "And," he said, "we don't have any (employes) under contract for next year."

Malcolm Young, executive secretary of the Eastern Nebraska Heavy Highway Contractors Association, said except for construction of the North Freeway, "I know of no other big highway projects in Omaha."

He said he has been told by Iowa officials that while the state has a number of highway projects "on the shelf" which are designed and ready to go, there is no money to pay the contractors.

He also said that although the amount of available highway money hasn't changed substantially in Iowa, the cost of materials, such as concrete and steel, has about doubled.

Young said similar conditions exist in Nebraska, and added, "I don't see anything in the future that should bring an increase" in state highway construction.

Contractors also say the number of local sanitary and improvement district projects has been sharply curtailed..

Richard J. Kullman, vice president of Vrana Paving Co., said the firm expects to cut its 50-man force to about half in 1975.

"The reason," he said, "is the lack of new houses and apartments. No one is building new streets to build new houses.

"There might be some improvement if the demand for houses picks up."

No Charges Filed In Doniphan Death

Grand Island (AP) — The Hall County attorney's office Tuesday announced that no charges will be filed in connection with the shooting death of a Doniphan youth last week.

The victim, James Clark Jr., 15, son of Mr. and Mrs. James G. Clark, was shot in the back of the head as he and two other youths were riding in a car in the Doniphan area last Wednesday evening. The death has been ruled accidental.

Investigators said Wesley Barker, 16, was the driver of the car, while Clark was a passenger in the front seat. The third youth, Finley Plentychief, was riding in the back set.

Plentychief was handling a .22-caliber pistol, when the weapon accidentaly discharged, officers said.

American Legion, Auxiliary Meet Set

Grand Island (UPI) — The national commander of the American Legion will keynote the 42nd annual mid-year Nebraska Legion and Auxiliary conference this weekend in Grand Island. James Wagonseller of Lancaster, Ohio, will speak to a Sunday banquet on the Vietnam veterans readjustment act and President Ford's amnesty program. An estimated 500 persons are scheduled to attend the conference which begins with committee meetings Friday.

Fatal Blaze Ruled Accidental

Omaha (AP) — A fire in a north Omaha apartment Sunday that killed a two-year-old boy has been ruled an accident, chief arson investigator Horton Dahlquist said. He reported the bedroom blaze apparently was started by the boy's 6-year-old sister who was playing with matches. The boy was Antonio Williams.

Tri-State Plans Center In Sidney

Sidney (UPI) — A Colorado based power supplier has announced plans to locate an operation center at the Sioux Army Depot at Sidney. E.J. Ballard, Tri-State Generation and Transmission Association general manager, said the North Glenn, Colo., firm has purchased a 90,000 square foot warehouse and 20 acres of land. The purchase price from the Sidney Warehouse and Industrial Sites, Inc., was not disclosed. Ballard said the facility will employ about 16 persons by 1978 and will be in partial use this winter. Tri-State supplies power to Wyoming, the Nebraska Panhandle and northeast Colorado.

Gas Rate Hike Asked In G.I.

Grand Island (AP) — Last week it was Kearney, and now it's time for Grand Island residents to get the bad news.

The Northwest Public Service Co., NWPS Monday asked the Grand Island City Council to approve a natural gas rate hike for retail users.

Loyal Harder, local NWPS manager, appeared before the council to ask for a 4.5% rate boost. Harder said higher labor, material and interest costs prompted the request.

Actually, if approved, Grand Island residents will be seeing a double boost.

NWPS has already notified natural gas users of a rate increase to offset a jump in the rates from its wholesaler, Kansas-Nebraska Natural Gas.

The hike to compensate for the new wholesale rate, which went into effect Dec. 1, will mean residents using natural gas for heating purposes will see their bills jump about 53 cents per month.

The 4.5% boost is in addition to the wholesale rate, and combined, the same residents will see their bills go up by about $1.27 per month.

Only one councilman, John Ditter, opposed a motion to bring the rate increase request to the council for final action. Ditter said the request runs contrary to President Ford's Whip Inflation Now Campaign.

If approved, the 4.5% rate increase will go into effect Jan. 1. The council is expected to approve the request.

New Student Policy OKd In District 145

Waverly — The District 145 Board of Education has approved a more comprehensive policy on student use of drugs, alcohol and tobacco, defining procedures designed to protect student rights.

Supt. Dale Siefkes said the new policy will be mailed to parents.

The policy provides for inspection of school property, turning in any contraband found, recommendations to obtain search warrants if time permits and permission of the student to search, and student rights and due process for any infractions leading to suspension or expulsion.

Pressing criminal charges against a student may never be the reason to search a student or school property the student uses, Siefkes said.

The board also reveiwed but took no action on protecting the confidentiality of student records, now governed by a new federal law being hotly debated and subject to possible change.

Although "to my knowledge, we have not had a request" to see the school's student files, "we are trying to safeguard" them according to the intent of the law, Siefkes said. "We would hope that we can get the policy firmed up very quickly."

Board members also discussed for later consideration revising policies on procedures and circumstances school officials must account for in due process for student rights.

Jim Norsworthy, social studies department head, discussed at length with the board the philosophy, approach, methods and ideas the board could use in revising the social studies curriculum.

Seventh-graders in District 145 take an innovative anthropology course, and 8th-graders, geography. In the phase-in program revision, the district will use projects and a "hands-on, inquiry approach, as opposed to a presentation of facts and figures about social studies," Siefkes said.

One possible alternative, he said, is to combine history courses into a block at the 9th- and 10th-grade levels, followed by courses on topical subjects in a quarter system.

The district is also beginning a study of instructional models to use in the junior high grades. The board approved summer staff work to update the individualized math program offered to some students in grades seven and eight.

By GEORGIA LOWENBERG

All about me, as far as my eyes can see,
The fields repose proudly in their autumnal splendor.
It is as if the farm lands were a patch-work quilt
Fashioned from golden ochre-shades and oranges that burn bright,
Even as the high-noon sun in a cloudless sky.
I know that, from the first warm days of spring's awakening—
And all the long, hot summertime through—
There were, whenever the soil was workable,
Men and women and children tilling the earth.
I sat upon the honeysuckle-bordered porch steps
And, day after day, looked out to see the succession of changes
Wrought by those who so bravely toiled—
Bare-headed and sweating—beneath the vivid skies.
I watched patiently as the endless acres of Nebraska country land
Were plowed and sowed and tended to; and now, months later,
I see the harvest in all of its glory.

From the same porch steps,
Where the flower vines now lie withered beside me,
And the ground is still white from last night's frost,
I feel the biting chill of the northern winds
And catch the sight of snow clouds
Piling up darkly along the horizon.
In the barns and silos and root cellars
Are stored the fruits of the past season,
Long ago reaped and brought home.
Beyond, the vast fields of barren land
Sprawl neglected and dormant—even lonely—
Awaiting the fertile seeds of yet another crop,
The quiet and sudden birth
Of the hearty, rich greenness the farmer calls life;
And thus the silent promise, the long anticipation,
The hoped-for fulfillment of a new harvest time
In the cycle of seasons that rule this land.

'Let The Buyer Beware' Good Motto For Auction Goers To Remember

"Let the buyer beware" is the motto that should be drummed into everyone who's addicted to bidding at country auctions. Here are some simple rules for your protection.

Never bid on anything you haven't examined — carefully — before the sale.

Don't be carried away by competitive bidding. Never bid more than you decided it was worth when you examined it.

Don't buy white elephants. If your living room has a nine-foot ceiling, where are you going to put the ten-foot-high armoire that caught your fancy? A tape measure is a good thing to carry in your pocket or purse when you're on a tour of inspection before the auction.

If you're buying something you plan to use, make sure it's in usable shape. If the rocker slats are missing and the mahogany bureau's minus a foot, they'll have to be replaced. If you're not an expert cabinet-maker, the cost of repair has to be added to the cost of your "find".

Learn to spot fake furniture antiques. Old carving is never sharp-edged because years of dusting, cleaning and rubbing smooth the edges.

Opening lead - seven of clubs.

Kenya finished 20th among the 33 nations in the 1968 Olympiad, which was an exceptionally good showing for a country with limited experience in international competition.

Moreover, their team established a reputation as giant-killers when they defeated the United States, Australia, Switzerland, France and Iceland, all of whom finished in the top ten.

This deal arose when Canada and Kenya clashed in the very last session of the round robin. The Canadians were sorely in need of a win, for otherwise they might not qualify for the semifinals, and they got it by the narrow margin of 12 victory points to 8, even though they started badly on this deal.

Murray and Kehela, who performed the iron-man stunt by playing all 38 sessions without relief, were East-West, and Amin and Ajania were North-South for Kenya. Murray bid three clubs, overcalled by Ajania with three spades. When Kehela jumped to five clubs, Amin raised to five spades.

The price was exactly right, for Ajania made the obvious eleven tricks for 450 points.

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	3♣	3♠
Pass	4♠	Pass	Pass
5♣	Pass	Pass	Dble

Acharya's reaction to three spades was notably different from Kehela's. He passed the spade overcall and came out of his shell only after North had bid game.

Whatever the merits of his strategy, there is no doubt that in the actual case Acharya achieved the better result. When he bid five clubs, he presented both opponents with the problem of whether or not to push on, and when South elected to double, Walimohamed finished down one for a gain to Kenya of 350 points.

Use Coffee Pot To Make Tea

The British traditionally used loose tea for tea-making, believing a brewed tea was better than tea made with tea bags, as American usually make it.

The tea bag method is easier though, right? Wrong. Not if you own a coffee percolator. Freshly-brewed tea made from loose tea is simple to make in a coffee percolator.

Why do it ? For one thing, there's usually a broader selection of loose teas available for exciting, new tastes. It is simple to even combine loose teas to reduce a spicy flavor to just a hint of something special and extra to suit your own taste.

First, make sure the percolator is clean. Rinse it well with hot water and wipe the interior dry, including the basket.

Second, put in the amount of cold water needed to brew the number of cups desired.

Third, add loose tea to the basket of the perc that normally holds coffee. Now plug it in and let the percolator do the rest.

It takes a lot less loose tea than is indicated in the instructions on the container when using a percolator. With the flavor setting at "mild," nine cups of brewed tea require just three level teaspoons of loose tea. One or two pots will give you the combination that suits your taste.

Nitrate Content Said 'Alarming'

Grand Island (AP) — It was revealed at a public meeting Monday that nitrate levels in four counties in central Nebraska have reached alarming proportions.

Four counties included in a study conducted by the Central Platte Natural Resources District, in cooperation with Kearney State College and the Conservation and Survey Division of the University of Nebraska, are eastern Buffalo, Hall, Merrick and a portion of Platte counties.

Of wells sampled in eastern Buffalo County, it was learned that 24 per cent had nitrate levels over ten parts per million, the optium safe level set by the U. S. Public Health Service.

Hall County wells tested showed 30 per cent of them in excess of the ten parts per million of nitrate. Merrick County samplings indicated that 50 per cent of the wells had high levels of nitrate concentration.

A portion of Platte County, which lies in the Central Platte Natural Resources District, indicated 82 per cent of the wells had high levels of nitrate in the water.

Dr. Roy Spaulding of the University of Nebraska's Conservation and Survey Division, who is a water chemist, said the first large zone of high nitrate concentration stretches from east of Kearney to just south of Shelton. It is bounded on the south by the north channel of the Platte River and on the north by the Wood River.

A second large zone is totally within Hall County and extends two miles south of Wood River to about six miles northeast of that community and appears to be about six miles wide.

Spaulding said the water in Merrick County zone contains so much nitrogen that the extent of high nitrate zones is more difficult to determine.

Several smaller zones of concentration also exist in several areas near the Platte River in the four counties. more

The study has shown that the trend toward increasing nitrate concentrations has jumped sharply over the last 13 years.

Possible sources of pollution are runoff water of barnyards and feedlots, as well as from septic tanks and commercial agricultural fertilizers.

The published report of the study points no finger at any one cause of the problem, but further studies are needed to track the source of the nitrate concentrations, Spaulding said.

He said an isotope ratio mass spectaomer, a highly sophiscated analytical device, is needed for a possible three-year study to get to the bottom of the problem.

Cost of the machine is $60,000.

The Environmental Protection Agency has turned down his request for grant money to purchase such a machine. There is no such machine available in the state at the present, he said.

The Water Quality Committee of the Central Platte NRD is backing further research into the water problem, but it is not sure how much money it can put into the work.

The Central Platte is starting a program to educate and make the public aware of the need for more research into the nitrate problem.

Spaulding pointed out that present technology does not exist which would allow widespread removal of nitrate from drinking water. And, even if such equipment was available, he said, extraction of nitrate from the drinking water is not the answer.

The solution, he said, is to locate the source of the contamination, prevent it and reduce the level of concentration to an acceptable level.

Potential health hazards have been linked to high levels of nitrate in drinking water.

One condition that could come about is an affliction known as cyanosis, which occurs in infants. The nitrate reacts with the blood to reduce its oxygen carrying capacity.

This condition also can occur in baby pigs, which ingest nitrate through the mother's blood.

Another possible hazard is stomach cancer, which women of child-bearing age and men and women over 50 years of age can have.

Fatal Blaze Ruled Accidental

Omaha (AP) — A fire in a north Omaha apartment Sunday that killed a two-year-old boy has been ruled an accident, chief arson investigator Horton Dahlquist said. He reported the bedroom blaze apparently was started by the boy's 6-year-old sister who was playing with matches. The boy was Antonio Williams.

Tri-State Plans Center In Sidney

Sidney (UPI) — A Colorado based power supplier has announced plans to locate an operation center at the Sioux Army Depot at Sidney. E.J. Ballard, Tri-State Generation and Transmission Association general manager, said the North Glenn, Colo., firm has purchased a 90,000 square foot warehouse and 20 acres of land. The purchase price from the Sidney Warehouse and Industrial Sites, Inc., was not disclosed. Ballard said the facility will employ about 16 persons by 1978 and will be in partial use this winter. Tri-State supplies power to Wyoming, the Nebraska Panhandle and northeast Colorado.

James Stuart Named Head Of Foundation

James Stuart Jr. will be taking the place of Harry "Pete" Peterson as president of the Nebraska Human Resources Research Foundation. Peterson, who asked to step down for personal reasons, will remain as a member of the board of trustees.

Stuart, a Lincoln native, has been executive vice president of the National Bank of Commerce since December 1973. While attending the University of Nebraska, Stuart was a student counselor for the foundation, which is now in its 26th year of developing leadership in University students and Lincoln youth.

Stuart is also a trustee and member of the finance committee of the University of Nebraska Foundation, board member of the Lincoln Foundation, a member of Rotary International, the Lincoln Racquet Club and chairman of the Stuart Foundation. He is married and the father of three children.

Water Cascades Through Omaha Brandeis Store

Omaha (AP) — A broken water pipe sent thousands of gallons of water cascading from the 10th floor on down through every floor to the basement of the downtown Brandeis store in Omaha Tuesday.

Store officials ordered shoppers and store personnel from the building while three companies of firefighters and other workmen attempted to stop the water.

Marge Freeman, a clerk in the store's men's department, said, "I've been here 17 years and never saw anything like this. It's just horrible."

A fire department spokesman said there was rust in the water and the break may have been caused by a worn out pipe.

Steel Companies To Be Paid Off

New York (AP) — U.S. Steel Corp. will receive about $83 million and Bethlehem Steel Corp. about $17 million for iron-ore properties slated to be nationalized in Venezuela, officials of the South American country said.

"But a decision hasn't been reached on the form of payment," said Argenis Gamboa, one of the two Venezuelan government representatives taking part in the negotiations with the two companies.

Omaha Road Builders Fear More Layoffs

Omaha (AP) — Some Omaha road builders say they fear substantial layoffs in 1975 unless there are changes in the state highway program.

Philip Cain, vice president of Dugdale Construction Co., said his firm was forced to lay off half its 200 employes at the beginning of the construction season last April because of lack of work.

"Next April we'll probably be down to one-third, possibly half, of what we have how. This contracting situation is very, very critical," Cain said.

Cain and other contractors said they may not rehire in the spring because of the shortages of highway construction money.

Nebraska is seeking court action requiring release of about $35 million in impounded federal money due the state. One-third of the 1974-75 highway program depends on getting that money, according to an attorney for the State Department of Justice.

V. K. Parks, president of Parks Construction Co., said his firm recently laid off from 60 to 80 of its 150 employes.

"We've finished our highway construction season, and it's layoff time anyway," he said.

But whether the employes will be rehired in the spring will depend on the amount of business. "It doesn't look too good right now, but we don't know from one day to the next what it is going to be," Parks said.

He said his firm's highway work force has dwindled from about 50 in 1973 to 10 this year. "And," he said, "we don't have any (employes) under contract for next year."

Malcolm Young, executive secretary of the Eastern Nebraska Heavy Highway Contractors Association, said except for construction of the North Freeway, "I know of no other big highway projects in Omaha."

He said he has been told by Iowa officials that while the state has a number of highway projects "on the shelf" which are designed and ready to go, there is no money to pay the contractors.

He also said that although the amount of available highway money hasn't changed substantially in Iowa, the cost of materials, such as concrete and steel, has about doubled.

Young said similar conditions exist in Nebraska, and added, "I don't see anything in the future that should bring an increase" in state highway construction.

Contractors also say the number of local sanitary and improvement district projects has been sharply curtailed..

Richard J. Kullman, vice president of Vrana Paving Co., said the firm expects to cut its 50-man force to about half in 1975.

"The reason," he said, "is the lack of new houses and apartments. No one is building new streets to build new houses.

"There might be some improvement if the demand for houses picks up."

No Charges Filed In Doniphan Death

Grand Island (AP) — The Hall County attorney's office Tuesday announced that no charges will be filed in connection with the shooting death of a Doniphan youth last week.

The victim, James Clark Jr., 15, son of Mr. and Mrs. James G. Clark, was shot in the back of the head as he and two other youths were riding in a car in the Doniphan area last Wednesday evening. The death has been ruled accidental.

Investigators said Wesley Barker, 16, was the driver of the car, while Clark was a passenger in the front seat. The third youth, Finley Plentychief, was riding in the back set.

Plentychief was handling a .22-caliber pistol, when the weapon accidentaly discharged, officers said.

'And All Old Ladies Bake Good Bread'

By H.J. ANDERSON
Star Staff Writer

All junior high students should know about new math.

All 30-year-olds should be working, buying a car and raising children.

All old ladies bake good bread.

These are stereotypes based on age.

They spring from the age-consciousness of American culture, according to Jane Kidwell, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln sociology graduate student.

And they add up to "agism," she said.

Social researchers are beginning to study age as class, Ms. Kidwell said. Some believe it affects people's social position as much as their sex or race does.

She said it differs from sexism or racism in that "an older person should know more than a younger person, but a man doesn't necessarily know more than a woman; or a white, more than a black.

"But," Ms. Kidwell said, "age is a very, very general indicator."

People often give it too much importance and "play the role of their age group," she said.

Or else people want others to think they're a different age than they really are, so they dress and act the age they want to be.

"They are like mulattos who try to pass as white so people will treat them the way thay want to be treated," Ms. Kidwell said.

Agism brings stereotyping and segregation, both class functions, she said. It affects all ages.

Once, Ms. Kidwell said, she wanted to write an essay on the effect of age on political attitudes, but she could find little relation between the two.

She said she kept thinking "there has to be some relation" and then realized that was probably the point — age has little affect on a person's political attitudes.

People are segregated according to their ages. Young people are in school, middle-aged people are in jobs or at home, and the elderly live among themselves in rest homes or, often with college-age people, in "older neighborhoods."

Segregation hits the elderly most, she said.

"People don't like the elderly around, they remind others that everyone will get old and sick, and die."

Agism in general hits the elderly the hardest, she said.

Economically, socially, occupationally and emotionally the elderly suffer the most, according to Joseph Julian, associate professor of sociology at UNL.

"They suffer from institutionalized agism," he said of the elderly. "That means the structure, itself, promotes oppression of old people."

Julian doesn't buy agism, except as it applies to the elderly, he said. People more than 65 years old are the only age group clearly defined by society, he said.

He said the U.S. has an "age-graded society," though, through its schools, churches and other institutions, in that a person's level is determined by his or her age.

Ms. Kidwell said agism and its stereotypes have a function, as do all stereotypes.

"Stereotypes are formed by people in power, people with a vested interest in seeing that they stick," she said. She thinks it is people in their middle-years, those working and controlling money, who have the power. That's why few stereotypes of people in that age group exist, she said.

"Anyone 65 years old is too old to work" is an example of a stereotype, she said, from which people in the middle years stand to benefit. They want to advance in careers.

The point of it all, she said, is that people should be more aware of how they let their age affect their behavior. "I am a certain age, so I have to act a certain way" is an attitude too many people have, she said.

They Symbolized '20s

By Winzola McLendon

Her parents were symbols of the Twenties. Their seemingly madcap adventures across two continents, while he wrote and she dabbled in the arts, were the essence that made the Twenties roar. They celebrated and were celebrated wherever they went. They were the Fitzgeralds.

A hospital fire in 1948 in Asheville, N.C. consumed the life of his once fun-loving Zelda Sayre Fitzgerald, who had found the world of mental hospitals after a series of breakdowns. She was only 48.

But their only child, Frances Scott (Scottie) Fitzgerald, remembers a childhood with them, so golden that today she wonders she isn't the "most rotten, spoiled person I know."

Scott she pictures as a giving, though protective dad; and Zelda as a loving mom who catered to extravagant whims.

For years, Scottie brushed off most inquiries about her parents, especially her mother. But now she is talking about their many sides, even the ones she was exposed to the least: Those that involved drinking and insanity.

Imagine, if you will, she suggested, a little girl requesting a staged wedding and getting the request granted — on the French Riviera, complete with a honeymoon drive along the Mediterranean, the car festooned with fresh flowers and streamers.

She described Christmas of 1931 in Alabama, for example, when her mother constructed the history of mankind around the tree. A little electric train started its journey in Egypt and went on to Greece, Rome, the Crusades, the War of the Roses and so forth.

When she wanted a doll house, she said, her mother created one, a miniature replica of the home they lived in at Ellerslie near Wilmington, Del. Many of her dolls were also Zelda originals.

Was there a favorite toy? Yes. It was the doll Monique. She says Scott bought it for her on one of his many trips to the Paris toy store, Nain Bleu (Blue Dwarf): "It was a fabulous store and of course he took me there so he could buy himself some lead soldiers at the same time he was buying me a doll. It was all a clever subterfuge, which was fine with me."

Along with the games and happy times, her parents had violent quarrels; but their daughter says that either she has a rotten memory or they took place when she was in bed. However, she observed, "I don't think they fought as much as they are supposed to have, because in my opinion, they stayed in love until the day they died. I don't think it was fighting in the sense of people who are hostile to each other — just fighting over conditions of their lives which frustrated them both."

As proof of their love, she notes they way Scott looked after Zelda when she was sick — tenderly and to the end. "The whole thing broke his heart," she declared.

The ordeal took its toll on Scottie, too.

Mrs. Smith sees parallels between her parents' bad times and the bad times the country experienced. Zelda, she points out, had her first emotional breakdown in 1929. As the economy depressed, America's appetite dwindled for the glamorous, rich people who populated Fitzgerald's books.

Mrs. Smith becomes thoughtful. "They were young and successful at the time of the boom, and then the stock market crashed at the same time everything was crashing for them personally," she said.

During Zelda's illnesses, Scott tried to keep his daughter's life on an even keel, frequently brought her to Hollywood when he was writing screenplays. Mrs. Smith remembers those periods as "sometimes fascinating" with all the stars she met, and "occasionally dreadful" when he was "on one of his bats."

She says she liked her father's close friend, Sheilah Graham, and now sees her as a vital support to him during a most difficult period. "Without her, I can't imagine how he would have survived — Hollywood let him down so . . ."

Soctt wrote dozens of letters to Scottie during her years at Vassar, filled with beautiful phrases, minute instructions and suggestions. Mrs. Smith smiles. "I just examined them for checks and important messages and threw them in my desk drawer because I was so annoyed with him. I wanted to lead my own life."

Perhaps Mrs. Smith can deal with her feelings for her parents publicly now because the inevitable pain has mellowed with time. But she still says she avoids what is written about them because "I don't like reading about some of the things they supposedly did."

Moreover, she insisted, "fifty percent of what has been written about my mother and father has been sheer invention."

That does not mean Mrs. Smith is an ostrich. She readily admits that "there is no question but that my father's behavior was indefensible on many occasions. He seems to have had no tolerance for alcohol. But I do think his drinking must have been somewhat exaggereated. I don't see how you could turn out five novels, 160 stories and a lot of other writing if you were drinking as much as he was alleged to be doing . . ."

'Nebraska: A Land For All Seasons'

write On

Today's 'Write On' contributor is employed as a surgical assistant in Lincoln. A graduate of UNL, she minored in English and has had several poems and short stories published previously.

By GEORGIA LOWENBERG

All about me, as far as my eyes can see,
The fields repose proudly in their autumnal splendor.
It is as if the farm lands were a patch-work quilt
Fashioned from golden ochre-shades and oranges that burn bright,
Even as the high-noon sun in a cloudless sky.
I know that, from the first warm days of spring's awakening—
And all the long, hot summertime through—
There were, whenever the soil was workable,
Men and women and children tilling the earth.
At our old house, situated high atop a windy hill,
I sat upon the honeysuckle-bordered porch steps
And, day after day, looked out to see the succession of changes
Wrought by those who so bravely toiled—
Bare-headed and sweating—beneath the vivid skies.
I watched patiently as the endless acres of Nebraska country land
Were plowed and sowed and tended to; and now, months later,
I see the harvest in all of its glory.

From the same porch steps,
Where the flower vines now lie withered beside me,
And the ground is still white from last night's frost,
I feel the biting chill of the northern winds
And catch the sight of snow clouds
Piling up darkly along the horizon.
In the barns and silos and root cellars
Are stored the fruits of the past season,
Long ago reaped and brought home.
Beyond, the vast fields of barren land
Sprawl neglected and dormant—even lonely—
Awaiting the fertile seeds of yet another crop,
The quiet and sudden birth
Of the hearty, rich greenness the farmer calls life;
And thus the silent promise, the long anticipation,
The hoped-for fulfillment of a new harvest time
In the cycle of seasons that rule this land.

'Let The Buyer Beware' Good Motto For Auction Goers To Remember

"Let the buyer beware" is the motto that should be drummed into everyone who's addicted to bidding at country auctions. Here are some simple rules for your protection.

Never bid on anything you haven't examined — carefully— before the sale.

Don't be carried away by competitive bidding. Never bid more than you decided it was worth when you examined it.

Don't buy white elephants. If your living room has a nine-foot ceiling, where are you going to put the ten-foot-high armoire that caught your fancy? A tape measure is a good thing to carry in your pocket or purse when you're on a tour of inspection before the auction.

If you're buying something you plan to use, make sure it's in usable shape. If the rocker slats are missing and the mahogany bureau's minus a foot, they'll have to be replaced. If you're not an expert cabinet-maker, the cost of repair has to be added to the cost of your "find".

Learn to spot fake furniture antiques. Old carving is never sharp-edged because years of dusting, cleaning and rubbing smooth the edges.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	3 ♣	3 ♠
5 ♣	5 ♠

Opening lead - seven of clubs.

Kenya finished 20th among the 33 nations in the 1968 Olympiad, which was an exceptionally good showing for a country with limited experience in international competition.

Moreover, their team established a reputation as giant-killers when they defeated the United States, Australia, Switzerland, France and Iceland, all of whom finished in the top ten.

This deal arose when Canada and Kenya clashed in the very last session of the round robin. The Canadians were sorely in need of a win, for otherwise they might not qualify for the semifinals, and they got it by the narrow margin of 12 victory points to 8, even though they started badly on this deal.

Murray and Kehela, who performed the iron-man stunt by playing all 38 sessions without relief, were East-West, and Amin and Ajania were North-South for Kenya. Murray bid three clubs, overcalled by Ajania with three spades. When Kehela jumped to five clubs, Amin raised to five spades.

The price was exactly right, for Ajania made the obvious eleven tricks for 450 points.

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	3 ♣	3 ♠
Pass	4 ♠	Pass	Pass
5 ♣	Pass	Pass	Dble

Acharya's reaction to three spades was notably different from Kehela's. He passed the spade overcall and came out of his shell only after North had bid game.

Whatever the merits of his strategy, there is no doubt that in the actual case Acharya achieved the better result. When he bid five clubs, he presented both opponents with the problem of whether or not to push on, and when South elected to double, Walimohamed finished down one for a gain to Kenya of 350 points.

Use Coffee Pot To Make Tea

The British traditionally used loose tea for tea-making, believing a brewed tea was better than tea made with tea bags, as American usually make it.

The tea bag method is easier though, right? Wrong. Not if you own a coffee percolator. Freshly-brewed tea made from loose tea is simple to make in a coffee percolator.

Why do it ? For one thing, there's usually a broader selection of loose teas available for exciting, new tastes. It is simple to even combine loose teas to reduce a spicy flavor to just a hint of something special and extra to suit your own taste.

The steps for brewing tea in a percolator are easy to follow.

First, make sure the percolator is clean. Rinse it well with hot water and wipe the interior dry, including the basket.

Second, put in the amount of cold water needed to brew the number of cups desired.

Third, add loose tea to the basket of the perc that normally holds coffee. Now plug it in and let the percolator do the rest.

It takes a lot less loose tea than is indicated in the instructions on the container when using a percolator. With the flavor setting at "mild," nine cups of brewed tea require just three level teaspoons of loose tea. One or two pots will give you the combination that suits your taste.

Make Inexpensive Hors D'Oeuvres

Holiday entertaining won't wreck the budget if you capitalize on the economy of luncheon meats in making hors d'oeuvres. Starting with salami or round loaf lunch meat, cut through the center of a slice to form two half-circles. Bring points of each half-circle together and overlap. Fasten with party picks. Use potato salad or pineapple cheese spread to fill the lunch meat cornucopias.

Tell Him To Get Divorce First

DEAR ABBY: Four years ago, I fell in love with my boss. I was 36 and he was 51. He was married, but claimed their love had died 20 years ago, and he was "considering" divorce.

I had never been married, and you probably won't believe this, but I was a virgin, and am to this day.

My lover has never pushed for sex, which is probably why we got along so well. He still lives at home with his wife, and although he tells me that a divorce is in the offing, there are no signs of it.

I have tried to stop seeing him, but he insists that he is madly in love with me, and he refuses to let me break up with him.

He comes to my place almost every evening after work, but he never stays later than 8 p.m. Then he goes home.

I would marry him tomorrow if he were free, but I don't like being the other woman, and I'd rather live alone the rest of my life than feel that I broke up a marriage.

I love him and know we could be happy together, but I don't want him if it will hurt his wife. He's had ample time to get a divorce. What do you think?

MISS A.

DEAR MISS A.: I think you're foolish to continue seeing this man. If he is "madly in love with you" and a divorce is in the offing tell him you'll see him after he's divorced — and not until. And if you're still working for him, you'd be wise to make a change — and soon.

DEAR ABBY: I have been trying to locate a relative of mine who is now serving in the U.S. Army somewhere in Europe — possibly in Germany, according to the last reports I had about him.

I wrote to the U.S. Army Information Department in Washington D.C. and they sent me a two-page form to fill out, requesting my cousin's rank and serial number and location of his present assignment. Abby, if I knew that I wouldn't need any help in locating him.

Can you help me?

STUMPED IN SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

DEAR STUMPED: Write to the U.S. Army Enlistment Records Center: PC, RC-RP, Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana 46249. They can locate anyone who is on active duty with the U.S. Army.

DEAR ABBY: Where I work, the boss's wife (who also works here) set up a new dress code. All the women have to wear pants! This isn't a warehouse or a factory where pants would be more appropriate — it's an office!

The boss happens to be a leg man, and his wife knows it. She has terrible looking legs, and doesn't want him looking at girls who have pretty legs. (Like me, for instance.)

LEGGY

DEAR LEGGY: I'm afraid you gals with the gorgeous gams will have to do your showing off after work. Either that, or use 'em to walk out and find work where the dress code makes more sense.

DEAR ABBY: I have some advice for "Fourth Time Around": Don't do it unless you know why your marriage failed, and you've worked out those problems.

In my case, our marriage failed because my husband was insanely jealous. We had children, which of course was a factor in our going back together, but it didn't work out because nothing had really changed. He was still the pathologically jealous man I had married the first time, and I couldn't handle it.

Now he's begging me to marry him again, but I won't marry him again unless he gets over his irrational jealousy. He's in therapy now, and I hope he makes it because I'll love him till the day I die.

Easy Exercises To Shape Up Hair

Shaping up a beautiful body for the holidays — or any day — means more than streamlining tummy and thighs. Today's body-conscious woman is equally concerned about her health and fitness right up to the tips of her hair.

To give hair a crowning glory, a naturally-shiny glow and protect it from winter's rigorous effects, haircare experts recommend some everyday "hair exercises" that start at the top and take only minutes.

Before bedding down at night, always flush hair free of tangles and back-combing with fast strokes of a natural-bristle brush. To stimulate circulation and help ease the tensions of the day, give roots a firm finger massage by gently kneading the scalp.

Next, check body and resiliency by pushing locks up toward the crown and letting go quickly. If strands hold their line, they have good body and shape. But if they fall limp and lifeless, chances are they need conditioning for added bounce.

When shampooing, always use a very mild product and work gently through the strands, using warm — not hot — water. Be sure to rinse thoroughly so there's no dulling film left on the hair to reduce its lustre and shine.

Follow-up every shampoo with a conditioning treat to restore hair's lost moisture and return a naturally beautiful shine. A conditioner will give body, reduce tangles, smooth and silken ends all in one quick application. Perfect for short to medium-lengths, most conditioners are pH adjusted to hair's natural balance.

If hair still has split ends after all this pampering, line up an appointment with a professional stylist for a "shape-up" trim. A precision blunt cut not only evens up ends, but it also helps create bounce and fullness.

Even the best haircare program will not succeed if you don't protect fragile strands to help them maintain a good condition. Winter workouts on ski slopes and sled paths can be drying to the ends, cause brittleness and breakage. Always protect strands from the harsh elements by covering your head with a long, wooly scarf or snug knitted cap.

If regular "hair exercises" are faithfully followed, your strands will benefit just as your body does from daily sit-ups or toe touches. To "shape up" your locks in time for holiday parties and get a good start on the new year, begin your hair conditioning program now.

. . . It brings stereotyping and segregation. And it affects people of all ages.

By H.J. ANDERSON
Star Staff Writer

All junior high students should know about new math.

All 30-year-olds should be working, buying a car and raising children.

All old ladies bake good bread.

These are stereotypes based on age.

They spring from the age-consciousness of American culture, according to Jane Kidwell, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln sociology graduate student.

And they add up to "agism," she said.

Social researchers are beginning to study age as class, Ms. Kidwell said. Some believe it affects people's social position as much as their sex or race does.

She said it differs from sexism or racism in that "an older person should know more than a younger person, but a man doesn't necessarily know more than a woman; or a white, more than a black.

"But," Ms. Kidwell said, "age is a very, very general indicator."

People often give it too much importance and "play the role of their age group," she said.

Or else people want others to think they're a different age than they really are, so they dress and act the age they want to be.

"They are like mulattos who try to pass as white so people will treat them the way thay want to be treated," Ms. Kidwell said.

Agism brings stereotyping and segregation, both class functions, she said. It affects all ages.

Once, Ms. Kidwell said, she wanted to write an essay on the effect of age on political attitudes, but she could find little relation between the two.

She said she kept thinking "there has to be some relation" and then realized that was probably the point — age has little affect on a person's political attitudes.

People are segregated according to their ages. Young people are in school, middle-aged people are in jobs or at home, and the elderly live among themselves in rest homes or, often with college-age people, in "older neighborhoods."

Segregation hits the elderly most, she said.

"People don't like the elderly around, they remind others that everyone will get old and sick, and die."

Agism in general hits the elderly the hardest, she said.

Economically, socially, occupationally and emotionally the elderly suffer the most, according to Joseph Julian, associate professor of sociology at UNL.

"They suffer from institutionalized agism," he said of the elderly. "That means the structure, itself, promotes oppression of old people."

Julian doesn't buy agism, except as it applies to the elderly, he said. People more than 65 years old are the only age group clearly defined by society, he said.

He said the U.S. has an "age-graded society," though, through its schools, churches and other institutions, in that a person's level is determined by his or her age.

Ms. Kidwell said agism and its stereotypes have a function, as do all stereotypes.

"Stereotypes are formed by people in power, people with a vested interest in seeing that they stick," she said. She thinks it is people in their middle-years, those working and controlling money, who have the power. That's why few stereotypes of people in that age group exist, she said.

"Anyone 65 years old is too old to work" is an example of a stereotype, she said, from which people in the middle years stand to benefit. They want to advance in careers.

The point of it all, she said, is that people should be more aware of how they let their age affect their behavior. "I am a certain age, so I have to act a certain way" is an attitude too many people have, she said.

When she wanted a doll house, she said, her mother created one, a miniature replica of the home they lived in at Ellerslie near Wilmington, Del. Many of her dolls were also Zelda originals.

Was there a favorite toy? Yes. It was the doll Monique. She says Scott bought it for her on one of his many trips to the Paris toy store, Nain Bleu (Blue Dwarf): "It was a fabulous store and of course he took me there so he could buy himself some lead soldiers at the same time he was buying me a doll. It was all a clever subterfuge, which was fine with me."

Along with the games and happy times, her parents had violent quarrels; but their daughter says that either she has a rotten memory or they took place when she was in bed. However, she observed, "I don't think they fought as much as they are supposed to have, because in my opinion, they stayed in love until the day they died. I don't think it was fighting in the sense of people who are hostile to each other — just fighting over conditions of their lives which frustrated them both."

As proof of their love, she notes they way Scott looked after Zelda when she was sick — tenderly and to the end. "The whole thing broke his heart," she declared.

The ordeal took its toll on Scottie, too.

Mrs. Smith sees parallels between her parents' bad times and the bad times the country experienced. Zelda, she points out, had her first emotional breakdown in 1929. As the economy depressed, America's appetite dwindled for the glamorous, rich people who populated Fitzgerald's books.

Mrs. Smith becomes thoughtful. "They were young and successful at the time of the boom, and then the stock market crashed at the same time everything was crashing for them personally," she said.

During Zelda's illnesses, Scott tried to keep his daughter's life on an even keel, frequently brought her to Hollywood when he was writing screenplays. Mrs. Smith remembers those periods as "sometimes fascinating" with all the stars she met, and "occasionally dreadful" when he was "on one of his bats."

She says she liked her father's close friend, Sheilah Graham, and now sees her as a vital support to him during a most difficult period. "Without her, I can't imagine how he would have survived — Hollywood let him down so . . ."

Soctt wrote dozens of letters to Scottie during her years at Vassar, filled with beautiful phrases, minute instructions and suggestions. Mrs. Smith smiles. "I just examined them for checks and important messages and threw them in my desk drawer because I was so annoyed with him. I wanted to lead my own life."

Perhaps Mrs. Smith can deal with her feelings for her parents publicly now because the inevitable pain has mellowed with time. But she still says she avoids what is written about them because "I don't like reading about some of the things they supposedly did "

Moreover, she insisted, "fifty percent of what has been written about my mother and father has been sheer invention."

That does not mean Mrs. Smith is an ostrich. She readily admits that "there is no question but that my father's behavior was indefensible on many occasions. He seems to have had no tolerance for alcohol. But I do think his drinking must have been somewhat exaggereated. I don't see how you could turn out five novels, 160 stories and a lot of other writing if you were drinking as much as he was alleged to be doing . . ."

Keep Them Fresh

Cool cookies thoroughly before storing. For crisp cookies, store in loosely covered container. If they absorb moisture from the air, crisp in 300 degree oven 5 to 10 minutes.

Soft cookies should be stored in tightly covered containers. If cookies tend to dry out, add a piece of apple, orange or bread to container.

Tell Him To Get Divorce First

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: Four years ago, I fell in love with my boss. I was 36 and he was 51. He was married, but claimed their love had died 20 years ago, and he was "considering" divorce.

I had never been married, and you probably won't believe this, but I was a virgin, and am to this day.

My lover has never pushed for sex, which is probably why we got along so well. He still lives at home with his wife, and although he tells me that a divorce is in the offing, there are no signs of it.

I have tried to stop seeing him, but he insists that he is madly in love with me, and he refuses to let me break up with him.

He comes to my place almost every evening after work, but he never stays later than 8 p.m. Then he goes home.

I would marry him tomorrow if he were free, but I don't like being the other woman, and I'd rather live alone the rest of my life than feel that I broke up a marriage.

I love him and know we could be happy together, but I don't want him if it will hurt his wife. He's had ample time to get a divorce. What do you think?

MISS A.

DEAR MISS A.: I think you're foolish to continue seeing this man. If he is "madly in love with you" and a divorce is in the offing tell him you'll see him after he's divorced — and not until. And if you're still working for him, you'd be wise to make a change — and soon.

DEAR ABBY: I have been trying to locate a relative of mine who is now serving in the U.S. Army somewhere in Europe — possibly in Germany, according to the last reports I had about him.

I wrote to the U.S. Army Information Department in Washington D.C. and they sent me a two-page form to fill out, requesting my cousin's rank and serial number and location of his present assignment. Abby, if I knew that I wouldn't need any help in locating him.

Can you help me?

STUMPED IN SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

DEAR STUMPED: Write to the U.S. Army Enlistment Records Center: PC, RC-RP, Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana 46249. They can locate anyone who is on active duty with the U.S. Army.

DEAR ABBY: Where I work, the boss's wife (who also works here) set up a new dress code. All the women have to wear pants! This isn't a warehouse or a factory where pants would be more appropriate — it's an office!

The boss happens to be a leg man, and his wife knows it. She has terrible looking legs, and doesn't want him looking at girls who have pretty legs. (Like me, for instance.)

LEGGY

DEAR LEGGY: I'm afraid you gals with the gorgeous gams will have to do your showing off after work. Either that, or use 'em to walk out and infd work where the dress code makes more sense.

DEAR ABBY: I have some advice for "Fourth Time Around": Don't do it unless you know why your marriage failed, and you've worked out those problems.

In my case, our marriage failed because my husband was insanely jealous. We had children, which of course was a factor in our going back together, but it didn't work out because nothing had really changed. He was still the pathologically jealous man I had married the first time, and I couldn't handle it.

Now he's begging me to marry him again, but I won't marry him again unless he gets over his irrational jealousy. He's in therapy now, and I hope he makes it because I'll love him till the day I die.

Easy Exercises To Shape Up Hair

Shaping up a beautiful body for the holidays — or any day — means more than streamlining tummy and thighs. Today's body-conscious woman is equally concerned about her health and fitness right up to the tips of her hair.

To give hair a crowning glory, a naturally-shiny glow and protect it from winter's rigorous effects, haircare experts recommend some everyday "hair exercises" that start at the top and take only minutes.

Before bedding down at night, always flush hair free of tangles and back-combing with fast strokes of a natural-bristle brush. To stimulate circulation and help ease the tensions of the day, give roots a firm finger massage by gently kneading the scalp.

Next, check body and resiliency by pushing locks up toward the crown and letting go quickly. If strands hold their line, they have good body and shape. But if they fall limp and lifeless, chances are they need conditioning for added bounce.

When shampooing, always use a very mild product and work gently through the strands, using warm — not hot — water. Be sure to rinse thoroughly so there's no dulling film left on the hair to reduce its lustre and shine.

Follow-up every shampoo with a conditioning treat to restore hair's lost moisture and return a naturally beautiful shine. A conditioner will give body, reduce tangles, smooth and silken ends all in one quick application. Perfect for short to medium-lengths, most conditioners are pH adjusted to hair's natural balance.

If hair still has split ends after all this pampering, line up an appointment with a professional stylist for a "shape-up" trim. A precision blunt cut not only evens up ends, but it also helps create bounce and fullness.

Even the best haircare program will not succeed if you don't protect fragile strands to help them maintain a good condition. Winter workouts on ski slopes and sled paths can be drying to the ends, cause brittleness and breakage. Always protect strands from the harsh elements by covering your head with a long, wooly scarf or snug knitted cap.

If regular "hair exercises" are faithfully followed, your strands will benefit just as your body does from daily sit-ups or toe touches. To "shape up" your locks in time for holiday parties and get a good start on the new year, begin your hair conditioning program now.

SUGAR . . . IGA WANTS TO HELP

One of the most rapidly increasing prices today is that of sugar There are lots of reasons behind this, but they all seem to say the same thing. There are just more of us—all around the world—wanting more and more sugar

According to one expert, about 75% of the sugar in the U.S. is consumed in manufacturing items such as soft drink beverages, candy, cookies, canned and frozen fruits, and many others. The price of these foods are up too, reflecting, among other things, the price of the sugar used in the manufacturing process. About 25% of the sugar is consumed as refined sugars in the home. There is not a lot you and I can do about the price of the manufactured goods except to buy less of those foods which contain large amounts of sugar

We are helping hold the price you must pay for refined sugar as low as possible by selling it at—or even below—what it costs us. We pledge to continue to do all we can to keep the price as low as possible. But you and I can control the amount of refined sugar we buy and use at home and I believe we can and should all buy less.

There are ways to substitute liquid sweetners such as corn syrup, honey, molasses, and maple syrup for granulated sugar in general cooking as well as baking and even candy making. A variety of artificial sweetners, liquid and powders, are available also. These can be substituted for granulated sugar in a wide variety of your favorite recipes—or used in those recipes especially developed and prepared by the manufacturers of the artificial sweeteners.

Modifying your own recipes to use artificial sweeteners is simply a trial and error process because of the varying properties of the sweeteners. Since sugar contributes to the browning qualities and the texture of the finished product, the non-sugar product will be slightly tougher and have less brown color and volume. If you want to try to modify your recipe to use non-nutritive sweeteners, here are some things to consider:

- Begin with a recipe you know—one that uses the least amount of sugar is best.
- Begin with the non-nutritive sweeteners equivalent to half the amount of sugar called for—and then adjust.
- Spices and herbs such as cinnamon, nutmeg, and allspice will help give a "sweet character" to food and help cover the "after taste" of artificial sweetener. Spices also add a browning color to help compensate for the paler look of the non-sugar product.
- Stiffly beaten egg whites and yolks and the addition of additional amounts of baking powder and soda will help keep the volume high in the substituted recipe.
- Recipes which require the shortening to be cut into the dry ingredients will be more tender than those made by the creaming method.

If you want some information on substituting liquid sweeteners in your recipes or some especially-developed recipes for artificial sweeteners or various liquid sweeteners, let me hear from you.

Maple Fudge

2 cups maple syrup
1 tablespoon light corn syrup
¾ cup light cream
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ cup chopped walnuts

Combine syrups and cream in heavy saucepan. Over low heat, stir constantly until mixture begins to boil; continue cooking—without stirring—to soft ball stage (238) Remove from heat and allow to cool to lukewarm—without stirring—Beat with low speed electric mixer until it loses its gloss and thickens. (May take quite awhile.) Stir in vanilla and nuts. Pour into buttered 8½" x 4½" x 2½" loaf pan. Cool. Cut into pieces.

Fruit Bars

1⅓ cups flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1¾ cups chopped dates
1 cup chopped nuts
½ cup raisins
3 eggs
1 cup light corn syrup
1 teaspoon vanilla

Sift flour, baking powder, and salt into mixing bowl. Stir in dates, raisins, nuts. Beat eggs well and add syrup and vanilla. Stir into flour/fruit mixture. Spread in greased 9½" x 13" x 2" baking pan. Bake in 350° oven about 45 minutes or until lightly browned and springy to touch. Cut into 3" x 1" bars. Store in tightly covered container. LAST MINUTE MOVING . . . worker carries new furnishings up terminal escalator.

Terminal Sort Of Ready

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

You can get a drink in the bar, but no coffee in the coffee shop — it's not open yet.

You can find a seat in a modern looking black and chrome chair, but not on a matching bench — it hasn't arrived yet.

You won't be using one of the new second-level loading bridges to board a Frontier jet — they don't want it.

And you probably will have to dodge construction crews on the access road to the airport and movers once you get there — work still is being done.

But, other than that — Lincoln's new airport terminal building was scheduled to throw open it doors to the public Wednesday. The inaugural flight was Frontier Airlines 5:40 a.m. jet to Dallas.

And Airport Authority personnel, the airlines and businesses which will relocate in the new facility were going to work through Tuesday night if necessary to make the big move to the imposing steel, glass and brick structure.

"It's total panic," said Mrs. John Clark, whose family operates the restaurant, lounge and coffee shop in both the old and new terminal buildings.

Mrs. Clark said the dining room and lounge will be open for business Wednesday, but the coffee shop will be closed for another week.

Airport Authority Director Rolland Harr said most of the lobby furniture has arrived. The benches should be in place for waiting airline passengers by the end of the year.

Frontier officials apparently have made no decision on whether the airlines will use the second level loading bridge, through which an air traveler can walk directly from the terminal to the airplane.

Two bridges were built, for around $198,000, for use by Frontier and United Airlines.

Frontier officials have charged that the new terminal is "poorly designed" because the firm's Convair 580 aircraft are not adaptable to the bridges. Airport Authority officials have pointed out that Frontier also has six Boeing 737 flights out of Lincoln daily compared to five Convair 580 flights. The 737 jets can use the loading bridge.

A Frontier spokesman said late Tuesday that passengers probably will not be using the bridges, at least on Wednesday.

Fog Bigger Battle

A United Airlines spokesman said crews had more problems fighting the fog Tuesday morning than battling with moving crews.

Breathing a sigh of relief that the $3.8 million facility was opening to the public, Harr said, "We're finally going to make it."

The Airport Authority has been plagued with one delay after another throughout the construction period.

Contractors were delayed by weather in building the terminal, while another delay temporarily halted the pouring of taxiway, access roads and parking lot. Then, at the last moment, the authority had to reorder lobby furniture because the original shipment was considered unacceptable by the manfacturer.

Additionally, the controversy has continued with Frontier over use of the loading bridge. The authority still is negotiating with both airlines over the rental rates at the new terminal.

More Space Provided

United has been paying around $25,000 a year for space at the old building, while Frontier has had a $23,000 bill. Both airlines will have "substantially more space" in the new building, Harr said.

The airlines' holding areas are located on the second level of the terminal, along with the lounge, restaurant, flight service food area and a banquet room.

The vast expanse on the ground level is dotted with rent-a-car and insurance booths, airline ticket counters, passenger waiting areas and an automatic conveyor belt system to cart luggage directly to passengers.

Air travelers also will find that toilets are free, but the parking lot isn't.

The $3.8 million terminal was financed entirely by the Airport Authority. The Federal government kicked in 75% of the $3 million bill to build the new taxiway, apron and parking lot.

DEC Favors End To Variances

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

The State Department of Environmental Control (DEC) has proposed rules which would end the practice of granting industries additional time beyond deadlines to clean up their air pollution.

The Environmental Control Council will hold a public hearing on the proposal at its upcoming December meeting. At least one firm which is seeking the extension, called a variance, is expected to oppose it.

Until now, the DEC director had the power to grant industries additional time to meet state deadlines for control of air pollution.

Gene Robinson, chief of the DEC's air pollution division, said recent court decisions have ordered the federal Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to reject state plans which allow for variances beyond the compliance deadline.

Deadlines call for all sources of air pollution in Lancaster, Douglas and Sarpy Counties to meet air standards by July, 1975. All sources of air pollution in other counties will have to meet state standards by July, 1976.

Robinson said so far the DEC has granted variances to Fremont Utilities for two power stations until February, 1977. At that time, the utility will have closed down one station and installed a precipitator to collect dust on the other.

The EPA has granted Nebraska Public Power District's Kramer Station at Bellevue until 1976 to clean its emissions.

And the DEC has given Great Western Sugar Co. until October, 1976, to install scrubbers on its Gering and Bayard plants. Robinson said GW will not be in violation during the months before that since plant operations do not begin until October.

Ideal Cement of Superior presently has a request for an air pollution variance until January, 1977, to install a precipitator. A hearing has been slated for Jan. 8 on the request.

Robinson said the variances are needed most often because of delays in the delivery of pollution controls. He said it presently takes at least two years to get controls delivered.

Under the proposed rules, a variance can only be granted if the governor requests EPA to do so.

DEC Curtails Rock Firm Operations

The Nebraska Department of Environmental Control has reached an agreement with a Weeping Water rock firm to allow it to continue partial operations until it complys with pollution control regulations by April 15.

Gene Robinson, the department's pollution control chief, said the agreement allowed the United Mineral Co. to conduct curtailed around-the-clock operations in some areas and reduced part of its operations three hours daily.

The agreement, Robinson said, would limit dust produced by the facility and objected to by Weeping Water residents.

Robinson conducted a recent hearing in Weeping Water, and residents at that time objected to their lawns and property being blanketed with white dust.

United Mineral contended it had partially complied with the pollution control requirements but was awaiting further materials to complete the installation of equipment.

Trio At AIM Barracks Charged With Assaults

Three men living at the American Indian Movement barracks at the Lincoln Air Park have been charged with felony offenses of robbery and assault with intent to inflict great bodily injury in connection with a Saturday incident.

Larry Martinez, 24, Garret E. Wounded Head, 21, and Lawrence V. Red Shirt, 23, were each charged with robbery and two counts of assault in connection with alleged assaults on Michael J. Williamson and LeLand E. Carmichael.

According to police, the incident occurred at 614 New Hampshire.

Lancaster County Judge Jeffre Cheuvront set the preliminary hearing for Dec. 18 and bond was set at $5,000 on each of the trio.

Defendant Onco To Plead Guilty If Defense Fails

A Wounded Knee defendant Tuesday agreed to plead guilty if a defense argument that Wounded Knee prosecutions are invalid because of an 1868 treaty fails in U.S. District Court.

Special Prosecutor Al Kirshen said the defendant, Robert Onco, is the Indian holding an AK-47 in one hand above his head in a picture used on the cover of a major news magazine during the occupation of Wounded Knee in 1973.

Onco agreed to plead guilty to one count of illegally possessing an unregistered firearm if the treaty defense fails. The AK-47 is a Communist Chinese automatic weapon used in Vietnam.

Bishop Resolves To Swear Off Tobacco, Drink

CHESTER, England (AP) — The Anglican Bishop of Chester, the Rt. Rev. Victor Whitsey, announced his New Year's resolution Tuesday. He will give up tobacco and alcohol for three months to aid the world's hungry.

The bishop said his no-smoking, no-drinking rule will last from Epiphany to Easter — Jan. 6 to March 30. The money saved will be paid into a bank account called the Bishop of Chester E to E Fund. The money will go to needy persons in India, Bangladesh, Africa and South America.

"It is the duty of a leader to set an example and not merely to exhort or demand," the bishop said.

Wage And Price Controls May Become Fact Of Life In 1975

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Controls — in Washington, everyone from President Ford on down seems to be against them. But, says David Secrest who covers Congress for McGraw-Hill World News, they may be a fact of life in 1975.)

By DAVID SECREST

Washington — Just eight months after wage and price controls went off the books, pressure to bring them back is on the rise. If prices keep climbing along with unemployment and budget deficits, the political appeal of controls may become irresistible within a few months.

The discussion has already started in earnest. The Democratic Senate Leader Mike Mansfield (Mont.) Recently introduced a bill to give the President power to slap across-the-board controls on the economy if he decides they are necessary. Republican Senate Leader Hugh Scott (Pa.) calls that "the coward's way out." If the Democrats in Congress think controls are a good idea, the says, they should make them mandatory — and take the heat themselves instead of dumping the decision on the President.

Right now, hardly anybody in a position of power is for controls. President Ford hates controls. So do most labor and business leaders. Several public opinion polls, however, show a substantial majority in favor of controls. "Nobody wants them," quips a top Senate aide, "except the people."

Tune May Change

That's one reason the politicians may change their tune. Another is that the Democrats in Congress will be feeling their oats next year, and controls are one of the few dramatic alternatives they have to Ford's economic program.

An economic advisory group to the Democratic National Committee says that big increases in food and fuel costs "may now be in the process of shifting into a price-wage spiral," and if other measures such as easier credit and tax reform don't straighten out the economy then economic controls should be reinstated.

Other Democratic leaders appear to sense the handwriting on the wall for controls. Senator Hubert Humphrey (D.-Minn.), who will head the joint economic committee next year, says he sees no need for controls "at this time"; but he does think they might be needed in at least a few big industries that manage to raise prices even in the face of slumping demand.

Opposition May Fade

Organized labor's opposition may well fade, if workers see their newly-won "catch-up" increases being eaten up at the grocery store. Since there are few big wage contracts up for renewal in 1975, the first crunch of controls would come on the price side anyway.

The demand for controls is likely to escalate as unemployment climbs. The jobless rate will fuel demands for more government spending on public service jobs and unemployment compensation, as well as tax cuts for lower income groups to stimulate consumer demand. But if the nation is piling up a huge budget deficit and inflation is still running 9 or 10% next spring — scenario that many economists think quite probable — policy makers will be searching desperately for some way to keep the lid on wages and prices while they pump up the economy.

Legislation to reinstate controls would re-open the whole argument about whether controls worked the last time. GOP Leader Scott argues that they only seem to work for a while, "like a brick on the safety valve until pressures blow the structure sky high." Look what happened to prices as soon as controls came off, he says. Democrats argue that it wasn't controls that were wrong but the on-again-off-again way the Nixon administration ran them.

"Anyway," says one key Democrat in Congress, "if Ford doesn't get off his duff we're going to have controls."

HEALTH TIP

FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

When you have a cold or other infection, you may have a headache caused by swollen, inflamed sinuses.

The Nebraska Medical Association says that sinus headaches are common with such an infection, and often the infection and headache clear up spontaneously as the secretions drain into the nose and throat.

The association offers some care tips which may help you when you are ill with sinus problems: use nose drops once or twice a day to aid drainage, but do not use continuously. Get more rest than usual. Avoid overeating, excessive drinking and smoking. Avoid exposure to cold. Before going to bed, take a hot shower or bath to help decongest the respiratory passages.

A simple hot foot bath and breathing plain steam can give added relief. Keep your diet light and nutritious with plenty of fluids. Careful use of aspirin and nasal decongestants often decrease the severity of your symptoms.

But, the NMA urges that you consult your physician if discomfort, pain and headache persist for more than several days.

Forecast For Wednesday

The quick-quip humor of Gemini is a signature, a trademark. These are the persons who race, rev up their motors and dart across their points, often in a hilariously funny way. In so doing, the dual nature of Gemini is apparent — the clown laughing on one side and crying on the inside. Joan Rivers and Bob Hope are but two examples of the Gemini fast-paced humor. Professional comics tell me that they adore audiences made up mostly of Gemini persons. Gemini responds in triggerlike fashion and thrives in the atmosphere of give-and-take. How is your funny Gemini?

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You "make contact" with young person. You also find outlet for creative abilities. You gain cooperation from one who can help in fulfilling desires. Welcome chance for change, variety, possible travel.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Home environment becomes more pleasant. Visitor surprises with humor, perhaps a gift. Question of property and its worth can be settled. Older individual is willing to lend benefit of experience. Be receptive.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Emphasis is on exploration. Examine various data. Test ideas, theories. Be willing to step beyond what appears to be a limitation. Another Gemini — and a Sagittarian — could be in picture. Neighbor or relative presents factual data.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Discussions concerning money, personal possessions are likely to be on agenda. Be ready to make changes, inquiries. Answers are available — if you ask. Gemini, Virgo persons could be involved.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Lunar cycle is such that you make amends for past mistakes. You see clearly. Your personality sparkles. Showmanship takes over and many are drawn to you. One you love makes gesture of reconciliation. Toss aside pride and accept!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): All is clandestine, behind the scenes, subtle — a labyrinth rather than a direct course. Know it and realize being able to tread lightly is important. You get what you want only through whisper, not shouts. Message will be clarified and Pisces will aid.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Accent is on friendship, money that works for you and special business interests. Involvement is obvious — if you try to hide it you could appear foolish. Member of opposite sex is very much in picture. It is better to say "no comment" rather than directly deny. You'll see!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A business venture is completed. Means you finish arrangements now or forget it. One who hangs on and sings blues has outlived usefulness. Know it and do something about it. Direct assertion on your part is overdue. Aries, Libra may be in picture.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Good Moon aspect coincides now with travel, education, stimulation of learning process. You are inspired by one who is creative, aggressive and willing to back beliefs with actions. A new start — and proverbial second chance — could make this a memorable time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Collect needed information, material. Check with family member. You'll need backing — get it before making final commitment. Another Capricorn — and a Cancer — figure prominently. Be aware of resources — don't sell yourself short.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Lie low. Obtain hint from Capricorn message. Deal with legal types. Means get picture of what stands in way, what is clear sailing. Those who oppose your views are very willing to compromise. Know it and play cards close to chest.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You may do some tearing down for purpose of reconstruction. There are some, apparently your friends, who are sincere but misinformed. Know it and don't break diet, health resolutions. Work associate has constructive suggestion. Listen — and express gratitude.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are independent, were on your own early in sense that you were not part of peer group. You started something this year which really will bear fruit in two years. Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio persons play significant roles in your life. You are high-principled, fond of travel and have an abundance of creative energy.

HERE'S 15¢ OFF TO TRY SPIC AND SPAN ON YOUR TUB.

SPIC AND SPAN ON A WET SPONGE CLEANS TUBS AND SINKS WITHOUT SCRATCHING, LEAVES THEM SHINY SMOOTH.

If you thought Spic and Span was only great for cleaning floors, wait till you try it on your bathtub and sink.

It gets them shiny clean—but without scratching. That's because Spic and Span crystals are non-abrasive. They can't scratch. Just pour some Spic and Span on a wet sponge. It removes normal bathtub ring and sink dirt just as well as a cleanser. Without leaving any scratchy grit. Your sink and tub come out shiny and smooth.

There's no better time than now to try Spic and Span on your tub or sink. Use the coupon below to save 15¢ on any size box of Spic and Span. It makes it very easy to get an extra box to keep in your bathroom.

WHERE ECONOMY ORIGINATES

THE FIRST STEPS OF OPERATION AWARE

The President says that inflation is Domestic Enemy Number One. And here's how A & P is going to help you fight it. We're starting a new consumer program called Operation Aware. Because we're aware of the problems every consumer is facing today. These are the first steps were taking to fight them.

1. AN EARLY WARNING SYSTEM ON PRICE INCREASES: THE AWARE LIST.

Every week we will voluntarily post a list of price increases such as those received from manufacturers a full seven days before we actually change our price. That gives you one week to purchase at the old price--subject, of course, to product availability. You'll also find "Be Aware" shelf tags on many frequently purchased items, with the day of the price increase right on the tag. Of course, the Aware List won't include perishables like meat, eggs or fresh fruit and vegetables, where markets fluctuate daily; items controlled by law; or advertised specials. So before you plan next week's shopping list, check this week's Aware List.

2. A PRICE FREEZE ON A&P PRIVATE LABELS.

Starting today, A & P voluntarily puts a ceiling on over 1000 A & P Products. (Smaller stores may not regularly stock all items, but a list is available in all stores.) That means prices will go no higher at least until the end of the year, on many products that you use everyday... bread, cheese, pasta, coffee, non-fat dry milk, frozen dinners and canned peas and corn. Advertised specials below the freeze prices will still be offered. We've put the freeze on our private labels because they represent the best values in our stores. And we'll hold down the prices, even if our ingredient costs go up.

3. OUR 13 POINT CONSUMER PROTECTION POLICY.

It's our continuing commitment to making you an Aware shopper by reminding you of what every A & P store owes you and by informing you of ways to get the most for your money. Look for the signs going up inside A & P stores spelling out all the protection A & P gives you: 1. Guaranteed Satisfaction 2. Exceptional Value 3. Low Price With Absolutely No Compromise In Quality 4. Rain Check-Product Availablity 5. Product Freshness Through Open Dating 6. Consumer Information 7. Courteous Service 8. Cleanliness 9. Safe And Healthy Products 10. Shopping Convenience 11. The Butcher's Pledge 12. Variety of Choice and 13. People To People Communication.

Show Canceled By Fanne Foxe

©The New York Times

New York — Fanne Foxe tripped and hurt her knee, and Tuesday night she canceled her engagement in New York. Miss Foxe said she was canceling because her knee hurt. although a friend said it was because of Wilbur Mills. The chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee went into a hospital Tuesday, and this, the friend said, upset Miss Foxe.

"Pressure," the friend said significantly, "all that pressure."

Miss Foxe herself wasn't speaking. Before she canceled, however, she had been speaking to everybody, and things were coming up roses.

"Darling, I have a mink coat on and nothing else," she had been saying. She was in the Burlesque House on 42nd Street, talking to her attorney on the telephone.

"I don't think I'm stupid," she said, "but I told the press that Tidal Basin was an accident . . . you know Wilbur. Nothing can stop him. No, I don't have no idea when he comes here."

Miss Foxe hung up the phone, but almost immediately it rang again. She looked around for someone to answer, but her manager was off on an errand, and the two other strippers in the room only stared. Miss Foxe settled deeper into her mink, and picked up the phone.

"Hello, 42nd Street Playhouse," she said.

It was a customer, asking for information.

"This week we have the Miss Fanne Foxe show," Miss Foxe said, and, covering the mouthpiece with her hand, she turned to one of the other strippers.

"What's your name, honey?" Miss Foxe asked.

"Little Jesse James. I'm the co-feature," the other stripper said.

"With the beautiful and lovely Little Jesse James," Miss Foxe said into the telephone again, "and five, six other beautiful girls."

"She's so sweet. A lot of strippers scream and shout. You know — temperament," Miss James said.

"Yeah, a lot of them are downhill all the way," Chere Nicole, the other stripper, said. "Fanne says, 'I'm just a country girl.' Boy, can you imagine?"

Miss Nicole and Miss James looked respectfully at Miss Foxe. She is also known as Mrs. Annabella Battistella, "The Argentine Firecracker," and, most recently, "The Tidal Basin Girl." Wilbur Mills has brought her fame.

"No one ever heard of Fanne Foxe before she got the big break. Now me, I might never be recognized," Miss Nicole said.

"Same here," Miss James said, looking sad.

"If a girl uses her brain . . ." Miss Nicole said.

"Women's lib doesn't know what it's talking about," Miss James said.

"A woman can get anything she wants. She just has to be a little . . ." Miss Nicole said, and, standing up, she did a little bump and grind.

". . . Flexible," she said.

Miss Foxe, meanwhile, was talking about her business, and the hazards of success. She said her costumes were worth $15,000, maybe even $20,000, and that she had bought all the fans, feathers and beads herself, and then had sewn them together herself.

"If you buy one little dress, it can cost $700," she said, pursing her mouth. "And turkey feathers for a boa — very expensive!"

Then Miss Foxe said that burlesque had never been kind to her before. Stripping had never been much fun, but now, she said, she had a vision.

"I want to do a show," she said, "a lot of girls on stage, naked, with one girl stripping, and one comedian, a women comedian. That's what we need. A classy show. This attention to politics, if this doesn't lift burlesque, then nothing will."

When Miss Foxe went on stage, she was bumping and shaking, her feathers flying all about. Now and then she took off a G-string. She had three of them.

"Yaaaaahooooo," she said, "I'm just a country girl from Argentina."

Congress Approves Drinking Water Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress finished action Tuesday on a $156 million bill designed to safeguard citizens' drinking water, establishing for the first time national minimum water standards.

The bill has been debated for four years, with opposition from the oil industry and to some degree from the White House.

There have been indications that President Ford would veto the bill.

To guard against a pocket veto after Congress adjourns permanently, the Senate and the House speeded up their procedures and agreed on a final version sooner than expected.

The House accepted, with no debate and by a voice vote Tuesday, the bill which included a Senate amendment which guarantees citizens the right to bring suits against public water systems. The suits would be permitted 27 months after passage of the bill. The delay is designed to give local systems time to put the new water standards into effect.

The Environmental Protection Agency would be authorized to set national minimum drinking water standards, which would be enforced by the states. If the states are derelict in enforcing the standards, the EPA could step in.

The bill also provides for public water systems to notify media and consumers if safe water standards are violated.

It also includes safeguards for underground water supplies.

Rep. Paul G. Rogers, D-Fla., chief author of the bill, said it "climaxes a lengthy effort on the part of health officials and those concerned with public safety. I think we'll realize the benefits of this in the very near future. Looking back, it is amazing that we had not done this years ago."

County Officials Back Welfare Shift

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

The Nebraska Association of County Officials' legislative committee Tuesday voted to support proposed legislation which would save the counties more than $10 million in county welfare medical costs.

The proposal calls for repeal of the current statute which requires that 20% of the medical costs be borne by the counties.

The policy-making body of state association, which officially opens its three-day convention in Lincoln Wednesday, also voted to support six-year terms for county commissioners in three-commissioner counties.

Includes Rotating

Arnold Ruhnke, executive director of the association, noted that the proposal would include rotating terms so that counties would not be confronted with having the majority — two out of three commissioners — new on the board after an election.

Also given association sanction was a proposal which originated in Arthur County which would allow county boards to enter into an interlocal cooperative agreement with another county for use of that county's physical court facilities.

Arthur County had made the request because its court facilities do not meet requirements and it would cost about $50,000 to construct an adequate facility. It was also pointed out that Arthur County had not had a jury trial for many years.

Committee members, noting that such a proposal would be beneficial for many counties in the state, amended the permissive proposal to include all Class I and Class II counties which would include counties up to 9,000 population.

Said Feasible

Ruhnke said that the attorney general and state court administrator's office had felt that such a plan would be feasible providing that the jury comes from the county in which the offense occurred.

The legislative committee also went on record supporting the creation of a Department of Public Welfare Nursing Homes Advisory Committee.

The committee, which would consist of 12 members from the six mental health regions of the state, would, as proposed, be comprised of 51% consumer membership and 49% nursing home representation.

Under the proposal, the fee schedules for nursing home services would be established after consultation with the newly-created committee.

The welfare director, with the advice of the committee, will establish by rule and regulation a uniform system of audit reporting for the cost reimbursement to nursing homes entitled to compensation based on the department's fee schedule.

County officials deferred until January action on a proposal by the county assessors which would again require homeowners over 65 to reapply for the 100% homestead exemption each year.

The assessors, at their annual meeting in September, had said that there were many problems when an annual application was not required.

No Way To Know

They noted that many of these people die or move into another facility and rent out their homes, and the assessor has no way of knowing that those people no longer qualify for the exemption which is limited to owner-occupied homes whose owners also meet income requirements.

It was suggested that a form could be sent out each year and the homeowner over 65 w need only to sign that the the property had not chang

The legislative comm suggested that the assessors their own legislation on matter introduced and that committee would act on whe the association would supp the bill at the January meeti

Other Action

In other action, the legisla committee approved following proposals:

—changing the time neces for advertising road bids to less than 20 days by publicat of a notice once a week for th consecutive weeks.

—Deleting the dollar figure the amount that would required for letting bids for co struction and repair of brid and culverts when work is d by county forces.

—Increase from $2,000 to $ 000 the amount requiring public letting for county r material or supply purchases.

Richard Bourne Named To Fill Seat On Board

Lancaster County commissioners Tuesday appointed Richard M. Bourne to serve on the county personnel board to fill the unexpired term of Joe Ruschetti.

Ruschetti, who had served as chairman of the board since its creation last July and who also served on the City-County Implementation Commission (CCIC) personnel task force, submitted his resignation last week due to an employment transfer.

Bourne is in the department of management in the College of Business Administration at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

©The New York Times

New York — Fanne Foxe tripped and hurt her knee, and Tuesday night she canceled her engagement in New York. Miss Foxe said she was canceling because her knee hurt, although a friend said it was because of Wilbur Mills. The chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee went into a hospital Tuesday, and this, the friend said, upset Miss Foxe.

"Pressure," the friend said significantly, "all that pressure."

Miss Foxe herself wasn't speaking. Before she canceled, however, she had been speaking to everybody, and things were coming up roses.

"Darling, I have a mink coat on and nothing else," she had been saying. She was in the Burlesque House on 42nd Street, talking to her attorney on the telephone.

"I don't think I'm stupid," she said, "but I told the press that Tidal Basin was an accident . . . you know Wilbur. Nothing can stop him. No, I don't have no idea when he comes here."

Miss Foxe hung up the phone, but almost immediately it rang again. She looked around for someone to answer, but her manager was off on an errand, and the two other strippers in the room only stared. Miss Foxe settled deeper into her mink, and picked up the phone.

"Hello, 42nd Street Playhouse," she said.

It was a customer asking for information.

"This week we have the Miss Fanne Foxe show," Miss Foxe said, and, covering the mouthpiece with her hand, she turned to one of the other strippers.

"What's your name, honey?" Miss Foxe asked.

"Little Jesse James. I'm the co-feature," the other stripper said.

Groundwater Answer 'Not Easy'

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Sen. Maurice Kremer of Aurora Tuesday said Nebraska has reached the point "where we need to build more surface storage facilities" for water and take action to recharge the state's underground water system.

"We're not at a crisis situation yet," Kremer told Nebraska Rural Electric Association convention delegates in Lincoln.

But, he noted, it usually takes between 25 and 40 years to transfer an idea in water resources development into a completed project.

'Some Problems'

Nebraska, he said, is already experiencing "some problems" in the depletion of underground water resources.

Kremer pinpointed areas of concern in the Blue River Basin in southeast Nebraska, in Chase and Dundy Counties in southwest Nebraska, in Box Butte County in the northwest, and in the O'Neill-Atkinson area in the northeast.

Kremer heads the Legislature's Public Works Committee, which has been studying water resources in the state.

There is no easy answer as to how best to recharge the underground water supply, he said. In Texas, consideration is being given to a system of capturing water on the surface and injecting it into the underground supply, he noted.

"It's pretty cloudy at this point," he acknowledged.

Position Envious

Nebraska is in an envious position among the states with regard to its underground supply, Kremer said.

The state sits atop an underground lake estimated to hold two billion acre feet of water, he noted.

Whereas Nebraska now has about five million acres of irrigated land, he said, it has the potential to irrigate an estimated 18 million or 19 million acres if its water is carefully managed.

Increased irrigation would not only help further stabilize Nebraska's economy, Kremer said, but it would also give the state an improved ability to "help feed the hungry and the needy of the world."

Nebraska Third

Nebraska now ranks third among the states — behind California and Texas — in the number of irrigated acres, he said.

"I predict that Nebraska will in the future come close to the top itself," he noted.

The cost of developing Nebraska's water resources is "modest," Kremer said, when compared to the economic costs or returning to a system of dryland agriculture.

Surface storage development would help Nebraska use "a lot of water which is now leaving the state," he pointed out.

Within the state, he said, consideration should be given to trans-basin diversion of water.

But such diversion should be undertaken only with guarantees of supply for the basin of origin, he said.

Carpenter Suit Likely Wednesday

Scottsbluff (AP) — Former Scottsbluff State Sen. Terry Carpenter now is expected to take court action Wednesday to win back his seat in the legislature.

Carpenter said earlier he would ask the Scotts Bluff District Court Tuesday afternoon to reinstate disqualified write-in ballots and declare him the winner of the 48th District legislative seat.

No filing was reported Tuesday and an attorney in the firm that represents Carpenter said the action is expected Wednesday.

Carpenter said the vote counters threw out 80 to 100 of his write-in votes during the recount requested by Nichol.

Carpenter said he was confident the court would reinstate the 69 votes he needed to win the election.

Trade: Art For Oil

Kuwait (AP) — A British art dealer opened an exhibition here of European paintings valued at $2.4 million in hopes of recycling some oil money into art.

Murder Rate Linked To U.S. Birth Rate

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new government report Tuesday said the record U.S. murder rate rose with the growth of the post-World War II baby boom and a decline can't expected until that group reaches age 30 or more in the 1980s.

The prediction by the National Center for Health Statistics was based on homicide statistical trends dating back to the 19th century. These show that persons between 15 and 29 years of age are more likely to be assailants or victims than any other age group.

The center, an arm of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, estimated that 20,518 persons were murdered last year in this country, a rate of 9.8 deaths per 100,000 population. The previous record was 9.7 per 100,000 in 1933 during the depression days.

A. Joan Klebba, the statistician who compiled the figures, said 40 per cent of the 1972 murder victims and 60 per cent of those arrested for homicide were between ages 15 and 29. This, she said, represents in part the "population bulge" of persons born between World War II and the Korean conflict.

Employes Of DPI To Vote On Union

An estimated 2,600 State Department of Public Institutions (DPI) employes will decide on Dec. 20 if they want the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes (AFSCME) to be their exclusive bargaining agent.

The State Court of Industrial Relations ordered the election following an agreement between AFSCME and the State Department of Justice. The agreement is that the election will be held, provided the Justice Department can question the constitutionality of the election before the Nebraska Supreme Court.

Mary Combs, an AFSCME organizer, said service, clerical and technical employes at seven DPI locations will be able to participate in the on-site election.

Mrs. Combs said, "We think we're in good shape for the election. We've been fighting to get this election for the past year."

She noted that AFSCME currently has an estimated 1,000 members employed by DPI.

A simple majority of those voting is needed to give AFSCME the right to be the sole negotiator for all DPI employes in salary, work and grievance talks.

AFSCME is presently attempting to negotiate an agreement with the State Labor Department for its personnel.

A rival group, the Nebraska Association of Public Employes (NAPE), did not ask the court if it could also appear on the ballot.

Mrs. Combs said she was "a little bitter" that the Justice Department raised the constitutional question in its case but did not in NAPE's request for an election at the Game and Parks Commission.

Weekend Inmate Could Be Regular

Papillion (AP) — For the past month, Lorus Charles Axt, 20, of Bellevue, has been spending his weekends in the Sarpy County Jail, but he could be spending some weekdays behind bars in the near future.

Last August, Axt, accused of assaulting a state trooper during the investigation of a traffic accident, was sentenced to 60 days in jail.

Axt told the judge he was enrolled in college, and the judge had compassion for the young man's aspirations. So he made the necessary arrangements for Axt to serve his term on weekends.

Every Friday for the past month Axt would show up at the jail about 7 p.m. Come Sunday evening, he would be freed to pursue his studies.

However, Axt was still in jail Tuesday, facing an additional misdemeanor charge, and the possibility that his weekend sentence serving could be coming to an abrupt halt.

Jailers said they found Axt trying to smuggle a lid of marijuana into his cell last Friday. The illegal weed was found in Axt's shorts, officials said.

Sarpy County Sheriff Pat Thomas said misdemeanor charges of illegal possession of marijuana against Axt were pending, and that the county attorney will probably ask the judge who sentenced Axt to change his ruling on the weekend sentence serving, making Axt a regular prisoner until his term is expired.

Resident Of Barrack Stabs Self To Death

A 20-year-old Indian, Jonathan Moore, found bleeding in a chair at the Wounded Knee barrack early Tuesday morning died of self-inflicted stab wounds, according to Lancaster County Atty. Paul Douglas.

According to police reports some persons staying at the barrack in the Lincoln Air Park heard Moore cry out shortly after 3:30 a.m.

Robert Onco, one of the first to reach Moore, said that Moore said, "Brother, forgive me." Onco attempted to stem the bleeding with a compress, police said.

Douglas said that a hunting knife with a four and one-half inch blade was found on a table in the room.

Douglas said about 25 people were questioned in connection with the death. No polygraph examinations were given, he said.

Moore, 20, of Old Town, Maine, was called to testify in the trial of Stanley Mark Neptune on a charge of assaulting, resisting or impeding a federal officer.

Moore never testified in the trial. A prosecution spokesman said Moore was not present at the scene of the incident and was not a "critical witness." A jury acquitted Neptune of the charge.

In a statement on Moore's death the Wounded Knee Defense-Offense Committee said, "This tragedy reminds us of the less personal but equally real statistics of Indian people committing suicide five times more often than non-Indians.

"There could be no clearer statement that changes must be made in this country. This is what the Wounded Knee struggle is about. As we mourn for our friend, we redouble our efforts to see that those changes come."

Bribe Charges Dropped Against Iowa Processor

Dakota City (AP) — J. Fred Haigler, president of Iowa Beef Processors, Inc., (IBP) Tuesday announced that company attorneys had received notice that federal charges aginst the firm's co-chairman, Currier J. Holman, have been dropped.

Haigler said a letter containing the decision was received Tuesday, and was signed by William I. Aronwald, Asst. Atty. in charge of the New York Joint Strike Force, and Paul J. Curran, U. S. Atty. for the Southern District of New York. Federal authorities worked in cooperation with the office of the district attorney for Manhattan County, N. Y., in the investigation which led to a two-count, federal indictment charging Holman with using interstate commerce to facilitate a conspiracy to bribe labor union officials and supermarket meat buyers in order to effect the sale of IBP's "boxed beef" in the lucrative New York City market area.

The federal indictment was issued March 13, 1973.

Just two months ago, on Oct 7, Holman and IBP were convicted on two similar, New York state misdemeanor charges.

The presiding judge in the trial, New York Supreme Court Justice Burton B. Roberts, gave Holman an unconditional discharge on both counts, but fined the company $7,000.

Roberts said he was "sorely tempted to dismiss the case, and acquit Holman in the interest of justice."

Roberts went on to recommend and suggest that the Appelate Division of the state's high court explore the possibility of reversing his decision if the matter comes before that body.

Holman and IBP have filed appeals from the convictions.

Fire Kills Man From Imperial

Imperial (UPI) — John Hallett, 67, of Imperial died Saturday night in an accidental fire at his home, Chase County Coroner Guy Curtis announced.

Hallett's wife found his body on the back porch of the house when she returned home.

The fire apparently started, Curtis said, when Hallett was smoking in bed and the cigaret set fire to his nylon shirt.

He said it had not been determined whether Hallett died of burns or smoke inhalation.

Confab Put Off Again

United Nations (UPI) — The General Assembly put off for the fourth year in a row a decision on an international convention to protect journalists covering armed conflicts.

But, he noted, it usually takes between 25 and 40 years to transfer an idea in water resources development into a completed project.

'Some Problems'

Nebraska, he said, is already experiencing "some problems" in the depletion of underground water resources.

Kremer pinpointed areas of concern in the Blue River Basin in southeast Nebraska, in Chase and Dundy Counties in southwest Nebraska, in Box Butte County in the northwest, and in the O'Neill-Atkinson area in the northeast.

Kremer heads the Legislature's Public Works Committee, which has been studying water resources in the state.

There is no easy answer as to how best to recharge the underground water supply, he said. In Texas, consideration is being given to a system of capturing water on the surface and injecting it into the underground supply, he noted.

"It's pretty cloudy at this point," he acknowledged.

Position Envious

Nebraska is in an envious position among the states with regard to its underground supply, Kremer said.

The state sits atop an underground lake estimated to hold two billion acre feet of water, he noted.

Whereas Nebraska now has about five million acres of irrigated land, he said, it has the potential to irrigate an estimated 18 million or 19 million acres if its water is carefully managed.

Increased irrigation would not only help further stabilize Nebraska's economy, Kremer said, but it would also give the state an improved ability to "help feed the hungry and the needy of the world."

Nebraska Third

Nebraska now ranks third among the states — behind California and Texas — in the number of irrigated acres, he said.

"I predict that Nebraska will in the future come close to the top itself," he noted.

The cost of developing Nebraska's water resources is "modest," Kremer said, when compared to the economic costs or returning to a system of dryland agriculture.

Surface storage development would help Nebraska use "a lot of water which is now leaving the state," he pointed out.

Within the state, he said, consideration should be given to trans-basin diversion of water.

But such diversion should be undertaken only with guarantees of supply for the basin of origin, he said.

Sen. Maurice Kremer

Carpenter Suit Likely Wednesday

Scottsbluff (AP) — Former Scottsbluff State Sen. Terry Carpenter now is expected to take court action Wednesday to win back his seat in the legislature.

Carpenter said earlier he would ask the Scotts Bluff District Court Tuesday afternoon to reinstate disqualified write-in ballots and declare him the winner of the 48th District legislative seat.

No filing was reported Tuesday and an attorney in the firm that represents Carpenter said the action is expected Wednesday.

Carpenter said the vote counters threw out 80 to 100 of his write-in votes during the recount requested by Nichol.

Carpenter said he was confident the court would reinstate the 69 votes he needed to win the election.

Murder Rate Linked To U.S. Birth Rate

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new government report Tuesday said the record U.S. murder rate rose with the growth of the post-World War II baby boom and a decline can't expected until that group reaches age 30 or more in the 1980s.

The prediction by the National Center for Health Statistics was based on homicide statistical trends dating back to the 19th century. These show that persons between 15 and 29 years of age are more likely to be assailants or victims than any other age group.

The center, an arm of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, estimated that 20,518 persons were murdered last year in this country, a rate of 9.8 deaths per 100,000 population. The previous record was 9.7 per 100,000 in 1933 during the depression days.

A. Joan Klebba, the statistician who compiled the figures, said 40 per cent of the 1972 murder victims and 60 per cent of those arrested for homicide were between ages 15 and 29. This, she said, represents in part the "population bulge" of persons born between World War II and the Korean conflict.

Employes Of DPI To Vote On Union

An estimated 2,600 State Department of Public Institutions (DPI) employes will decide on Dec. 20 if they want the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes (AFSCME) to be their exclusive bargaining agent.

The State Court of Industrial Relations ordered the election following an agreement between AFSCME and the State Department of Justice. The agreement is that the election will be held, provided the Justice Department can question the constitutionality of the election before the Nebraska Supreme Court.

Mary Combs, an AFSCME organizer, said service, clerical and technical employes at seven DPI locations will be able to participate in the on-site election.

Mrs. Combs said, "We think we're in good shape for the election. We've been fighting to get this election for the past year."

She noted that AFSCME currently has an estimated 1,000 members employed by DPI.

A simple majority of those voting is needed to give AFSCME the right to be the sole negotiator for all DPI employes in salary, work and grievance talks.

AFSCME is presently attempting to negotiate an agreement with the State Labor Department for its personnel.

A rival group, the Nebraska Association of Public Employes (NAPE), did not ask the court if it could also appear on the ballot.

Mrs. Combs said she was "a little bitter" that the Justice Department raised the constitutional question in its case but did not in NAPE's request for an election at the Game and Parks Commission.

Weekend Inmate Could Be Regular

Papillion (AP) — For the past month, Lorus Charles Axt, 20, of Bellevue, has been spending his weekends in the Sarpy County Jail, but he could be spending some weekdays behind bars in the near future.

Last August, Axt, accused of assaulting a state trooper during the investigation of a traffic accident, was sentenced to 60 days in jail.

Axt told the judge he was enrolled in college, and the judge had compassion for the young man's aspirations. So he made the necessary arrangements for Axt to serve his term on weekends.

Every Friday for the past month Axt would show up at the jail about 7 p.m. Come Sunday evening, he would be freed to pursue his studies.

However, Axt was still in jail Tuesday, facing an additional misdemeanor charge, and the possibility that his weekend sentence serving could be coming to an abrupt halt.

Jailers said they found Axt trying to smuggle a lid of marijuana into his cell last Friday. The illegal weed was found in Axt's shorts, officials said.

Sarpy County Sheriff Pat Thomas said misdemeanor charges of illegal possession of marijuana against Axt were pending, and that the county attorney will probably ask the judge who sentenced Axt to change his ruling on the weekend sentence serving, making Axt a regular prisoner until his term is expired.

Resident Of Barrack Stabs Self To Death

A 20-year-old Indian, Jonathan Moore, found bleeding in a chair at the Wounded Knee barrack early Tuesday morning died of self-inflicted stab wounds, according to Lancaster County Atty. Paul Douglas.

According to police reports some persons staying at the barrack in the Lincoln Air Park heard Moore cry out shortly after 3:30 a.m.

Robert Onco, one of the first to reach Moore, said that Moore said, "Brother, forgive me." Onco attempted to stem the bleeding with a compress, police said.

Douglas said that a hunting knife with a four and one-half inch blade was found on a table in the room.

Douglas said about 25 people were questioned in connection with the death. No polygraph examinations were given, he said.

Moore, 20, of Old Town, Maine, was called to testify in the trial of Stanley Mark Neptune on a charge of assaulting, resisting or impeding a federal officer.

Moore never testified in the trial. A prosecution spokesman said Moore was not present at the scene of the incident and was not a "critical witness." A jury acquitted Neptune of the charge.

In a statement on Moore's death the Wounded Knee Defense-Offense Committee said, "This tragedy reminds us of the less personal but equally real statistics of Indian people committing suicide five times more often than non-Indians.

"There could be no clearer statement that changes must be made in this country. This is what the Wounded Knee struggle is about. As we mourn for our friend, we redouble our efforts to see that those changes come."

Bribe Charges Dropped Against Iowa Processor

Dakota City (AP) — J. Fred Haigler, president of Iowa Beef Processors, Inc., (IBP) Tuesday announced that company attorneys had received notice that federal charges aginst the firm's co-chairman, Currier J. Holman, have been dropped.

Haigler said a letter containing the decision was received Tuesday, and was signed by William I. Aronwald, Asst. Atty. in charge of the New York Joint Strike Force, and Paul J. Curran, U. S. Atty. for the Southern District of New York. Federal authorities worked in cooperation with the office of the district attorney for Manhattan County, N. Y., in the investigation which led to a two-count, federal indictment charging Holman with using interstate commerce to facilitate a conspiracy to bribe labor union officials and supermarket meat buyers in order to effect the sale of IBP's "boxed beef" in the lucrative New York City market area.

The federal indictment was issued March 13, 1973.

Just two months ago, on Oct 7, Holman and IBP were convicted on two similar, New York state misdemeanor charges.

The presiding judge in the trial, New York Supreme Court Justice Burton B. Roberts, gave Holman an unconditional discharge on both counts, but fined the company $7,000.

Roberts said he was "sorely tempted to dismiss the case, and acquit Holman in the interest of justice."

Roberts went on to recommend and suggest that the Appelate Division of the state's high court explore the possibility of reversing his decision if the matter comes before that body.

Holman and IBP have filed appeals from the convictions.

Fire Kills Man From Imperial

Imperial (UPI) — John Hallett, 67, of Imperial died Saturday night in an accidental fire at his home, Chase County Coroner Guy Curtis announced.

Hallett's wife found his body on the back porch of the house when she returned home.

The fire apparently started, Curtis said, when Hallett was smoking in bed and the cigaret set fire to his nylon shirt.

He said it had not been determined whether Hallett died of burns or smoke inhalation.

Silver Coins Up To Triple Of Face Value

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

New York — During the 1960s, chances are that you or someone in your family started hoarding silver coins. It was a wise move. Today, you could sell them for up to three times their face value — and earlier this year, prices were even higher. Dealers' quotes vary widely, of course, and two-and-a-half times face value is a more common price today. But some of the coin dealers I spoke with recently were offering 30 cents for Roosevelt dimes, 75 cents for Washington quarters and $1.50 for Franklin half-dollars.

Coin values have soared because of the big jump in the price of silver. In the early sixties, spot silver sold for around $1.25 an ounce, and in early 1973 it was still under $2.

But in mid-November, silver was going for $4.50, and traded as high as $6.70 last February. Prices for common silver coins fluctuate with the silver price, since most of them aren't resold to collectors but simply melted down.

Serious hoarding began when the government warned it was going to remove silver from the country's coinage. The U.S. Mint stopped making 90% silver dimes, quarters and half-dollars in 1964. The 50-cent piece remained at 40% silver through 1969, but since then all U.S. coins minted for circulation have been made of nickel-clad copper.

Certain Dates Sought

If you have a coffee can full of coins, they're most probably of the common variety. But every casual collection likely has one or two special pieces. Coins of certain dates are much sought by collectors (usually because they were minted in small numbers), and these bring a price considerably above their melt-down value.

For example, a Washington quarter of 1932, from the Denver or San Francisco mints, brings $30 to $32 today — and as much as $375 if the coin is bright and uncirculated (that's what's meant by "mint" condition). You can sell a 1916 Denver dime for around $70 even in poor condition. A "D" or an "S" after the date on your coin will tell you if it's the product of the Denver or San Francisco mint. There are scores of other dates of interest to numismatists.

Silver dollars bring $4 up, depending on condition. But several dates of the Morgan dollar (designed by George T. Morgan and issued between 1878 and 1921) can bring $8 to $12, according to Don Brigandi, a New York dealer, and much more if they're in top condtion. The Peace dollar, minted between 1921 and 1935, brings $10 to $15 and up for certain years. Just because a coin is old doesn't

Many coffee-can collections also hold a "commemorative half" — a half-dollar minted for some special occasion. Most common, says Richard Scott, of Goldie's Coin and Stamp Center in Camp Springs, Md., a major trader, are those honoring Booker T. Washington and George Washington Carver, which would bring you around $10 each; the Stone Mountain commemorative, worth $22 to $25; and the Columbia Exposition, $25 and up. Less common commemoratives, like the Pilgrim, are worth $75 and up. The subject of any commemorative you have will be written out right on the coin.

Some Nickels Valuable

Special dates of Buffalo and Liberty-head nickels are valuable (the common coins bring 10 to 20 cents). An Indianhead penny might get you 50 or 60 cents.

If you want to sell your coins, get a quote from several dealers. The price spread even in a single city may be considerable. Dealers who specialize in gold coins and rarities often offer less because they don't like to bother with common coins.

It's useful to have some idea of which coins are especially valuable before you take your collection in for appraisal. You can check this in numismatic publications like Coin World and COINage, which any dealer should have on hand. Most quotes there are for top-condition coins, so if yours have been circulated they will bring less. At least you'll be able to tell which of the dates in your collection are numismatically interesting.

Incidentally, Don Brigandi advises that you not keep your coins in leater pouches or wrapped in paper, as these materials tend to tarnish them. A metal box is best, with special coins wrapped in foil.

Social Security Bite To Be Bigger, Longer

By DAN MILLER

If your paycheck seems a little bigger lately, it's because you've finally reached the maximum "contribution" for Social Security payments in 1974.

But don't worry, because it'll start again Jan. 1 and continue for a longer time than in 1974.

For the fifth straight year, the maximum tax for Social Security payments will increase, rising 6.8% to $824.85 in 1975 from $772.20, the maximum amount paid in 1974.

The Social Security tax rate remains the same — 5.85% of taxable income — but the salary base jumps to $14,100 from $13,200.

That means the pinch will be on longer in 1975 than it was this year.

Bite Will Last Longer

For instance, if your salary is $15,000 this year, Social Security took a nip of about $17 a week from your paycheck until the second week of November. But next year, the bite will be on until the first week of December.

If you earn $20,000, you stopped paying weekly Social Security taxes of about $23 during the third week of August. But in 1975, you won't get away until the second week of September.

And if you earn $14,100 this year, the weekly Social Security tax of about $16 stops the first week in December. In 1975, it'll be there right to the last paycheck of the year.

Employers are matching your weekly payment, so the burden is even heavier on the self-employed. They pay 7.9% tax rate up to a maximum of $1,042.80 this year. Next year, they'll pay $1,113.90 — same tax rate, higher base.

The Social Security Administration estimates that about one out of every five workers will feel the added pinch of the higher base. The Social Security people also will enjoy about $1.8 billion in added revenue.

Greater Protection

Caspar W. Weinberger, secretary of health, education and welfare, which administers Social Security, says, "in return for the increase in taxes, these affected workers will have greater protection because a larger amount of their earnings will be credited toward benefits than before. This will mean higher benefits for them and their families in the event of retirement, disability or death than would have been possible without an increase in the base."

When Social Security made its debut in 1937, employes and employers paid a 1% tax on earnings up to $3,000 for a maximum payment of $30 a year.

Persons already on Social Security in 1975 will be able to earn up to $2,520 without having benefits cut. In 1974, the figure is $2,400.

Persons who earn more than $2,520 in 1975 may still get some benefits, but every dollar they earn above $2,520 may cause a reduction of 50 cents in their Social Security benefits for the year.

Gifts From Public Not OK For 'Finest'

New York (UPI) — New York City's "finest," its policemen, were officially warned that Christmas presents from Santa Claus may be okay, but presents from the public definitely are not.

In an unusually stern holiday message to the top officers of his men in blue, Police Commissioner Michael J. Codd told them to stamp out "the last vestiges of that seasonal affliction, the Christmas gratuity." He said cops found taking Yule gifts will be in for disciplinary action.

4-Lane Bridge Hearing Slated

The Nebraska Department of Roads and the State Highway Commission will hold a public hearing Dec. 17 in South Sioux City on the proposed construction of a four-lane bridge over the Missouri River between that community and Sioux City, Iowa.

Included is a major revision of the U.S. 20, U.S. 77 and Interstate 29 interchange, and the Wesley Way and Third street connection in Sioux City.

Tentative schedules for right of way acquisition and construction, along with relocation assistance programs, will be discussed.

Silver Coins Up To Triple Of Face Value

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

New York — During the 1960s, chances are that you or someone in your family started hoarding silver coins. It was a wise move. Today, you could sell them for up to three times their face value — and earlier this year, prices were even higher. Dealers' quotes vary widely, of course, and two-and-a-half times face value is a more common price today. But some of the coin dealers I spoke with recently were offering 30 cents for Roosevelt dimes, 75 cents for Washington quarters and $1.50 for Franklin half-dollars.

Coin values have soared because of the big jump in the price of silver. In the early sixties, spot silver sold for around $1.25 an ounce, and in early 1973 it was still under $2.

But in mid-November, silver was going for $4.50, and traded as high as $6.70 last February. Prices for common silver coins fluctuate with the silver price, since most of them aren't resold to collectors but simply melted down.

Serious hoarding began when the government warned it was going to remove silver from the country's coinage. The U.S. Mint stopped making 90% silver dimes, quarters and half-dollars in 1964. The 50-cent piece remained at 40% silver through 1969, but since then all U.S. coins minted for circulation have been made of nickel-clad copper.

Certain Dates Sought

If you have a coffee can full of coins, they're most probably of the common variety. But every casual collection likely has one or two special pieces. Coins of certain dates are much sought by collectors (usually because they were minted in small numbers), and these bring a price considerably above their melt-down value.

For example, a Washington quarter of 1932, from the Denver or San Francisco mints, brings $30 to $32 today — and as much as $375 if the coin is bright and uncirculated (that's what's meant by "mint" condition). You can sell a 1916 Denver dime for around $70 even in poor condition. A "D" or an "S" after the date on your coin will tell you if it's the product of the Denver or San Francisco mint. There are scores of other dates of interest to numismatists.

Silver dollars bring $4 up, depending on condition. But several dates of the Morgan dollar (designed by George T. Morgan and issued between 1878 and 1921) can bring $8 to $12, according to Don Brigandi, a New York dealer, and much more if they're in top condtion. The Peace dollar, minted between 1921 and 1935, brings $10 to $15 and up for certain years. Just because a coin is old doesn't

Many coffee-can collections also hold a "commemorative half" — a half-dollar minted for some special occasion. Most common, says Richard Scott, of Goldie's Coin and Stamp Center in Camp Springs, Md., a major trader, are those honoring Booker T. Washington and George Washington Carver, which would bring you around $10 each; the Stone Mountain commemorative, worth $22 to $25; and the Columbia Exposition, $25 and up. Less common commemoratives, like the Pilgrim, are worth $75 and up. The subject of any commemorative you have will be written out right on the coin.

Some Nickels Valuable

Special dates of Buffalo and Liberty-head nickels are valuable (the common coins bring 10 to 20 cents). An Indianhead penny might get you 50 or 60 cents.

If you want to sell your coins, get a quote from several dealers. The price spread even in a single city may be considerable. Dealers who specialize in gold coins and rarities often offer less because they don't like to bother with common coins.

It's useful to have some idea of which coins are especially valuable before you take your collection in for appraisal. You can check this in numismatic publications like Coin World and COINage, which any dealer should have on hand. Most guotes there are for top-condition coins, so if yours have been circulated they will bring less. At least you'll be able to tell which of the dates in your collection are numismatically interesting.

Incidentally, Don Brigandi advises that you not keep your coins in leater pouches or wrapped in paper, as these materials tend to tarnish them. A metal box is best, with special coins wrapped in foil.

Social Security Bite To Be Bigger, Longer

By DAN MILLER

If your paycheck seems a little bigger lately, it's because you've finally reached the maximum "contribution" for Social Security payments in 1974.

But don't worry, because it'll start again Jan. 1 and continue for a longer time than in 1974.

For the fifth straight year, the maximum tax for Social Security payments will increase, rising 6.8% to $824.85 in 1975 from $772.20, the maximum amount paid in 1974.

The Social Security tax rate remains the same — 5.85% of taxable income — but the salary base jumps to $14,100 from $13,200.

That means the pinch will be on longer in 1975 than it was this year.

Bite Will Last Longer

For instance, if your salary is $15,000 this year, Social Security took a nip of about $17 a week from your paycheck until the second week of November. But next year, the bite will be on until the first week of December.

If you earn $20,000, you stopped paying weekly Social Security taxes of about $23 during the third week of August. But in 1975, you won't get away until the second week of September.

And if you earn $14,100 this year, the weekly Social Security tax of about $16 stops the first week in December. In 1975, it'll be there right to the last paycheck of the year.

Employers are matching your weekly payment, so the burden is even heavier on the self-employed. They pay 7.9% tax rate up to a maximum of $1,042.80 this year. Next year, they'll pay $1,113.90 — same tax rate, higher base.

The Social Security Administration estimates that about one out of every five workers will feel the added pinch of the higher base. The Social Security people also will enjoy about $1.8 billion in added revenue.

Greater Protection

Caspar W. Weinberger, secretary of health, education and welfare, which administers Social Security, says, "in return for the increase in taxes, these affected workers will have greater protection because a larger amount of their earnings will be credited toward benefits than before. This will mean higher benefits for them and their families in the event of retirement, disability or death than would have been possible without an increase in the base."

When Social Security made its debut in 1937, employes and employers paid a 1% tax on earnings up to $3,000 for a maximum payment of $30 a year.

Persons already on Social Security in 1975 will be able to earn up to $2,520 without having benefits cut. In 1974, the figure is $2,400.

Persons who earn more than $2,520 in 1975 may still get some benefits, but every dollar they earn above $2,520 may cause a reduction of 50 cents in their Social Security benefits for the year.

Gifts From Public Not OK For 'Finest'

New York (UPI) — New York City's "finest," its policemen, were officially warned that Christmas presents from Santa Claus may be okay, but presents from the public definitely are not.

In an unusually stern holiday message to the top officers of his men in blue, Police Commissioner Michael J. Codd told them to stamp out "the last vestiges of that seasonal affliction, the Christmas gratuity." He said cops found taking Yule gifts will be in for disciplinary action.

4-Lane Bridge Hearing Slated

The Nebraska Department of Roads and the State Highway Commission will hold a public hearing Dec. 17 in South Sioux City on the proposed construction of a four-lane bridge over the Missouri River between that community and Sioux City, Iowa.

Included is a major revision of the U.S. 20, U.S. 77 and Interstate 29 interchange, and the Wesley Way and Third street connection in Sioux City.

Tentative schedules for right of way acquisition and construction, along with relocation assistance programs, will be discussed.

Stocks Broadly Lower

New York (AP) — The stock market pushed broadly lower again Tuesday, sinking close to the 12-year low of early October, under the weight of continuing recession worries.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 6.41 to 596.61, its lowest finish since Oct. 4, when it closed at 584.56.

Declines outpaced advances 1,087 to 287 among the 1,800 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

Trading volume picked up somewhat from the extremely slow pace of the previous two sessions but was still fairly modest at 13.62 million shares.

The day broke down neatly into two parts — a steady slide in the morning, and a weak recovery attempt in the afternoon.

The pivotal point came at noon, with the Dow off 9.62 and at its low for the session, and it coincided with news reports of an administration economist's remark that a tax cut should get high priority if further measures were needed to combat the economic slump.

The economist, William Fellner of President Ford's Council of Economic Advisers, was quick to add that it was too soon to know whether that kind of step was called for.

Some investors, however, apparently took the comment as a cue to do some very cautious bargain hunting, with many stocks near or at their levels in many years.

But the upswing was able to gather little momentum in the face of recession worries, uncertainty surrounding the coal strike, and the upturn in short-term interest rates over the last few days.

"People are concerned — and with some cause," said Manown "Buck" Kisor at Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis. "It does look like it's going to be the longest recession in the post-World War II period, and conceivably the deepest." Gold stocks were among the day's biggest losers in the wake of Treasury Secretary William I. Simon's disclosure that the government planned to sell two million ounces of gold Jan. 6, a few days after the legal ban on private ownership of gold by Americans is due to be lifted.

Stocks Broadly Lower

New York (AP) — The stock market pushed broadly lower again Tuesday, sinking close to the 12-year low of early October, under the weight of continuing recession worries.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 6.41 to 596.61, its lowest finish since Oct. 4, when it closed at 584.56.

Declines outpaced advances 1,087 to 287 among the 1,800 issues traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

Trading volume picked up somewhat from the extremely slow pace of the previous two sessions but was still fairly modest at 13.62 million shares.

The day broke down neatly into two parts — a steady slide in the morning, and a weak recovery attempt in the afternoon.

The pivotal point came at noon, with the Dow off 9.62 and at its low for the session, and it coincided with news reports of an administration economist's remark that a tax cut should get high priority if further measures were needed to combat the economic slump.

The economist, William Fellner of President Ford's Council of Economic Advisers, was quick to add that it was too soon to know whether that kind of step was called for.

Some investors, however, apparently took the comment as a cue to do some very cautious bargain hunting, with many stocks near or at their levels in many years.

But the upswing was able to gather little momentum in the face of recession worries, uncertainty surrounding the coal strike, and the upturn in short-term interest rates over the last few days.

"People are concerned — and with some cause," said Manown "Buck" Kisor at Paine, Webber, Jackson & Curtis. "It does look like it's going to be the longest recession in the post-World War II period, and conceivably the deepest." Gold stocks were among the day's biggest losers in the wake of Treasury Secretary William I. Simon's disclosure that the government planned to sell two million ounces of gold Jan. 6, a few days after the legal ban on private ownership of gold by Americans is due to be lifted.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you. 12-4

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you. 12-4

Sorting Out Begins

College basketball is off to a roaring start around the nation and it won't be long before the sorting out will begin of teams that rightfully deserve to be ranked high nationally.

One such game comes up Wednesday night in Lawrence, Kan., when third-rated Indiana opposes Big Eight favorite and seventh-ranked Kansas in the Allen Field House.

Kansas won impressively Monday night over Augustana of South Dakota 85-50 as coach Ted Owens substituted freely in both halves. Ten Kansas players got points.

While the Jayhawks lost only guard Tom Kivisto from the team that finished in fourth place in the NCAA tournament last spring, the visiting Hoosiers have everybody back from a team that tied for the Big Ten championship and went on to win the College Commissioners Association (CCA) tournament in St. Louis.

It is ironical that Kansas never has beaten Indiana in basketball, having dropped two NCAA championship final matches to the Hoosiers, 60-42 in 1940 and 69-68 in 1953. Tonight's game is the fourth of a new series which has seen the Hoosiers win 59-56 and 72-59 in Bloomington and 72-55 in Lawrence.

Kansas has the size necessary to compete against coach Bob Knight's Hoosiers, who start a front line of Kent Benson (6-10), most valuable player in the CCA as a freshman, senior Steve Green (6-6) and junior Scott May (6-7).

Kansas' front line includes 6-8 Norman Cook and 6-9 Donnie Von Moore, both sophomores, and 6-10 senior center Rick Suttle. Jayhawk guards also are monstrous with 6-3 Dale Greenlee teaming with 6-6 Roger Morningstar.

Indiana's top guard is Quinn Bucker, 6-2, a very quick and very tough ball handler. John Laskowski, who is 6-6, is the other guard.

Nebraska may face the Hoosiers in the tournament at Bloomington Dec. 20-21. The Huskers play Southern Methodist in the first round after Indiana meets Creighton in the tournament opener.

Louisville Title Contender

Houston lost a rare home game to what might be a rare University of Louisville basketball team Monday night. Rare, because Louisville coach Denny Crum thinks he has a national championship club.

Crum should know what an NCAA champ looks like because he was assistant to John Wooden at UCLA before going to Louisville three years ago.

Sports Illustrated last week said Louisville is a "cinch winner" of the NCAA title, yet says the 1974-75 season could be "the most wide-open and interesting year since the 1950s."

Here's SI's top 20 picks: 1. Louisville, 2. North Carolina State, 3. Indiana, 4. UCLA, 5. South Carolina, 6. Kansas, 7. Alabama, 8. Penn, 9. Purdue, 10. Southern California, 11. Detroit, 12. Maryland, 13. DePaul, 14. Memphis State, 15. North Carolina, 16. Arizona, 17. Manhattan, 18. Marquette, 19. Arizona State, 20. Boston College.

Arizona State, incidentally, is a possible Nebraska opponent Saturday in the Sun Devil Classic in Tempe, Ariz. Arizona meets Montana in the first round with NU opposing Long Beach State.

The Sun Devils return seven lettermen, including three starters from last year's team which finished 18-9 overall and placed second to Arizona in the Western Athletic Conference.

ASU has an All-American candidate in Lionel Hollins, a 6-3 senior guard who was All-WAC last year after averaging 17.3 points a game.

Nebraska and Arizona State have met once previously in basketball, losing 83-76 to Coach Ned Wulk's team in 1968. Wulk has been guiding the Sun Devils for 24 seasons.

No Surprise: Griffin Victor

NEW YORK (AP) — Archie Griffin, Ohio State's record-smashing running back, won the coveted Heisman Trophy as college football's No. 1 player Tuesday but said he would rather have a national championship to share with his teammates.

"This trophy is not for me, it's for the team," said the soft-spoken junior tailback, who seemed almost bewildered by the cluster of newsmen and the glare of television lights.

"I'd love to win the national championship," he said, "and if trading this award for a win over Michigan State would mean being No. 1 . . . yes, I'd trade it. I'd rather have a national championship, to tell the truth."

Ohio State was No. 1 in The Associated Press rankings most of the season, but fell from the top by losing to Michigan State 16-13 on Nov. 9. The Buckeyes are currently ranked third with one game to go—against Southern California in the Rose Bowl on Jan. 1.

Griffin became only the fifth non-senior to capture the Heisman, winning in a landslide over Southern California senior tailback Anthony Davis. The two will meet in the Rose Bowl for the third year in a row.

The 5-foot-9, 185-pound Griffin received 483 first-place votes—each worth three points—and 920 of a possible 2,547 points from a nationwide panel of 849 electors. He was named second on 198 ballots and third on 75 others. The votes were tabulated on a 3-2-1 point basis.

Davis received 120 first-place votes, 148 seconds and 163 thirds for 819 points.

Joe Washington, a junior halfback from Oklahoma, finished third with 87 first-place votes and 661 points. Then came Notre Dame quarterback Tom Clements and Nebraska quarterback Dave Humm.

Rounding out the list of top 10 finishers were Michigan quarterback Dennis Franklin, Oklahoma linebacker Rod Shoate—the top lineman in the balloting—Brigham Young quarterback Gary Sheide, Maryland defensive lineman Randy White—the Outland Trophy winner—and California quarterback Steve Bartkowski.

"I really thought Davis might get it after Saturday," Griffin said.

Davis scored four times against Notre Dame on national television Saturday but most of the ballots were in well before that. The official deadline was 9 a.m., EST, Tuesday, but a spokesman for the Downtown Athletic Club, which sponsors the award, said it was obvious some time ago that Griffin was the winner.

Griffin won the voting in each of the country's five regions—East, South, Midwest, Southwest and Far West. Davis finished second and Washington third in the East, South and Far West while Washington was second and Davis third in the Midwest and Southwest.

"I never dreamed about being in this situation right here," Griffin said. "I'm just so happy I'm at a loss for words. When I was young, I dreamed about playing college football, but I never dreamed I'd win the Heisman Trophy."

With the Rose Bowl game and a full senior season to go, Griffin has 4,064 yards rushing, an Ohio State and Big Ten record. More spectacular is his continuing NCAA record of having rushed for more than 100 yards in 22 consecutive games—plus the 1974 Rose Bowl—throughout his sophomore and junior seasons.

This year he led the Buckeyes to a 10-1 regular-season record and totaled 1,620 yards, most among the nation's major colleges. Quite an accomplishment for the once-chubby youngster who was called "Tank" and played offensive guard as a 10-year-old in the Columbus little leagues.

Griffin has six football-playing brothers. James Jr., the eldest son, played at Muskingum College and is an insurance actuary. Larry played at Louisville and works at a state school for boys and Daryl is a senior halfback at Kent State.

Then comes Archie. His backup at tailback for Ohio State is freshman Ray Griffin, the No. 5 son. After him is Duncan, an all-state end-defensive back at Eastmoor High in Columbus, and seventh-grader Keith, 13, who may be the best Griffin of all. There also is 9-year-old sister Crystal.

The other juniors to win the Heisman were Doc Blanchard of Army in 1945, Doak Walker of Southern Methodist in 1948, Vic Janowicz of Ohio State in 1950 and Roger Staubach of Navy in 1963. None was able to repeat as a senior.

"I'm gonna put my best foot forward next year," Griffin said, "and if the voters think I'm good enough to win it again, then I'll win it."

Early Victories Boost Missouri Cage Hopes

Sixth Of A Series

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

Missouri basketball coach Norm Stewart has only one full-time starter back from last season's team, but victories in the fist two games over the weekend have boosted hopes of Tiger followers.

Missouri has shown a lot of scoring punch in whipping Wisconsin-Oshkosh, 95-81 and Rice, 92-67. The next competition will be Friday and Saturday in the "Show-Me Classic" at Columbia, Mo., featuring visiting squads from Portland, Mississippi State and Connecticut.

"We think we can have a good team," Stewart said, but admitted that for the first year in his eight seasons at Missouri he doesn't have a strong, powerful, quality basketball player.

"We don't have a John Brown or an Al Eberhard around any more, but the enthusiasm everyone has displayed has been encouraging," he said.

On the front line, 6-11 Gail Wolf and 6-6 Bill Flamank had the most experience going into pre-season practive, but Wolf underwent knee surgery late in October and probably will miss the entire season. Wolf started 17 games last winter.

Sophomore Kim Anderson, who is 6-8, opened in the pivot in the first two games and teamed with Flamank and another sophomore, 6-5 Jim Kennedy to form the Tigers' front line.

Steve Dangos is the returning full-time starter and he has worked with junior college transfer Willie Smith to give the Missouri team strength at the guard positions.

They combined for 43 points in the opener and tallied 33 between them in Monday night's contest.

Steward says he is by no means committed to playing strictly a five-man team.

At guard, for example, in addition to Dangos and Smith, they are getting good competition from sophomores Jeff Currie and Scott Sims and impressive freshman Dave Stallman.

"Dangos is a proven shooter and Currie has shown some excellent defensive play," Stewart said. "Sims has displayed some good leadership qualities. In addition, our two newcomers, Smith and Stallman have exhibited outstanding talent and are rapidly becoming familiar with what we are attempting to do.

Kim Anderson has nailed down a starting job, according to Stewart, but it remains to be seen whether he will play forward or center. Pushing him at center is 6-6 junior Ron Pexa.

"I feel convinced that because of the youth involved this year, we'll make some typical freshman-sophomore mistakes," Stewart said. "But I also think this bunch of kids will minimize those errors fairly quickly. We've had some encouraging practices lately.

Since confidence can be very important with a young team, Stewart figures playing the first five games on the home court might be just what the Tigers need.

"If the home court advantage helps us to some early season successes, that could be just the confidence booster a team like ours can use," the coach said. "When you're young, you have a lot more highs and lows, but because of the attitude so far I really think we'll become a lot more consistent before too long."

Asked if he favors the post-season tournament proposed to determine the Big Eight representative in the NCAA tournament, Stewart said, "The way things have been doing I'd be in favor of four tourneys a year. We've always come in to do our best job in the tournament."

Missouri has won the last three Big Eight pre-season tourneys in Kansas City.

It was the regular conference race last winter that did in the Tigers. They tied for last place.

K-State To Eliminate 'Minor Sport' Grants

Manhattan, Kan. (AP) — Kansas State University, faced with rising costs and decreasing revenue, will phase out over the next three years all scholarships for golf, tennis, track and cross country, baseball and wrestling.

Brad Rothermel, assistant athletic director and business manager for K-State, estimated in making the announcement Tuesday that eliminating the scholarships will save the university an estimated $35,000-$40,000 annually.

The Kansas State Athletic Council voted Monday to eliminate the minor sports scholarships. Rothermel said he did not know offhand how many students are currently receiving such assistance.

Rothermel also said the varsity gymnastics program will be eliminated in its entirety at the end of this year.

Rothermel emphasized that students already receiving minor sport scholarship aid will continue to do so until they have graduated.

"Money expended for these scholarships will be channeled elsewhere as the seniors graduate and their scholarships will not be given to someone else," he explained.

Rothermel said slumping attendance at Kansas State football games was partly to blame for the situation.

"If finances improve, there would be consideration for phasing scholarships back in," Rothermel said. "But that's a long-range approach. I would like to think the situation would improve, but I don't foresee it.

"You never know when an invidivual, or several individuals, might step up and put a million dollars in your pocket," he said. "But that's a remote possibility."

Rothermel said Kansas State would still compete in minor sports. The differences will be that those athletes will no longer recieve financial assistance.

Minor sports scholarships generally are shared by two or more students, unlike football or basketball scholarships where the student-athletes receive full financial support.

Rothermel was asked if the cost of expanding women's sports programs was a factor in the athletic council's decision.

"Absolutely not," he said. "This action was taken with men's sports in mind, nothing else."

Huskers Advance In Both Ratings

From News Wires

Nebraska advanced one position in both the Associated Press and United Press International Polls although the Cornhuskers were idle last Saturday.

UPI moved the Huskers into the No. 7 position with 90 points while AP had Nebraska ranked No. 8, only two votes behind No. 7 Penn State.

Nebraska moved ahead of Notre Dame, who was dropped to the No. 8 and 9 spots after suffering a 55-24 drubbing from Southern Cal last Saturday. Notre Dame was rated No. 5 in both polls last week.

Alabama remained the No. 1 team in UPI while Oklahoma stayed atop the AP polls as the college regular season drew to a close last weekend.

For the first, UPI will follow AP's format by holding its final vote after the bowl games. In past years, UPI's final vote came after the finish of the regular season.

Oklahoma is not eligible for voting in the UPI poll because of the Sooners' NCAA probation. UPI voting members passed a new rule this season which does not allow any college team on probation to be rated.

Martin To Appeal

New York (AP) — Frank "Pancho" Martin, one of the nation's leading thoroughbred trainers, was suspended Tuesday by the New York State Racing Wagering Board for 60 days. The board said illegal medications were found during routine tests of two Martin-trained horses.

"I am one-million per cent innocent," said Martin, who vowed to go to State Supreme Court on Wednesday and ask for an injunction against the board's suspension, which is effective Sunday.

The Racing and Wagering Board said the drug Lasex, which is used to control bleeding, was found in the urine of Long Hunt and Oxyphen Butazone, or butazolidin — a muscle relaxant or pain killer — was found in the blood of Corporate Headache.

Long Hunt finished second in the first race at Aqueduct on Nov. 22 and Corporate Headache was third in the fifth race on Nov. 25.

He had 132 winners going into Tuesday's racing program and made it 133 when Black Match won the day's fifth race.

Both Lasex and butazolidin are so-called permissive drugs for treating horses under New York law.

Husker Invite Tops Schedule

The Husker Invitational, set for Feb. 15 at Memorial Stadium's indoor track, highlights Nebraska's 1975 indoor track schedule.

Doane, Nebraska Wesleyan, Kearney State and Nebraska will participate in the meet.

NU Schedule

Feb. 1—at Kansas
Feb. 8—at Michigan State Relays
Feb. 15—Husker Invitational
Feb. 22—Wyoming
Feb. 28—March 1—at Big 8 Championships, Kansas City
March 7-8—at NCAA Championships, Detroit

Anthony Honored

Anthony, from Bellevue, carried the ball 109 times for the Huskers and gained 587 yards for an average of 5.4 yards per carry.

Anthony beat out Elvis Peacock of Oklahoma in the voting of a 24-member selection board. Other freshmen who received votes were Gary Spani, Kansas State linebacker; Zac Henderson, Oklahoma defensive back, and Mike Stensrud, Iowa State defensive tackle.

Lincoln Cage Coaches Seeking to Preserve Quality

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

The cast of characters is different, but Lincoln's prep basketball coaches hope the script stays the same.

Despite a massive turnover in talent, Capital City coaches are striving to preserve high statewide quality this season.

For Lincoln's five high schools, a total of only six starters return.

Fans must re-orient. New names are being offered. The almost entire new cast leaves an obvious question mark: where's the power within the city?

Most assign that power to East, but the assessment puzzles Spartan coach Paul Forch.

He has only one returning starter — guard Karl Voss. The rest of his troops are pretty much untested in varsity competition.

"This could be a real good shooting team," predicts Forch. "Our overall team speed and quickness is better and our guard strength is the best we've had in some time."

Gordon Thiessen is also in line for starting duty in the frontline. Randy Lewis, a 6-6 junior and labeled a good shooter with speed and quickness, is the Spartan pivot.

"This is the biggest rebuilding job we've had in five years," acknowledges Forch. "I think we have some good people. They're pretty physical and they hustle. Those qualities should win some games."

Southeast is accorded considerable pre-season respect from rival coaches. But the Knights suffered a setback last week when returning forward starter Fred Schmid broke his right hand in practice.

He isn't expected to return to the lineup until January. That means senior guard Randy Cipriano will provide most of the leadership in Southeast's bid to become a contender.

Letterman Gary Grace, Cipriano's backcourt mate, also has impressed Southeast coach Wally McNaught in early practices.

"We don't have a great deal of experience. We have a whole inside to develop," notes McNaught. "We'll bank a lot of our strength on our outside abilities.

"But," he adds, "our guards' effectiveness will largely depend on how well our reserves adjust to playing the inside. Our guards will be consistent if no one is able to cheat on them."

According to McNaught, "we have the physical capabilities. What we need is the mental capability to do the job."

Wade Stange and Andy Zobs will start for Southeast at forward with 6-7 junior Dave Griffin and 6-3 senior Don Keller battling for the starting center spot.

John Selko . . . East Forward

Northeast coach Ed Johnson admits he can't remember when he's had four sophomores on his varsity roster.

"I think the most we've had has been two," relates Johnson, who has sophomores Gary Karthauser, Doug Berka, Joe Prai and Bob Butcher on this season's varsity roster.

None has cracked the Rocket starting lineup, but Johnson indicates he expects all to play. "Everyone will get an opportunity," he says. "All are in contention."

Johnson has given an all-senior cast the nod for Friday's season-opening tussle against Southeast. He'll start Doug Neill and Bruce Kuhn at guards, Jeff Weideman and Gary Reid at forwards and Russ Fiala at center.

"Most of these kids can shoot," analyzes Johnson. "It'll depend on how well they rebound and play defense. Things are different this year. These kids are asked to carry the load. You don't really know what to expect.

Poor shooting hurt Lincoln High's bid to compete on even terms last season. Coach Alden Johnson expects improvement this winter.

"We'll put the ball in the basket better," he predicts. "Defensively, we hope to do just as well. We'll be quick and will have to rely on scrappiness and aggressiveness to get the job done.

"I hope we improve physically," adds Johnson. "Last year, we outscored our opponents from the field for the season. But we sent them to the free throw stripe too often."

Charlie Metzger and Ross Krueger are other likely Link starters. Brad Hartshorn, slowed by a foot injury, and Anthony Edington also are in contention.

Pius X coach Don Kelley, whose Thunderbolts are shooting for a second straight state Class B championship, isn't concerned about his team's ability to shoot.

"Our errors are what concerns me," he admits. "Our shooting, rebounding and defense have been respectable for this point of the season. But we haven't shown we can handle the ball."

"This is a different kind of team this year," adds Kelley. "We don't have as much quickness, yet there's a great deal of potential. It's a matter of whether we can get it into position in time where you don't start second guessing yourself."

Kelley has five guards in solid contention for a starting assignment. Most likely, junior Maury Higgins will nail down one berth with Kent Krause and Rick Sullivan the principals in the battle for the other.

Veteran Mitch Ohnoutka and senior non-letterman John O'Neill are the starting forwards and 6-4 senior Mike Peters is the Bolt pivot.

Sorting Out Begins

College basketball is off to a roaring start around the nation and it won't be long before the sorting out will begin of teams that rightfully deserve to be ranked high nationally.

One such game comes up Wednesday night in Lawrence, Kan., when third-rated Indiana opposes Big Eight favorite and seventh-ranked Kansas in the Allen Field House.

Kansas won impressively Monday night over Augustana of South Dakota 85-50 as coach Ted Owens substituted freely in both halves. Ten Kansas players got points.

While the Jayhawks lost only guard Tom Kivisto from the team that finished in fourth place in the NCAA tournament last spring, the visiting Hoosiers have everybody back from a team that tied for the Big Ten championship and went on to win the College Commissioners Association (CCA) tournament in St. Louis.

It is ironical that Kansas never has beaten Indiana in basketball, having dropped two NCAA championship final matches to the Hoosiers, 60-42 in 1940 and 69-68 in 1953. Tonight's game is the fourth of a new series which has seen the Hoosiers win 59-56 and 72-59 in Bloomington and 72-55 in Lawrence.

Kansas has the size necessary to compete against coach Bob Knight's Hoosiers, who start a front line of Kent Benson (6-10), most valuable player in the CCA as a freshman, senior Steve Green (6-6) and junior Scott May (6-7).

Kansas' front line includes 6-8 Norman Cook and 6-9 Donnie Von Moore, both sophomores, and 6-10 senior center Rick Suttle. Jayhawk guards also are monstrous with 6-3 Dale Greenlee teaming with 6-6 Roger Morningstar.

Indiana's top guard is Quinn Bucker, 6-2, a very quick and very tough ball handler. John Laskowski, who is 6-6, is the other guard.

Nebraska may face the Hoosiers in the tournament at Bloomington Dec. 20-21. The Huskers play Southern Methodist in the first round after Indiana meets Creighton in the tournament opener.

Louisville Title Contender

Houston lost a rare home game to what might be a rare University of Louisville basketball team Monday night. Rare, because Louisville coach Denny Crum thinks he has a national championship club.

Crum should know what an NCAA champ looks like because he was assistant to John Wooden at UCLA before going to Louisville three years ago.

Sports Illustrated last week said Louisville is a "cinch winner" of the NCAA title, yet says the 1974-75 season could be "the most wide-open and interesting year since the 1950s."

Here's SI's top 20 picks: 1. Louisville, 2. North Carolina State, 3. Indiana, 4. UCLA, 5. South Carolina, 6. Kansas, 7. Alabama, 8. Penn, 9. Purdue, 10. Southern California, 11. Detroit, 12. Maryland, 13. DePaul, 14. Memphis State, 15. North Carolina, 16. Arizona, 17. Manhattan, 18. Marquette, 19. Arizona State, 20. Boston College.

Arizona State, incidentally, is a possible Nebraska opponent Saturday in the Sun Devil Classic in Tempe, Ariz. Arizona meets Montana in the first round with NU opposing Long Beach State.

The Sun Devils return seven lettermen, including three starters from last year's team which finished 18-9 overall and placed second to Arizona in the Western Athletic Conference.

ASU has an All-American candidate in Lionel Hollins, a 6-3 senior guard who was All-WAC last year after averaging 17.3 points a game.

Nebraska and Arizona State have met once previously in basketball, losing 83-76 to Coach Ned Wulk's team in 1968. Wulk has been guiding the Sun Devils for 24 seasons.

No Surprise: Griffin Victor

NEW YORK (AP) — Archie Griffin, Ohio State's record-smashing running back, won the coveted Heisman Trophy as college football's No. 1 player Tuesday but said he would rather have a national championship to share with his teammates.

"This trophy is not for me, it's for the team," said the soft-spoken junior tailback, who seemed almost bewildered by the cluster of newsmen and the glare of television lights.

"I'd love to win the national championship," he said, "and if trading this award for a win over Michigan State would mean being No. 1 . . . yes, I'd trade it. I'd rather have a national championship, to tell the truth."

Ohio State was No. 1 in The Associated Press rankings most of the season, but fell from the top by losing to Michigan State 16-13 on Nov. 9. The Buckeyes are currently ranked third with one game to go—against Southern California in the Rose Bowl on Jan. 1.

Griffin became only the fifth non-senior to capture the Heisman, winning in a landslide over Southern California senior tailback Anthony Davis. The two will meet in the Rose Bowl for the third year in a row.

The 5-foot-9, 185-pound Griffin received 483 first-place votes—each worth three points—and ,-920 of a possible 2,547 points from a nationwide panel of 849 electors. He was named second on 198 ballots and third on 75 others. The votes were tabulated on a 3-2-1 point basis.

Rounding out the list of top 10 finishers were Michigan quarterback Dennis Franklin, Oklahoma linebacker Rod Shoate—the top lineman in the balloting—Brigham Young quarterback Gary Sheide, Maryland defensive lineman Randy White—the Outland Trophy winner—and California quarterback Steve Bartkowski.

Davis scored four times against Notre Dame on national television Saturday but most of the ballots were in well before that. The official deadline was 9 a.m., EST, Tuesday, but a spokesman for the Downtown Athletic Club, which sponsors the award, said it was obvious some time ago that Griffin was the winner.

Griffin won the voting in each of the country's five regions—East, South, Midwest, Southwest and Far West. Davis finished second and Washington third in the East, South and Far West while Washington was second and Davis third in the Midwest and Southwest.

"I never dreamed about being in this situation right here," Griffin said. "I'm just so happy I'm at a loss for words. When I was young, I dreamed about playing college football, but I never dreamed I'd win the Heisman Trophy."

With the Rose Bowl game and a full senior season to go, Griffin has 4,064 yards rushing, an Ohio State and Big Ten record. More spectacular is his continuing NCAA record of having rushed for more than 100 yards in 22 consecutive games—plus the 1974 Rose Bowl—throughout his sophomore and junior seasons.

This year he led the Buckeyes to a 10-1 regular-season record and totaled 1,620 yards, most among the nation's major colleges. Quite an accomplishment for the once-chubby youngster who was called "Tank" and played offensive guard as a 10-year-old in the Columbus little leagues.

Griffin has six football-playing brothers. James Jr., the eldest son, played at Muskingum College and is an insurance actuary. Larry played at Louisville and works at a state school for boys and Daryl is a senior halfback at Kent State.

Then comes Archie. His backup at tailback for Ohio State is freshman Ray Griffin, the No. 5 son. After him is Duncan, an all-state end-defensive back at Eastmoor High in Columbus, and seventh-grader Keith, 13, who may be the best Griffin of all. There also is 9-year-old sister Crystal.

The other juniors to win the Heisman were Doc Blanchard of Army in 1945, Doak Walker of Southern Methodist in 1948, Vic Janowicz of Ohio State in 1950 and Roger Staubach of Navy in 1963. None was able to repeat as a senior.

"I'm gonna put my best foot forward next year," Griffin said, "and if the voters think I'm good enough to win it again, then I'll win it."

Early Victories Boost Missouri Cage Hopes

Sixth Of A Series

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

Missouri basketball coach Norm Stewart has only one full-time starter back from last season's team, but victories in the fist two games over the weekend have boosted hopes of Tiger followers.

Missouri has shown a lot of scoring punch in whipping Wisconsin-Oshkosh, 95-81 and Rice, 92-67. The next competition will be Friday and Saturday in the "Show-Me Classic" at Columbia, Mo., featuring visiting squads from Portland, Mississippi State and Connecticut.

"We think we can have a good team," Stewart said, but admitted that for the first year in his eight seasons at Missouri he doesn't have a strong, powerful, quality basketball player.

"We don't have a John Brown or an Al Eberhard around any more, but the enthusiasm everyone has displayed has been encouraging," he said.

On the front line, 6-11 Gail Wolf and 6-6 Bill Flamank had the most experience going into pre-season practive, but Wolf underwent knee surgery late in October and probably will miss the entire season. Wolf started 17 games last winter.

Sophomore Kim Anderson, who is 6-8, opened in the pivot in the first two games and teamed with Flamank and another sophomore, 6-5 Jim Kennedy to form the Tigers' front line.

Steve Dangos is the returning full-time starter and he has worked with junior college transfer Willie Smith to give the Missouri team strength at the guard positions.

They combined for 43 points in the opener and tallied 33 between them in Monday night's contest.

Steward says he is by no means committed to playing strictly a five-man team.

At guard, for example, in addition to Dangos and Smith, they are getting good competition from sophomores Jeff Currie and Scott Sims and impressive freshman Dave Stallman.

"Dangos is a proven shooter and Currie has shown some excellent defensive play," Stewart said. "Sims has displayed some good leadership qualities. In addition, our two newcomers, Smith and Stallman have exhibited outstanding talent and are rapidly becoming familiar with what we are attempting to do.

Kim Anderson has nailed down a starting job, according to Stewart, but it remains to be seen whether he will play forward or center. Pushing him at center is 6-6 junior Ron Pexa.

"I feel convinced that because of the youth involved this year, we'll make some typical freshman-sophomore mistakes," Stewart said. "But I also think this bunch of kids will minimize those errors fairly quickly. We've had some encouraging practices lately.

Since confidence can be very important with a young team, Stewart figures playing the first five games on the home court might be just what the Tigers need.

"If the home court advantage helps us to some early season successes, that could be just the confidence booster a team like ours can use," the coach said. "When you're young, you have a lot more highs and lows, but because of the attitude so far I really think we'll become a lot more consistent before too long."

Asked if he favors the post-season tournament proposed to determine the Big Eight representative in the NCAA tournament, Stewart said, "The way things have been doing I'd be in favor of four tourneys a year. We've always come in to do our best job in the tournament."

Missouri has won the last three Big Eight pre-season tourneys in Kansas City.

It was the regular conference race last winter that did in the Tigers. They tied for last place.

K-State To Eliminate 'Minor Sport' Grants

Manhattan, Kan. (AP) — Kansas State University, faced with rising costs and decreasing revenue, will phase out over the next three years all scholarships for golf, tennis, track and cross country, baseball and wrestling.

Brad Rothermel, assistant athletic director and business manager for K-State, estimated in making the announcement Tuesday that eliminating the scholarships will save the university an estimated $35,000-$40,000 annually.

The Kansas State Athletic Council voted Monday to eliminate the minor sports scholarships. Rothermel said he did not know offhand how many students are currently receiving such assistance.

Rothermel also said the varsity gymnastics program will be eliminated in its entirety at the end of this year.

Rothermel emphasized that students already receiving minor sport scholarship aid will continue to do so until they have graduated.

"Money expended for these scholarships will be channeled elsewhere as the seniors graduate and their scholarships will not be given to someone else," he explained.

Rothermel said slumping attendance at Kansas State football games was partly to blame for the situation.

"If finances improve, there would be consideration for phasing scholarships back in," Rothermel said. "But that's a long-range approach. I would like to think the situation would improve, but I don't foresee it.

"You never know when an invidivual, or several individuals, might step up and put a million dollars in your pocket," he said. "But that's a remote possibility."

Rothermel said Kansas State would still compete in minor sports. The differences will be that those athletes will no longer recieve financial assistance.

Minor sports scholarships generally are shared by two or more students, unlike football or basketball scholarships where the student-athletes receive full financial support.

Rothermel was asked if the cost of expanding women's sports programs was a factor in the athletic council's decision.

"Absolutely not," he said. "This action was taken with men's sports in mind, nothing else."

Huskers Advance In Both Ratings

From News Wires

Nebraska advanced one position in both the Associated Press and United Press International Polls although the Cornhuskers were idle last Saturday.

UPI moved the Huskers into the No. 7 position with 90 points while AP had Nebraska ranked No. 8, only two votes behind No. 7 Penn State.

Nebraska moved ahead of Notre Dame, who was dropped to the No. 8 and 9 spots after suffering a 55-24 drubbing from Southern Cal last Saturday. Notre Dame was rated No. 5 in both polls last week.

Alabama remained the No. 1 team in UPI while Oklahoma stayed atop the AP polls as the college regular season drew to a close last weekend.

For the first, UPI will follow AP's format by holding its final vote after the bowl games. In past years, UPI's final vote came after the finish of the regular season.

Oklahoma is not eligible for voting in the UPI poll because of the Sooners' NCAA probation. UPI voting members passed a new rule this season which does not allow any college team on probation to be rated.

Martin To Appeal

New York (AP) — Frank "Pancho" Martin, one of the nation's leading thoroughbred trainers, was suspended Tuesday by the New York State Racing Wagering Board for 60 days. The board said illegal medications were found during routine tests of two Martin-trained horses.

"I am one-million per cent innocent," said Martin, who vowed to go to State Supreme Court on Wednesday and ask for an injunction against the board's suspension, which is effective Sunday.

The Racing and Wagering Board said the drug Lasex, which is used to control bleeding, was found in the urine of Long Hunt and Oxyphen Butazone, or butazolidin — a muscle relaxant or pain killer — was found in the blood of Corporate Headache.

Long Hunt finished second in the first race at Aqueduct on Nov. 22 and Corporate Headache was third in the fifth race on Nov. 25.

He had 132 winners going into Tuesday's racing program and made it 133 when Black Match won the day's fifth race.

Both Lasex and butazolidin are so-called permissive drugs for treating horses under New York law.

Anthony Honored

Anthony, from Bellevue, carried the ball 109 times for the Huskers and gained 587 yards for an average of 5.4 yards per carry.

Anthony beat out Elvis Peacock of Oklahoma in the voting of a 24-member selection board. Other freshmen who received votes were Gary Spani, Kansas State linebacker; Zac Henderson, Oklahoma defensive back, and Mike Stensrud, Iowa State defensive tackle.

Lincoln Cage Coaches Seeking to Preserve Quality

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

The cast of characters is different, but Lincoln's prep basketball coaches hope the script stays the same.

Despite a massive turnover in talent, Capital City coaches are striving to preserve high statewide quality this season.

For Lincoln's five high schools, a total of only six starters return.

Fans must re-orient. New names are being offered. The almost entire new cast leaves an obvious question mark: where's the power within the city?

Most assign that power to East, but the assessment puzzles Spartan coach Paul Forch.

He has only one returning starter — guard Karl Voss. The rest of his troops are pretty much untested in varsity competition.

"This could be a real good shooting team," predicts Forch. "Our overall team speed and quickness is better and our guard strength is the best we've had in some time."

Gordon Thiessen is also in line for starting duty in the frontline. Randy Lewis, a 6-6 junior and labeled a good shooter with speed and quickness, is the Spartan pivot.

"This is the biggest rebuilding job we've had in five years," acknowledges Forch. "I think we have some good people. They're pretty physical and they hustle. Those qualities should win some games."

Southeast is accorded considerable pre-season respect from rival coaches. But the Knights suffered a setback last week when returning forward starter Fred Schmid broke his right hand in practice.

He isn't expected to return to the lineup until January. That means senior guard Randy Cipriano will provide most of the leadership in Southeast's bid to become a contender.

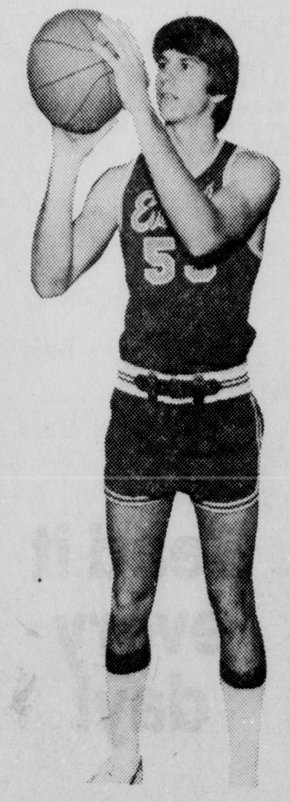
Letterman Gary Grace, Cipriano's backcourt mate, also has impressed Southeast coach Wally McNaught in early practices.

"We don't have a great deal of experience. We have a whole inside to develop," notes McNaught. "We'll bank a lot of our strength on our outside abilities.

"But," he adds, "our guards' effectiveness will largely depend on how well our reserves adjust to playing the inside. Our guards will be consistent if no one is able to cheat on them."

According to McNaught, "we have the physical capabilities. What we need is the mental capability to do the job."

Wade Stange and Andy Zobs will start for Southeast at forward with 6-7 junior Dave Griffin and 6-3 senior Don Keller battling for the starting center spot.



John Selko . . . East Forward

Northeast coach Ed Johnson admits he can't remember when he's had four sophomores on his varsity roster.

"I think the most we've had has been two," relates Johnson, who has sophomores Gary Karthauser, Doug Berka, Joe Prai and Bob Butcher on this season's varsity roster.

None has cracked the Rocket starting lineup, but Johnson indicates he expects all to play. "Everyone will get an opportunity," he says. "All are in contention."

Johnson has given an all-senior cast the nod for Friday's season-opening tussle against Southeast. He'll start Doug Neill and Bruce Kuhn at guards, Jeff Weideman and Gary Reid at forwards and Russ Fiala at center.

"Most of these kids can shoot," analyzes Johnson. "It'll depend on how well they rebound and play defense. Things are different this year. These kids are asked to carry the load. You don't really know what to expect.

Poor shooting hurt Lincoln High's bid to compete on even terms last season. Coach Alden Johnson expects improvement this winter.

"We'll put the ball in the basket better," he predicts. "Defensively, we hope to do just as well. We'll be quick and will have to rely on scrappiness and aggressiveness to get the job done.

"I hope we improve physically," adds Johnson. "Last year, we outscored our opponents from the field for the season. But we sent them to the free throw stripe too often."

Charlie Metzger and Ross Krueger are other likely Link starters. Brad Hartshorn, slowed by a foot injury, and Anthony Edington also are in contention.

Pius X coach Don Kelley, whose Thunderbolts are shooting for a second straight state Class B championship, isn't concerned about his team's ability to shoot.

"Our errors are what concerns me," he admits. "Our shooting, rebounding and defense have been respectable for this point of the season. But we haven't shown we can handle the ball."

"This is a different kind of team this year," adds Kelley. "We don't have as much quickness, yet there's a great deal of potential. It's a matter of whether we can get it into position in time where you don't start second guessing yourself."

Kelley has five guards in solid contention for a starting assignment. Most likely, junior Maury Higgins will nail down one berth with Kent Krause and Rick Sullivan the principals in the battle for the other.

Veteran Mitch Ohnoutka and senior non-letterman John O'Neill are the starting forwards and 6-4 senior Mike Peters is the 'Bolt pivot.

Wolfpack Prevails, 111-68

ASHEVILLE, N. C. (AP) — Senior David Thompson exploded for 42 points Tuesday night as top-ranked North Carolina State's basketball team defeated intrastate opponent University of North Carolina-Asheville, 111-68.

Thompson scored his highest single-game varsity total as he led the Wolfpack to its second win in two starts this season. N. C. State Coach Norm Sloan used his entire squad in the game.

Four other State players scored in double figures. Forward Phil Spence added 18 points from under the basket and 5-foot-5 guard Monte Towe chalked up 12 points, mostly on 30-foot bombs.

Randy Pallas of UNC-Asheville was the game's top rebounder with 13 while State's Spence grabbed 11 rebounds.

The loss gave UNC-Asheville a 1-2 record for the season.

SMU Outlasts North Texans

DENTON, Tex (AP) — Rusty Bourquein scored a two-pointer with 1:27 remaining and Southern Methodist held off a North Texas rally to post an 89—87 nonconference basketball victory Tuesday night.

North Texas pulled within one point on a free throw by Dwight Mitchell with 30 seconds left in the game, but then the Mustangs stalled and guard Jeff Ralph pumped in a free throw with only two seconds to go.

Bourquein led all scorers with 24 points and nine rebounds. Guard John Sagehorn and reserve Bob Arnold contributed 18 and 17 points, respectively. North Texas freshman Kenny Williams pulled down 20 rebounds and scored 16 points.

Bellevue Rips Midland, 91-67

Riley scored 29 and Smith 25 as they opened up the contest with about 10 minutes left in the first half.

Bellevue shot 55 per cent and Midland 34 per cent. Mark Witte was high for Midland with 20 points.

SE Tech Hits CNTC, 94-81

HASTINGS, Neb. (AP)—Southeast Community College of Fairbury used its size, speed and four men in double figures Tuesday night to dump hosting Central Nebraska Tech 94-81, despite a 36-point performance by Tech forward Randy Blase, a 6-3 performer from Hordville.

Blase got only 10 points in the first stanza, but came burning back with 26 points in the second half.

The Rams stayed close to the visiting Bombers until the last two minutes of the first half when Southeast moved out to a 44-29 advantage.

Guard Terry Douglas led the Southeast scoring parade with 23 markers, while Steve Harris added 14. Ron Parker and Tom Cairns each chipped in with 11 as the Bombers won their second in three outings.

Platte College Topples York

YORK, Neb. (AP)—Platte College, led by forward Bob Sundvold and guard Tim Williams, overcame a halftime deficit to defeat York 78-72 Tuesday night.

Sundvold scored 25 points and Williams 15, 13 in the second half. Dick Jernigan was high for York with 22.

Bradley Crushes Cyclones

PEORIA, Ill. (AP)—Mike Davis scored 26 points and Greg Smith 22 Tuesday night as Bradley roared to an easy 93-72 victory over Iowa State.

The Cyclones' All-Big Eight conference guard Hercle Ivy led Iowa State with 22 points but he could manage only four in the second half.

Iowa State had five point leads twice in the first half with the last coming at 32-27 before Bradley took a 40-38 halftime lead.

Bradley ripped off 20 points to four for Iowa State at the start of the second half to build a 60-44 lead which never was threatened.

Bradley's biggest lead was 88-60 with 3:35 left in the game.

MU Coaching Trio Leaving

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Mel Sheehan, University of Missouri athletic director, said Tuesday the announced departure of three assistant football coaches had nothing to do with the team's won-lost record.

Earlier Tuesday the MU athletic department announced that the contracts of Ron Snyder, Jim Anderson and Bob Warmack would not be renewed past the March 1, 1975 expiration date.

"We think very highly of them," Sheehan said of the three. He added that MU head coach Al Onofrio had discussed the situation individually with each man before the decisions were made.

Sheehan was interviewed in Kansas City where he was attending Big Eight Conference meetings.

"Each man is in a different individual situation," he said.

Snyder, 30, and Anderson, 27, are former Missouri linemen. Warmack quarterback the University of Oklahoma team from 1966-68.

Warmack was an assistant coach at Oklahoma for a short time before coming to Missouri as quarterback coach three years ago. Snyder has been coaching interior defensive linemen at MU for four years and Anderson has been the freshman-junior varsity coach three years.

"We are trying to strengthen our staff, of course," Sheehan said.

"But it would certainly be erroneous for anyone to view this as dismissals. These are three individual young men with different aspirations. In one instance, a man wants to get out of coaching altogether."

Sheehan said the school has no replacements for the three in mind at this time.

Wolfpack Prevails, 111-68

ASHEVILLE, N. C. (AP) — Senior David Thompson exploded for 42 points Tuesday night as top-ranked North Carolina State's basketball team defeated intrastate opponent University of North Carolina-Asheville, 111-68.

Thompson scored his highest single-game varsity total as he led the Wolfpack to its second win in two starts this season. N. C. State Coach Norm Sloan used his entire squad in the game.

Four other State players scored in double figures. Forward Phil Spence added 18 points from under the basket and 5-foot-5 guard Monte Towe chalked up 12 points, mostly on 30-foot bombs.

Randy Pallas of UNC-Asheville was the game's top rebounder with 13 while State's Spence grabbed 11 rebounds.

SE Tech Hits CNTC, 94-81

HASTINGS, Neb. (AP)—Southeast Community College of Fairbury used its size, speed and four men in double figures Tuesday night to dump hosting Central Nebraska Tech 94-81, despite a 36-point performance by Tech forward Randy Blase, a 6-3 performer from Hordville.

Blase got only 10 points in the first stanza, but came burning back with 26 points in the second half.

The Rams stayed close to the visiting Bombers until the last two minutes of the first half when Southeast moved out to a 44-29 advantage.

Guard Terry Douglas led the Southeast scoring parade with 23 markers, while Steve Harris added 14. Ron Parker and Tom Cairns each chipped in with 11 as the Bombers won their second in three outings.

Central Tech is winless in four tries.

Platte College Topples York

YORK, Neb. (AP)—Platte College, led by forward Bob Sundvold and guard Tim Williams, overcame a halftime deficit to defeat York 78-72 Tuesday night.

They led a rally that erased a three-point halftime lead for York and tied the score at 60-all with eight minutes left.

Sundvold scored 25 points and Williams 15, 13 in the second half. Dick Jernigan was high for York with 22.

Bradley Crushes Cyclones

PEORIA, Ill. (AP)—Mike Davis scored 26 points and Greg Smith 22 Tuesday night as Bradley roared to an easy 93-72 victory over Iowa State.

The Cyclones' All-Big Eight conference guard Hercle Ivy led Iowa State with 22 points but he could manage only four in the second half.

Iowa State had five point leads twice in the first half with the last coming at 32-27 before Bradley took a 40-38 halftime lead.

Bradley ripped off 20 points to four for Iowa State at the start of the second half to build a 60-44 lead which never was threatened.

Bradley's biggest lead was 88-60 with 3:35 left in the game.

MU Coaching Trio Leaving

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Mel Sheehan, University of Missouri athletic director, said Tuesday the announced departure of three assistant football coaches had nothing to do with the team's won-lost record.

Earlier Tuesday the MU athletic department announced that the contracts of Ron Snyder, Jim Anderson and Bob Warmack would not be renewed past the March 1, 1975 expiration date.

"We think very highly of them," Sheehan said of the three. He added that MU head coach Al Onofrio had discussed the situation individually with each man before the decisions were made.

Sheehan was interviewed in Kansas City where he was attending Big Eight Conference meetings.

"Each man is in a different individual situation," he said.

Snyder, 30, and Anderson, 27, are former Missouri linemen. Warmack quarterback the University of Oklahoma team from 1966-68.

Warmack was an assistant coach at Oklahoma for a short time before coming to Missouri as quarterback coach three years ago. Snyder has been coaching interior defensive linemen at MU for four years and Anderson has been the freshman-junior varsity coach three years.

"We are trying to strengthen our staff, of course," Sheehan said.

"But it would certainly be erroneous for anyone to view this as dismissals. These are three individual young men with different aspirations. In one instance, a man wants to get out of coaching altogether."

Sheehan said the school has no replacements for the three in mind at this time.

Major Trades Spice Baseball Meetings

NEW ORLEANS (AP5 — Baseball's winter meeting marketplace erupted with major deals Tuesday that included three of the game's top names—Dick Allen, Tug McGraw and Lee May.

But the Houston Astros think they've come away with the best player in the bunch, highly-regarded minor leaguer Rob Andrews.

"He's the best young second baseman in the minor leagues, Houston General Manager Spec Richardson said after getting Andrews and first baseman-outfielder Enos Cabell from Baltimore in exchange for May and minor league outfielder Jay Schleuter.

Atlanta purchased the rights to Allen, who has announced his retirement from the Chicago White Sox for a nominal sum, reported to be $5,000. The Braves will also send a player to the White Sox if they can convince Allen to report to Atlanta.

McGraw went to Philadelphia in a six-player swap that brought center fielder Del Unser to the New York Mets. Outfielders Don Hahn and Dave Schneck also moved to the Phillies in that one, with the Mets acquiring left-hander Mac Scarce and rookie catcher John Sterns.

Andrews was the International League's All-Star second baseman at Rochester where he batted .306 last season. The year before that, he won the Southern Association batting title with a .309 average at Asheville. "He might be the best young player in the game today," said Richardson.

Dick Allen
Goes To Atlanta

To get him, the Astros surrended May, who hit .268 with 24 homers and 85 runs batted in for Houston last season and has averaged 32 homers and 98 RBI since 1969.

"He'll be our first baseman," said Orioles General Manager Frank Cashen. "We came here looking for a slugging first baseman and that's what we got."

Atlanta had the same idea and the Braves hoped they accomplished their target when they purchased the controversial Allen from Chicago.

Allen, the American League's Most Valuable Player in 1972, led the league in homers with 32 last season despite playing in only 128 games. He left the White Sox Sept. 14, saying he was finished with baseball.

Since then, Allen has expressed a change of heart and has said he would like to return, but White Sox Manager Chuck Tanner said the 32-year-old star's September walkout ended his stay in Chicago.

"Second place meant money and third place meant money when he left," said Tanner. "It would be tough for him to play with our guys after what happened. I think if he came back to the White Sox, it would take something away from the team."

Tanner said he believed Allen would agree to play for Atlanta. Eddie Robinson, the Braves' vice president, hopes so.

Allen has a career batting average of .300 in 12 major league seasons dotted with controversy. He has played for Philadelphia, St. Louis and Los Angeles in addition to the White Sox, and is eighth among active major leaguers in career home runs with 319.

All of Allen's 32 homers last year were hit by mid-August. He was the American League's starting first baseman in the All-Star Game but, characteristically, he was almost late, arriving only minutes before the game began and exclaiming, "Game time is on time."

McGraw is a complete contrast to Allen. Always happy-go-lucky, he coined the familiar phrase "You Gotta Believe" that the Mets rode to the National League pennant in 1973. He set a club record with 27 saves in 1972 but managed only three last season when he had a 6-11 record and a 4.15 earned run average.

"We hope McGraw can bounce back," said Phils' Manager Danny Ozark. "Relief pitchers sometimes have years like that."

Unser, who batted .264 for the Phillies, will likely inherit the vacant Met centerfield job. "He's a good defensive outfielder and that's what we were after," said New York Manager Yogi Berra.

EHD Deer Disease Found

White-tailed deer in several parts of Nebraska were killed by disease during October and early November, but the outbreak has now run its course, according to the Game and Parks Commission:

The cause of the die-off was Epizootic Hemorrhagic Disease (EHD), an ailment that strikes only white-tailed deer, but does not affect livestock, man or other animals.

There is no known cure for EHD once it has been contracted. Typically, an outbreak occurs in late fall and is halted by a hard freeze. The disease seems closely associated with areas where the deer herd is large. Game biologists believe the EHD is present in the deer population all the time but outbreaks do not take place until the right conditions occur.

This fall, Game and Parks Commission personnel examined 42 dead whitetails in the Albion-Cedar Rapids area, 6 in the Cozad-Lexington area, 1 near Loup City, and 2 above Lake McConaughy. Numerous others were reported. Game biologists expect no more losses this year, since EHD is believed spread by an insect that is eliminated by a hard freeze.

Duck Season To Close

Waterfowl hunting comes to a halt in Nebraska on Dec. 8, with the closure of goose hunting statewide, and the end of duck hunting in the eastern portion of the state.

Western duck hunters have been idle since Nov. 7, but they are looking forward to December 14 when the season reopens in the west through Jan. 3.

The seasons established in the August Commission meeting provided for a straight season in the eastern portion of the state and a split season in the west. The goose season was the same throughout the state, as federal guidelines allowed virtually no options.

Fambrough Skips 'Lame Duck Year'

Lawrence, Kan. (UPI) — Don Fambrough formally resigned Tuesday as head football coach at the University of Kansas rather than go through what would have amounted to a lame duck season.

Fambrough, 52, had one year to go on a three-year contract and was told the contract would not be renewed at this time.

Fambrough and athletic director Clyde Walker, the man who in effect fired him, faced an emotion-charged news conference.

Walker said Fambrough never was told the contract would not be renewed at the end of next season, but that the decision was made that it wouldn't be done at this time.

"Yes, I would say it was a one-man decision," Walker said. "It had the approval of chancellor (Archie) Dykes, but I'm certainly willing to let the buck stop with me."

Fambrough served 23 years as an assistant, 19 at Kansas, before taking over the head coaching job in 1971. His four seasons produced a 19-25-1 record with the 1973 team going to the Liberty Bowl and posting a 7-4-1 mark.

"Under these conditions, I think this was the time to resign," Fambrough said. "Thinking about the program and other things, this was the time for me to make the decision."

Fambrough said he was in "perfect health" and was not resigning for that reason. Fambrough will remain in the Kansas athletic department in some capacity, but will not be a member of the coaching staff.

Walker said he would begin searching immediately for a new head coach after Fambrough recommended assistant Jim Dickey, the defensive coordinator.

"I'm looking for the best football coach available in the country," Walker said. "I'm certainly willing to pay whatever is necessary to get the top head man."

Fambrough said he never asked for an extension of his current contract, adding, "to be perfectly honest, I expected it a year ago. But I didn't ask for it at that time either."

Kansas opened this fall with a 4-1 record and knocked off Texas A&M, 28-10, when the Aggies were ranked No. 4 nationally.

But the next week Nebraska scored a 56-0 humiliation in a game that proved to be the beginning of the end for Fambrough. The Jayhawks lost their last six contests, including a 27-3 finale against arch-rival Missouri.

Al Onofrio of Missouri, who also just finished his fourth season and started as head coach at the same time Fambrough did, now is the dean of Big Eight coaches.

Major Trades Spice Baseball Meetings

NEW ORLEANS (AP5 — Baseball's winter meeting marketplace erupted with major deals Tuesday that included three of the game's top names—Dick Allen, Tug McGraw and Lee May.

But the Houston Astros think they've come away with the best player in the bunch, highly-regarded minor leaguer Rob Andrews.

"He's the best young second baseman in the minor leagues, Houston General Manager Spec Richardson said after getting Andrews and first baseman-outfielder Enos Cabell from Baltimore in exchange for May and minor league outfielder Jay Schleuter.

Atlanta purchased the rights to Allen, who has announced his retirement from the Chicago White Sox for a nominal sum, reported to be $5,000. The Braves will also send a player to the White Sox if they can convince Allen to report to Atlanta.

McGraw went to Philadelphia in a six-player swap that brought center fielder Del Unser to the New York Mets. Outfielders Don Hahn and Dave Schneck also moved to the Phillies in that one, with the Mets acquiring left-hander Mac Scarce and rookie catcher John Sterns.

In another deal of somewhat lesser significance, California acquired veteran utilityman Bill Sudakis from the New York Yankees in exchange for right-hander Skip Lockwood.

Andrews was the International League's All-Star second baseman at Rochester where he batted .306 last season. The year before that, he won the Southern Association batting title with a .309 average at Asheville. "He might be the best young player in the game today," said Richardson.

To get him, the Astros surrended May, who hit .268 with 24 homers and 85 runs batted in for Houston last season and has averaged 32 homers and 98 RBI since 1969.

"He'll be our first baseman," said Orioles General Manager Frank Cashen. "We came here looking for a slugging first baseman and that's what we got."

Atlanta had the same idea and the Braves hoped they accomplished their target when they purchased the controversial Allen from Chicago.

Allen, the American League's Most Valuable Player in 1972, led the league in homers with 32 last season despite playing in only 128 games. He left the White Sox Sept. 14, saying he was finished with baseball.

Since then, Allen has expressed a change of heart and has said he would like to return, but White Sox Manager Chuck Tanner said the 32-year-old star's September walkout ended his stay in Chicago.

"Second place meant money and third place meant money when he left," said Tanner. "It would be tough for him to play with our guys after what happened. I think if he came back to the White Sox, it would take something away from the team."

Tanner said he believed Allen would agree to play for Atlanta. Eddie Robinson, the Braves' vice president, hopes so.

"We came here looking for a strong right-handed hitter and I don't know a better one," said Robinson. "He's one powerful hitter."

Allen has a career batting average of .300 in 12 major league seasons dotted with controversy. He has played for Philadelphia, St. Louis and Los Angeles in addition to the White Sox,, and is eighth among active major leaguers in career home runs with 319.

All of Allen's 32 homers last year were hit by mid-August. He was the American League's starting first baseman in the All-Star Game but, characteristically, he was almost late, arriving only minutes before the game began and exclaiming, "Game time is on time."

McGraw is a complete contrast to Allen. Always happy-go-lucky, he coined the familiar phrase "You Gotta Believe" that the Mets rode to the National League pennant in 1973. He set a club record with 27 saves in 1972 but managed only three last season when he had a 6-11 record and a 4.15 earned run average.

"We hope McGraw can bounce back," said Phils' Manager Danny Ozark. "Relief pitchers sometimes have years like that."

Unser, who batted .264 for the Phillies, will likely inherit the vacant Met centerfield job. "He's a good defensive outfielder and that's what we were after," said New York Manager Yogi Berra.

Fambrough Skips 'Lame Duck Year'

Lawrence, Kan. (UPI) — Don Fambrough formally resigned Tuesday as head football coach at the University of Kansas rather than go through what would have amounted to a lame duck season.

Fambrough, 52, had one year to go on a three-year contract and was told the contract would not be renewed at this time.

Fambrough and athletic director Clyde Walker, the man who in effect fired him, faced an emotion-charged news conference.

Walker said Fambrough never was told the contract would not be renewed at the end of next season, but that the decision was made that it wouldn't be done at this time.

"Yes, I would say it was a one-man decision," Walker said. "It had the approval of chancellor (Archie) Dykes, but I'm certainly willing to let the buck stop with me."

Fambrough served 23 years as an assistant, 19 at Kansas, before taking over the head coaching job in 1971. His four seasons produced a 19-25-1 record with the 1973 team going to the Liberty Bowl and posting a 7-4-1 mark.

"Under these conditions, I think this was the time to resign," Fambrough said. "Thinking about the program and other things, this was the time for me to make the decision."

Fambrough said he was in "perfect health" and was not resigning for that reason. Fambrough will remain in the Kansas athletic department in some capacity, but will not be a member of the coaching staff.

Walker said he would begin searching immediately for a new head coach after Fambrough recommended assistant Jim Dickey, the defensive coordinator.

"I'm looking for the best football coach available in the country," Walker said. "I'm certainly willing to pay whatever is necessary to get the top head man."

Fambrough said he never asked for an extension of his current contract, adding, "to be perfectly honest, I expected it a year ago. But I didn't ask for it at that time either."

Kansas opened this fall with a 4-1 record and knocked off Texas A&M, 28-10, when the Aggies were ranked No. 4 nationally.

But the next week Nebraska scored a 56-0 humiliation in a game that proved to be the beginning of the end for Fambrough. The Jayhawks lost their last six contests, including a 27-3 finale against arch-rival Missouri.

Al Onofrio of Missouri, who also just finished his fourth season and started as head coach at the same time Fambrough did, now is the dean of Big Eight coaches.

Students Mostly 'Blow It' In Glassblowing

By PATTY BEUTLER
Star Staff Writer

"I blew it!" a young voice echoed through the room.

And though a glassblowing class was in session, you could tell by the disappointed tone that the words were hardly a sign of success.

"Way too thin, huh?" another youngster queried, as he hurried back to his propane torch for another attempt at melting the glass rod into shape.

Although there were more failures than successes for the 15 Meadow Lane 5th and 6th graders taking this beyond-the-school-day art class, no one was giving up.

Try, Try Again

"For the umpteenth time I will try it again," one young student sighed in never-say-die style.

Part of the support art programs for the Lincoln elementary schools, glassblowing is one of 11 mini courses offered to interested students during six cycling period at different schools throughout the school year. The month-long program at Meadow Lane recently ended.

"Oh, it stinks in here!" one industrious glassblower said wrinkling up her nose as she rotated a glass rod over the smelly flame.

Miniature Swans

Only in their third glassblowing class, the young craftsmen were working the delicate material into miniature swans whould be filled with blue-colored water when finished.

"The head fell off — it got heated too much," lamented Antia Koch, who had finally mastered a successful bubble in the glass.

At one time or another through the hour and a half session, most of the novices could be found licking burned fingers. They learned the lesson of not touching hot glass the hard way.

"I blew too hard and it turned out to be a kidney bean instead of a swan's head," Pamela Dorn giggled at her own miscreation.

When he wasn't blowing glass, Mike Otis managed some pretty fair size bubbles with his chewy pink gum.

"How do you like my failure?" Dede Whitford asked, as she held up a misshapen swan. "That's what I call an awkward goose," she giggled.

Swan In Reverse

What was supposed to be the beak turned out too big, but Dede didn't despair. She simply turned the beak into the body — "It's almost as good" — and continued with her swan in reverse.

"By the time I get done with this thing, I'll be over 100 years old," she could be heard saying to herself as she set to work at the flame once again.

Some fingers couldn't escape the splinters of broken glass.

Blistered with burns and pricked with pieces of glass, Nancy Sherrill was having little success as the class drew to a close. But she shook her head and stuck with it.

As her classmates filed out the door, a determined Nancy added the last touches to her finally finished swan. But as she carried the piece to show to her teacher, what was to have been a birthday present for her 7-year-old sister, slipped to the floor and shattered beyond repair.

Even the thought of making bigger and better swans next session couldn't stem the swelling tears in this disappointed youngster's eyes.

Pension Reform 'Step In Right Direction'

With its fair share of pitfalls, the new pension reform legislation is still the first step in the right direction, tax lawyer Harry Lamon Jr. of Atlanta, Ga., said.

Lamon was in Lincoln Tuesday to explain the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 to a capacity crowd of attorneys and accountants attending the Great Plains Federal Tax Institute.

Words of advice and caution to the audience accompanied Lamon's account of the new legislation enacted by Congress this past September.

In an interview, Lamon stressed that the prescribed reforms are certainly beneficial to the employe.

The law now requires employers to furnish employes with an annual report describing the provisions of their benefit plan so they can plainly understand what they have.

Among other affirmatives of the act, Lamon spoke of favorable increased self-employed people can now set aside — up to 15% of their earned income or $7,500. Previous limits were 10% of earned income or $2,500.

Another change allows for a maximum annual deduction of up to $1,500 or 15% of compensation which a person can put into an individual retirement account.

However, Lamon criticized the legislation for going "too far" in the area of plan termination insurance. He said the provisions will place such a tremendous responsibility on employers that many will opt for setting up fewer plans.

Lamon warned his audience of some tremendous traps in the new law. "You have to die in this thing and be reborn in the midnight oil over the next few months before you can understand it," he said.

Lamon, who was involved in the lobbying to pass the act, observed that "our laws in this country are written by people and special interest groups." He advised his listeners — "if you don't want to be written out of the laws, you'd better be part of something.

"I don't say it (the pension reform act) is perfect," Lamon joked, "because I didn't draft it. But I was able to get some things out of it that would have made it worse."

Faculty Senate Eyes Guideline Committee

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln Faculty Senate will be asked Tuesday to form a special committee to propose guidelines for faculty participation in all decisions affecting curriculum, student instruction and research.

Sociology Prof. James C. Kimberly last month suggested the Faculty Senate study all faculty involvement in governing UNL, and at the senate's direction, he wrote the proposal to develop the guidelines.

The Faculty Senate will consider appointing the ad hoc committee at 3 p.m. in Love Library auditorium on the UNL city campus.

In his proposal, Kimberly said the faculty should share maximum responsibility with the UNL administration and NU Regents to attain educational goals, including decisions on financing as well as content.

Any guildelines developed, Kimberly said, should ensure that all faculty to be affected by any decisions would be informed of deliberations well in advance and be provided with information on proposed results before a final decision is made. He also suggested administration officials contribute to drafting the guildelines.

The move to clarify faculty governance stems from concern that the faculty was overlooked in contributing significantly to the revision of UNL's five-year plan "Toward Excellence."

The final revision will be distributed Wednesday, followed by a UNL hearing on Dec. 11. The regents will act on the final draft at their Dec. 14 Lincoln meeting.

The plan designates certain academic departments as UNL "Areas of Excellence," providing special funds to attain specific goals. Kimberly said it will "serve primarily as the major criteria in the new UNL evaluation plan."

That, he said, "reaches down to the departmental level and makes information concerning many facets of departmental operation matters of public knowledge. This increases the dangers of misinterpretation of activities for which faculty are primarily responsible."

UNL Facutly Senate President Richard E. Gilbert, chemical engineering professor, said an hour beginning at 4 p.m. in the Tuesday meeting will be reserved exclusively for discussion of the five-year plan. Unfinished business, if any, will be held over for completion in a special meeting Dec. 17 at 4 p.m. in Love Library.

Faculty Senate members Tuesday will also hear reports from the intercollegiate athletics, human rights, liaison, scholarships and financial aids, and central planning committees.

Students Mostly 'Blow It' In Glassblowing

By PATTY BEUTLER
Star Staff Writer

"I blew it!" a young voice echoed through the room.

And though a glassblowing class was in session, you could tell by the disappointed tone that the words were hardly a sign of success.

"Way too thin, huh?" another youngster queried, as he hurried back to his propane torch for another attempt at melting the glass rod into shape.

Although there were more failures than successes for the 15 Meadow Lane 5th and 6th graders taking this beyond-the-school-day art class, no one was giving up.

Try, Try Again

"For the umpteenth time I will try it again," one young student sighed in never-say-die style.

Part of the support art programs for the Lincoln elementary schools, glassblowing is one of 11 mini courses offered to interested students during six cycling period at different schools throughout the school year. The month-long program at Meadow Lane recently ended.

"Oh, it stinks in here!" one industrious glassblower said wrinkling up her nose as she rotated a glass rod over the smelly flame.

Miniature Swans

Only in their third glassblowing class, the young craftsmen were working the delicate material into miniature swans whould be filled with blue-colored water when finished.

"The head fell off — it got heated too much," lamented Antia Koch, who had finally mastered a successful bubble in the glass.

At one time or another through the hour and a half session, most of the novices could be found licking burned fingers. They learned the lesson of not touching hot glass the hard way.

"I blew too hard and it turned out to be a kidney bean instead of a swan's head," Pamela Dorn giggled at her own miscreation.

When he wasn't blowing glass, Mike Otis managed some pretty fair size bubbles with his chewy pink gum.

"How do you like my failure?" Dede Whitford asked, as she held up a misshapen swan. "That's what I call an awkward goose," she giggled.

Swan In Reverse

What was supposed to be the beak turned out too big, but Dede didn't despair. She simply turned the beak into the body — "It's almost as good" — and continued with her swan in reverse.

"By the time I get done with this thing, I'll be over 100 years old," she could be heard saying to herself as she set to work at the flame once again.

Some fingers couldn't escape the splinters of broken glass.

Blistered with burns and pricked with pieces of glass, Nancy Sherrill was having little success as the class drew to a close. But she shook her head and stuck with it.

As her classmates filed out the door, a determined Nancy added the last touches to her finally finished swan. But as she carried the piece to show to her teacher, what was to have been a birthday present for her 7-year-old sister, slipped to the floor and shattered beyond repair.

Even the thought of making bigger and better swans next session couldn't stem the swelling tears in this disappointed youngster's eyes.

Pension Reform 'Step In Right Direction'

With its fair share of pitfalls, the new pension reform legislation is still the first step in the right direction, tax lawyer Harry Lamon Jr. of Atlanta, Ga., said.

Lamon was in Lincoln Tuesday to explain the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 to a capacity crowd of attorneys and accountants attending the Great Plains Federal Tax Institute.

Words of advice and caution to the audience accompanied Lamon's account of the new legislation enacted by Congress this past September.

In an interview, Lamon stressed that the prescribed reforms are certainly beneficial to the employe.

The law now requires employers to furnish employes with an annual report describing the provisions of their benefit plan so they can plainly understand what they have.

Among other affirmatives of the act, Lamon spoke of favorable increased self-employed people can now set aside — up to 15% of their earned income or $7,500. Previous limits were 10% of earned income or $2,500.

Another change allows for a maximum annual deduction of up to $1,500 or 15% of compensation which a person can put into an individual retirement account.

However, Lamon criticized the legislation for going "too far" in the area of plan termination insurance. He said the provisions will place such a tremendous responsibility on employers that many will opt for setting up fewer plans.

Lamon warned his audience of some tremendous traps in the new law. "You have to die in this thing and be reborn in the midnight oil over the next few months before you can understand it," he said.

Lamon, who was involved in the lobbying to pass the act, observed that "our laws in this country are written by people and special interest groups." He advised his listeners — "if you don't want to be written out of the laws, you'd better be part of something.

"I don't say it (the pension reform act) is perfect," Lamon joked, "because I didn't draft it. But I was able to get some things out of it that would have made it worse."

Faculty Senate Eyes Guideline Committee

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln Faculty Senate will be asked Tuesday to form a special committee to propose guidelines for faculty participation in all decisions affecting curriculum, student instruction and research.

Sociology Prof. James C. Kimberly last month suggested the Faculty Senate study all faculty involvement in governing UNL, and at the senate's direction, he wrote the proposal to develop the guidelines.

The Faculty Senate will consider appointing the ad hoc committee at 3 p.m. in Love Library auditorium on the UNL city campus.

In his proposal, Kimberly said the faculty should share maximum responsibility with the UNL administration and NU Regents to attain educational goals, including decisions on financing as well as content.

Any guildelines developed, Kimberly said, should ensure that all faculty to be affected by any decisions would be informed of deliberations well in advance and be provided with information on proposed results before a final decision is made. He also suggested administration officials contribute to drafting the guildelines.

The move to clarify faculty governance stems from concern that the faculty was overlooked in contributing significantly to the revision of UNL's five-year plan "Toward Excellence."

The final revision will be distributed Wednesday, followed by a UNL hearing on Dec. 11. The regents will act on the final draft at their Dec. 14 Lincoln meeting.

The plan designates certain academic departments as UNL "Areas of Excellence," providing special funds to attain specific goals. Kimberly said it will "serve primarily as the major criteria in the new UNL evaluation plan."

That, he said, "reaches down to the departmental level and makes information concerning many facets of departmental operation matters of public knowledge. This increases the dangers of misinterpretation of activities for which faculty are primarily responsible."

UNL Facutly Senate President Richard E. Gilbert, chemical engineering professor, said an hour beginning at 4 p.m. in the Tuesday meeting will be reserved exclusively for discussion of the five-year plan. Unfinished business, if any, will be held over for completion in a special meeting Dec. 17 at 4 p.m. in Love Library.

Faculty Senate members Tuesday will also hear reports from the intercollegiate athletics, human rights, liaison, scholarships and financial aids, and central planning committees.

c. Electrical Contract

Each bid shall be accompanied by an acceptable Bid Bond, payable to the Nebraska State Fair Board, Lincoln, Nebraska, in the amount of five percent of the total bid submitted as a guarantee that, if awarded the Contract, the bidder will promptly enter into a Contract and execute such Bonds as may be required. If Bid Security is not received with the proposal, the bid will not be considered.

All bids shall be made on the printed Proposal Form to be made a part of the Contract Documents.

All bids shall remain in effect for a period of 30 days after the scheduled closing time for the receipt of bids.

The successful bidder to whom a Contract is to be awarded shall provide a "Performance Bond" and "Labor and Material Payment Bond", a double form of bond issued as "A.I.A. Form A-311", a standard form of the American Institute of Architects. Bond shall be in the amount of 100 percent of the Contract.

The Owner shall not be obligated, in connection with submitted bids, arbitrarily to award the Contract for the construction of the project to the lowest bidder, but shall reserve the right to reject any and all bids, or to waive any informality in any proposal it deems advisable, and to award the Contract to the bidder which, in its opinion, is most desirable.

The project must be completed on or before July 1, 1975.

Plans and specifications may be inspected at the Office of the Architects; the Lincoln Builders Bureau, 507 "J" Street, Lincoln, Nebraska; the F. W. Dodge Corporation, Room 208, Pacific Plaza, 7301 Pacific Street, Omaha, Nebraska; and the Omaha Builders Bureau, 2565 St. Mary's Avenue, Omaha, Nebraska.

Plans and specifications may be obtained from the Architects and Engineers upon payment of $25.000 deposit for the first set. Deposit for the first set will be returned to bidders upon return of plans and specifications in good condition within a period of 10 days after the opening of bids. The $25.00 deposit shall be forfeited by the prospective bidder who does not submit a bid, unless the plans and specifications are returned to the Office of the Architects and Engineers four days prior to the date of bid opening. Additional sets of plans and specifications may be purchased from the Architect and Engineer's office upon payment of $25.00 per set, non-refundable. Individual sheets of drawings and specification may be purchased from the Architect and Engineer for the cost of reporduction.

FROZEN FOOD FIESTA

Party Planning

by Helen Davis, Hinky Dinky Home Economist

Feeding a crowd can often seem an insurmountable task for a homemaker accustomed to preparing meals only for the family. But somehow the holidays always seem to call for parties and extra entertaining.

Food is usually the mainstay of a party. It can be as simple or as complicated as you want it to be. Planning ahead is the key to a successful party, a relaxed hostess and happy guests.
